National Thrift Week

January 17 to 23

THE National Thrift Week Committee has fittingly chosen to celebrate January 17, the birthday of Franklin, who was the greatest American apostle of thrift, by making it the first day of Thrift Week. Each day of that week is assigned its special feature. Monday (Franklin Day) is to be National Thrift Day, and emphasis will be placed on starting bank accounts and regular savings installments. Tuesday will be devoted to the budget idea for personal and household expenses, Wednesday to taking out insurance policies, Thursday to urging the desirability of owning a home, Friday to making a will (which, it is hoped, will lead household heads to see the desirability of creating an estate), Saturday to the paying of debts so as to start out with a clean slate, and Sunday to sharing with others.

The Public Library suggests the following books and public documents in its collection as appropriate and helpful collateral reading.

Books on Thrift and Investment

DELIVERY ROTUNDA

The Henry E. Legler Regional Branch

THE first of the group of regional or key branches planned for erection in the several grand divisions of the city was opened on Chicago Day, October 9th, 1920. It is fitly named after the late librarian, Henry E. Legler, whose untimely death in 1917 deprived the Library of a great chief and the city of a valuable servant. The building, illustrated above, and on the front cover of this issue, is probably the handsomest branch library building in America. It was built at a cost of nearly $200,000, this amount being reserved out of the annual revenue for three years, since, unfortunately, the Chicago Public Library has no separate building fund and has never enjoyed the favor of wealthy benefactors.

The Henry E. Legler Branch is situated on Crawford Avenue (40th Avenue), occupying the full block from Monroe Street to Wilcox Avenue. The building itself is 180 feet long and 80 feet deep, and consists of two principal stories and a capacious basement. Two main reading rooms, each 65 by 30 feet, provide accommodations for adult and juvenile readers respectively; a special story-hour room for children is included, with a separate entrance, and ample space for special study groups and for all forms of library extension work is available in the beautiful rooms on the second floor. A book stack with capacity of 60,000 volumes carries the main collection, which is supplemented by book-cases on the reading room walls. That the new branch has already won its way into the favor of its constituency is shown by the statistics of books borrowed for home reading, which has attained the astonishing average of 7,000 volumes per week.

Books Added to the Library

Books marked * do not circulate; those with the letter P are in the Art room, and those marked Doc. are in the Document department. *Ser. represents serials which do not circulate.

GENERAL WORKS

Bibliography

Biscay Province (Spain). Biblioteca de la Excma. Diputación. Ensayo de un catálogo de la Sección vascongada, por Darío de Areitio, con un prologo de don Carmelo de Echegaray. Autores. 1919. *O 2364
An author catalogue of the Basque section.

Landor, Walter Savage. WISE, THOMAS JAMES, and WHEELER, STEPHEN. A bibliography of the writings in prose and verse of Walter Savage Landor. 1919. *O 2319

PHILOSOPHY

Dewey, John. Reconstruction in philosophy. 1920. L 12941

The author believes that the philosophy of the future will clarify our ideas with regard to moral and social conflicts, and will deal with the moral influences which direct man's search for happiness into saner channels rather than with theoretical discussions of "absolute reality."

Marden, Orison Swett. You can, but will you? 1920. L 14112
Another inspirational book containing essays on right living.

Mecklin, John M. An introduction to social ethics; the social conscience in a democracy. 1920. L 14121

The best thing about the book is its repeated insistence upon a positive and creative conception of democracy.—H. Neumann in Survey.

Proceedings of the 15th International Congress against alcoholism. 1920. L 14535

Santayana, George. Character and opinion in the United States; with reminiscences of William James and Josiah Royce, and academic life in America. 1920. L 14692

Seven lectures addressed to British audiences by a former Harvard professor of philosophy, of whom the New Republic says: "A clearer-sighted or wiser observer never wrote about America, nor has any observer written of America with greater friendliness and sympathy."

—Little essays drawn from the writings of George Santayana, by Logan Pearsall Smith, with the collaboration of the author. 1920. L 14777

The editor has collected extracts which the author has rearranged and reconstructed into a "miniature of the original edifice" from which they are taken. The subjects are religion, human nature, art and poetry, poets and philosophers, and materialism and morals.

Solovyof, Vladimir. The justification of the good; an essay on moral philosophy. 1918. L 14143

(Constable's Russian library.)

The book in which Solovyof elucidates the laws of the higher idealism. It is a classical work of the utmost importance in Russian studies. All that is positive in modern Russian thought springs from the teaching of Solovyof.—Editor's note.

RELIGION

Gee, Howard James. Methods of church school administration. 1920. M 8255

Hastings, James, and others, ed. Dictionary of the Apostolic church. 1919. 2 v. *R 1514

This monumental work is a dictionary in an unfamiliar sense—not of words, but of the doctrines and practices of the church, its usages in worship, its sacraments, its sufferings, and its attitude to the world at large. Upwards of ninety scholars—European, Canadian, American—have collaborated in the work.—Outlook.

SOCIAL SCIENCES

Economics

Bowley, Arthur L. The division of the product of industry; an analysis of national income before the war. 1919. L 16684

Contents: Introduction.—Population in 1911.—The aggregate income of the population of the United Kingdom, 1911.—The national wages bill, 1911.—Wages, salaries, and profits in the principal industries, 1907.—Summary and conclusions.

Carlton, Frank Tracy. Elementary economics; an introduction to the study of economics and sociology. 1920. L 16685

A simple enough treatment to serve as a text for secondary schools. Economic questions are discussed from different angles, to enable the student to form independent opinions on the every-day problems of rents, wages, transportation, prices, markets, taxation, banking, etc.

Rees, J. F. A social and industrial history of England, 1815–1918. 1920. L 16683

Belongs to that excellent and uncommon sort which, professing no more than a concise recital of admitted historic fact, contrives to make mere exposition more suggestive than comment.—Times (London).

Labor

Foster, William Z. The great steel strike, and its lessons. 1920. L 17223

This book by the labor official in command of the strike enables us to follow the methods of a vast organizing campaign from the start, and to form an opinion of the strength and weakness of unions. It defends the A. F. of L. against the criticism of the radicals who think it unable to cope with the situation.

Lattimore, Eleanor L., and Trent, Ray S. Legal recognition of industrial women. 1919. L 20984

Presents many phases of labor legislation, social insurance, hours of labor, a fair living wage, safety, sanitation, health, collective bargaining, all in the nature of a survey rather than an exhaustive study. —Booklist.

Williams, Whiting. What's on the worker's mind, by one who put on overalls to find out. 1920. L 16981

Socialism, Guilds

Beer, Max. A history of British socialism. 1919-20. 2 v. L 17564

Mr. Beer had spent many years in England as London correspondent of the Vorwaerts, and his book displays not only the fruits of deep and patient research into the history of popular movements . . . but a surprising mastery of the English language. —Times (London).

Hobson, S. G. National guilds and the state. 1920. L 17882

A discussion of the relations between producer, consumer and the state, written from the standpoint of the national guild, which the author thinks an inevitable development. He is somewhat at variance with Mr. G. D. H. Cole on the structure of the state.

Lenin, N., pseud. of V. I. Ulianov. The state and revolution: Marxist teaching on the state and the task of the proletariat in the revolution. 1919. L 17602

An attempt to justify himself as the one true disciple of Marx. . . This book may be regarded as a kind of vade mecum for the true Bolshevik; in it he will find not only the true doctrine, but all the snares into which the heretics from the true faith have fallen. —Times (London).

Income Tax

Harris, H. Archibald. Federal tax procedure; six addresses before the Illinois Manufacturers' Cost Association. 1920. L 17753

Contents: Tax procedure.—Deductions.—Income.—Invested capital.—Depreciation.—Obsolescence, amortization and allied subjects.

Political Science

Corwin, Edward S. The Constitution and what it means today. 1920. L 18015

Prof. Corwin's purpose in this book is not merely to explain the "original intentions of the founders of our government, but to show what in the course of time the constitution has come to mean and does actually mean today" (The Review).

Forman, S. E. The American democracy; a text in government for use in high schools, academies and normal schools. 1920. L 18374

Heatley, D. P. Diplomacy and the study of international relations. 1919. L 16336

Kerlin, Robert T., comp. The voice of the negro, 1919. 1920. L 16177

A compilation of clippings made from over fifty negro newspapers and magazines during the four months following the Washington riot, dealing with political and social conditions of the race.

Practical Sociology

Sheffield, Ada Eliot. The social case history; its construction and content. 1920. L 18784

(Social work series.)

Education

Burgess, W. Randolph. Trends of school costs. 1920. L 20047

(Russell Sage foundation education monographs.)

Koos, Leonard V. The junior high school. 1920. L 19814

A careful presentation of both sides of the Junior High School movement, including methods now in use and suggestions as to improvement in the present system, by a professor of secondary education in the University of Minnesota.

Mansbridge, Albert. An adventure in working-class education; being a story of the Workers' Educational Association, 1903-1915. 1920. L 19854

An account of a significant educational movement by its originator. He says it was the natural outgrowth of the educational effort of the nineteenth century, spreading rapidly over the country, and tells how it expects to meet the greater opportunities for service which the war has revealed.

Pettit, Walter W. Self-supporting students in certain New York city high schools. 1920. L 20064

(Studies in social work.)

An interesting survey report of the work performed by pupils, its relation to the school work and plans for the future, and the uses to which they put the money received, together with an account of the cooperation between schools and workshops and recommendations for scholarships.

Radice, Sheila, (Mrs. A. Hutton Radice). The new children; talks with Dr. Maria Montessori. 1920. L 19528

The author is an admirer and disciple of Mme. Montessori and gives an outline of her system of teaching, emphasizing her insight into child psychology. Mrs. Radice believes that "with a full recognition and adoption of the Montessori methods, the psycho-analyst's vocation will be gone."

Strayer, George Drayton, and Engelhardt, N. L. The classroom teacher at work in American schools. 1920. L 19551

(American education series.)

Wray, W. J., and Ferguson, R. W., ed. A day continuation school at work; papers by twelve contributors. 1920. L 19873

Myths and Legends

Alexander, Hartley Burr. Latin-American mythology. 1920. *R 3470,11

(The mythology of all races.)

Native Indian myths of Mexico and Central and South America following the same line of treatment as in the author's former contribution on North American Mythology.

Weston, Jessie L. From ritual to romance. 1920. L 21184

An analysis of the origin and development of all the separate elements combining to form the Grail story.

LANGUAGE

Wyld, Henry Cecil. A history of modern colloquial English. 1920. J 4431

A generally readable account of the story of colloquial English, from 1400 onwards.—Times (London).

USEFUL ARTS

Medicine

Ash, Edwin Lancelot. The problem of nervous breakdown. 1920. N 2244

A commonsense work on a subject which is of universal interest.—Times (London).

Bishop, Louis Faugères. Heart troubles; their prevention and relief. 1920. N 1746

A sane understandable book written for the layman. The author believes that in diseases affecting the heart "the educated patient can help more when wisely advised than in almost any other disease."

Buck, Albert H. The dawn of modern medicine: an account of the revival of the science and art of medicine which took place in western Europe during the latter half of the eighteenth century and the first part of the nineteenth. 1920. N 1210

Petroleum register; an annual directory and statistical record of the petroleum industry in the United States, Canada and Mexico. 1919. *R 3690

Shelved in Civics Dept.

Telephone guide for the building industries of Chicago; complete list of architects, contractors, engineers and material manufacturers and dealers, arranged alphabetically and under their respective association headings. 1920. *R 3693

Wheelwright, William Bond. Essential facts about paper. 1920. K 25827

Witham, G. S., Sr. Modern pulp and paper making; a practical treatise. 1920. K 25828

The author is the manager of a large paper corporation and is able to discuss in a practical manner all the processes employed in the production of paper, as well as details with regard to the plant and material.

FINE ARTS

Drawing and Engraving

Brooks, Alfred Mansfield. From Holbein to Whistler; notes on drawing and engraving. 1920. K 29328

A study of the principles of etching and engraving, of the development of this art since the beginning of line engraving in Italy, and of representative pictures of unquestioned merit. Ease and dignity mark the style.—Booklist.

Langhanke, O. L. Elementary show card writing; primary lessons in the art of show card writing and their practical application, for use in colleges, high schools, and for self-instruction. 1919. K 28727

Photography, Motion Pictures

Hammond, Arthur. Pictorial composition in photography. 1920. K 29452

A beautifully illustrated volume giving the photographer as much practical help in the way of rules for composition as is possible in a line of work which is so largely dependent on the personal equation.

New York Institute of Photography. A condensed course in motion picture photography, with special chapters by specialists of the research laboratories of the Eastman Kodak Company. 1920. K 29554

Music

Brower, Harriette. Self-help in piano study; practical lessons in piano technic and plain talks with piano teachers and students. 1920. K 29903

Gordon, L. M. The modern school orchestra and its development; the string choir, the brass choir, the woodwind choir, instruments of percussion; a book for conductors of school or community orchestra. 1919. K 29966

Kitson, C. H. Elementary harmony. 1920. K 29723

Victor Talking Machine Company. Music appreciation for little children, in the home, kindergarten and primary schools; designed to meet the needs of the child mind during the sensory period of development; to be used with the Victrola and Victor records. 1920. K 29675

Woods, Glenn H. Public school orchestras and bands. 1920. K 29897

Recreation

Indoor Games

Capablanca, J. R. My chess career. 1920. K 30363

A meteoric chess career outlined by the player himself, with illuminating comments on his own and his adversary's play.

Irwin, Florence. Master-auction; auction for those who know it. 1920. K 30431

Wolcott, Theresa Hunt, ed. The book of games and parties for all occasions. 1920. K 30242

Outdoor Sports

Christy, Bayard H. Going afoot; a book on walking. 1920. K 30536

Vigorous hiking and climbing are urgently prescribed, together with proper care of feet and body, and secrets of proper dress.

Smith, O. W. Casting tackle and methods. 1920. K 30848

A free and easy book, full of authentic information given with the jocular assurance of the long-experienced angler. It could become a reference manual to the beginner in the subtle art of casting; and it could not fail to be a delight to the enthusiast.—Bookman.

LITERATURE

Duclaux, Madame Mary. Twentieth century French writers (reviews and reminiscences). 1920. J 5365

Contents: Maurice Barrès.—Romain Rolland.—Edmond Rostand.—Paul Claudel.—Francis Jammes.—René Boylesve.—André Gide.—Charles Péguy.—Ernest Psichari.—Emile Nolly.—Henri Barbusse.—Georges Duhamel.—The Countess de Noailles.—Madame Colette.—Madame Tinayre.—Mademoiselle Marie Lenéru.—The pastoral novel.—The novel of childhood.—Epilogue.

Madame Duclaux has chosen the writers who are characteristic of the very newest schools, including both popular authors and those known to the intellectuals. The Boston Transcript calls this "a brilliant and scholarly volume, arriving as it does when we need the stimulus and example of these French modernists."

Mais, S. P. B. Books and their writers. 1920. J 6366

Contents: Preface.—Novelists and novels: Introductory; Compton Mackenzie; Norman Douglas; Frank Swinnerton; Stephen McKenna; Jane Austen; Clemence Dane; Dorothy Richardson.—Poetry and poets: Introductory; J. C. Squire; Siegfried Sassoon; Robert Nichols; Dora Sigerson; Chinese poetry.—Books in general: Eminent Victorians; Trivia; "8" as critic; Alice Meynell as critic; Lafcadio Hearn; Sir Edward Cook; Set down in malice; The humour of "Saki"; Women.

The author disclaims being a critic, but writes with enthusiasm of his favorite authors and books.

Poetry

Collections

Frothingham, Robert, ed. Songs of dogs; an anthology. 1920. E 14336

A collection of the best poems written about dogs, grouped under three headings: The friend of man, In lighter vein, and The happy hunting grounds.

Jackson, A. V. Williams. Early Persian poetry, from the beginnings down to the time of Firdausi; with ten illustrations. 1920. J 4929

This book aims to give the main outlines of the earlier periods and the characteristics of individual poets by means of translations from their works.

Maynard, Theodore, comp. and ed. A tankard of ale; an anthology of drinking songs. 1920. E 14335

The collection contains the cream of jolly songs, prefaced by an introduction bewailing the triumph of the teetotaler.

Pagan. A second Pagan anthology, containing poems that have appeared in the Pagan magazine. 1919. E 14333

Trotter, Jacqueline T. ed. Valour and vision; poems of the war, 1914–1918. 1920. E 14348

She has been at pains to collect the best, not the immediately sensational or surprising. Her scheme of arrangement—a chronological one reflecting the changing phases and moods of those four years—is admirable. Every campaign has its celebrants.—London Mercury.

Poetry by Individual Authors

Aiken, Conrad. The house of dust; a symphony. 1920. E 14449

Mr. Aiken "has striven to make tangible to us the intangible substance of our lives." This book is an achievement in conveying the half-lights of shifting impalpable dreams while here and there a few lovely lights and colors are floated before our eyes.

Bradford, Gamaliel. A prophet of joy. 1920. E 10665

A modern novel in sprightly rhymed octaves which C. W. Stork writing in the Literary Review says is "not an imitation but a vital incarnation of the Byronic satire, proving that modern life may be dressed in an ancient mode at least as effectively as in the fashions of the hour."

Brown, Abbie Farwell. Heart of New England. 1920. E 10699

She has not the concern of many modern poets with individualistic reactions; she interprets the great forces that stir bodies of men to action—love, law, right and wrong.—Boston Transcript.

Courthope, William John. The country town, and other poems. 1920. E 14551

A memorial volume to a beloved Oxford professor of poetry. The London Times says that Courthope's verse combines the spirit of Chaucer and Spenser with the language and form of Pope and Goldsmith.

Freeman, John. Memories of childhood, and other poems. 1919. E 14672

The London Mercury considers this one of the two most notable volumes produced by the younger poets, the other being Brett Young's Poems, E 11719 (see below).

Gibson, Wilfrid Wilson. Neighbours. 1920. E 10952

Gregory, Padric. Old world ballads. 1913. E 10986

Lincoln, Elliott C. Rhymes of a homesteader. 1920. E 14821

Jingling homespun verse giving good pictures of Montana farm life.—Booklist.

Masefield, John. Right Royal. 1920. E 14861

A vivid tale in verse of a horse race won by Right Royal the "dark bay." It is similar in theme and atmosphere to his hunting poem "Reynard the Fox," and is full of life and light and color.

Powell, Charles. The poets in the nursery; with an introduction by John Drinkwater. 1920. E 11412

Parodies of well known poets based on the Mother Goose nursery rhymes. Fourteen of them originally appeared in the Manchester Guardian, the remaining six appear now for the first time.

Robinson, Edwin Arlington. The three taverns; a book of poems. 1920. E 14966

A collection of short poems written during the last few years, five of the longer ones being based on historical episodes. The Bookman says of Mr. Robinson's poetry that "the feeling of pity and compassion never borders the sentimental; the nature of it is always wisdom and understanding."

Teasdale, Sara. Flame and shadow. 1920. E 15044

We must acknowledge a growth in artistry. Her rhythms are much more subtle, more accurate psychologically than they used to be. . . These lyrics have the lilt of absolute naturalness which is sincere and perfect music.—New York Times.

Untermeyer, Louis. The new Adam. 1920. E 15085

A frank expression of the modern poet's conception of love—a conception which is as far removed from the overspiritualized attitude of the Victorian poets as it is from the overemphasized brutality of the French realists.—Publishers' note.

Wilkinson, Marguerite. Bluestone; lyrics. 1920. E 15112

These lyrics, more touching than inspiring, contain a decidedly poetic element.

Young, Francis Brett. Poems, 1916-1918. 1919. E 11719

All his deepest feelings—patriotism, love, friendship—are interwoven with natural beauty. . . His simplicity of expression conceals a good deal of technical effort.—London Mercury.

Drama

Bahr, Hermann. The master; adapted for the American stage by Benjamin F. Glazer. 1918. E 13481

Bates, Esther Willard. A pageant of Pilgrims, setting forth the historical story and interpreting the vital significance of their ideals and actions of all man-kind; to be presented by churches, schools, colleges or communities. 1920. E 13482

Bierstadt, Edward Hale, ed. Three plays of the Argentine: Juan, Moreira, Santos Vega, The witches' mountain. 1920. E 13501

Contents: Juan Moreira; a national drama of life on the pampas, by Silverio Manco.—Santos Vega; a poetic evocation of the legend of the famous minstrel of the pampas, by Luis Bayón Herrera.—The witches' mountain (La montaña de brujas); a tragedy, by Julio Sánchez Gardel.

However primitive the plays, they possess what our American drama strives in vain to discover, the soul of their native land.—D. Graffy in Nation.

Brighouse, Harold. Three Lancashire plays: The game, The northerners, Zack. 1920. E 13513

"The game," while seeming to be about football, is really about parents and children. The second play deals with the introduction of machine looms and is full of vivid interest both historically and as portraying the struggle between character and ideals. "Zack," a character comedy, though very actable, is not such good reading.

Gregory, Lady. The dragon; a wonder play in three acts. 1920. E 12276

The play is a rollicking comedy of a wilful princess, an irate father and the prince who enters the castle in the guise of a cook, kills the dragon that threatens the life of the princess, and claims her for his bride.

O'Neill, Eugene G. Thirst, and other one-act plays. 1914. E 14165

(American dramatists series.)
Contents: Thirst.—The web.—Warnings.—Fog.—Recklessness.

Rolland, Romain. Liluli, with thirty-two wood engravings by Frans Masereel. 1920. E 14219

A satire on life expressed in symbols. The human race is marching across a footbridge over a ravine to a new ideal world. The bridge collapses and humanity falls into the abyss, while on top of the debris sits Liluli (Illusion) smiling—the hope for the future.

Essays

Bennett, Arnold. Our women; chapters on the sex-discord. 1920. L 20963

It is delightful, provocative, and exasperatingly illogical. . . Being witty, human and full of challenging contradictions, it will bore no reader, but will interest everyone, if only for the sake of that argument dear to every mind.—Bookman.

Gass, Sherlock Bronson. A lover of the chair. 1919. E 3060

The title is a subtle rebuff of that active, acquisitive, aggressive Americanism which is strenuously of the hour and so little to Mr. Gass's taste. . . Formally the book is made up of the passing show—politics, art, thought, from the quiet of the observer's chair.—New Republic.

Goldring, Douglas. Reputations; essays in criticism. 1920. J 6365

Contents: James Elroy Flecker.—Three Georgian novelists, Compton Mackenzie, Hugh Walpole, Gilbert Cannan.—The later work of D. H. Lawrence.—Mr. Wells and the war.—The war and the poets.—An outburst on Gissing.—The author of "Tarr."—The Gordon Selfridge of English letters.—Reading "On wines."—Clever novels.—1855.—Low tastes.—Looking back.

His comments on the intellectual life of England are exceedingly worth while and his marginal notes, those paragraphs that embroider his critical articles, are extremely valuable. The reader knows definitely where he stands.—New York Times.

Harper, George McLean. John Morley and other essays. 1920. J 4735

Contents: John Morley.—Michelangelo's sonnets.—The fame of Victor Hugo.—Balzac's Human comedy.—An American critic: W. C. Brownell.—Wordsworth at Blois.—Wordsworth's love poetry.—David Brainerd; a Puritan saint.

Lucas, E. V. Adventures and enthusiasms. 1920. E 4362

A collection of short essays on a variety of subjects and in a vein of humor resembling Lamb's. The book impresses you, according to the New York Times, "with its feeling of leisure, of the fullness of time, of the charm of idleness."

Maynard, Theodore. Carven from the laurel tree. 1919. E 4451

Contents: The mystical note in poetry.—Mysticism and the Oxford Poetry Book.—The humour of the saints.—Sanctity and the sanitary inspector.—On drinking songs.—The art of Alice Meynell.—The drama of the dramatists.—The revival of English poetry.—Poets' prose.—The guild idea.—'Roman and Utopian More.'—This green plot shall be our stage.—A secret England.

Park, J. Edgar. The bad results of good habits, and other lapses. 1920. E 5183

Wholesome and rather amusing homilies by a Congregational minister apparently addressed to narrow pietistic readers who need convincing that there is beauty and mystery in life, as well as a moral side. The author has good sense and kindness behind his flippancy, and a good style.

Replier, Agnes. Points of friction. 1920. E 5454

Contents: Living in history.—Dead authors.—Consolations of the conservative.—The cheerful clan.—The beloved sinner.—The virtuous Victorian.—Woman enthroned.—The stray prohibitionist.—Money.—Cruelty and humour.

A keen and clever presentation of the intellectual conservative point of view, whether the subject be history, spiritualism, temperament, or morals.

Scoville, Samuel, Jr. Everyday adventures. 1920. K 21776

Contents: Everyday adventures.—Zero birds.—Snow stories.—A runaway day.—The raven's nest.—Hidden treasure.—Bird's-nesting.—The treasure hunt.—Orchid hunting.—The marsh dwellers.—The seven sleepers.—Dragon's blood.

Essays describing personal experiences with birds and other forms of natural life arising from the recreations of a public-spirited and open-minded lawyer.

Public Speaking

Donnelly, Francis P. The art of interesting; its theory and practice for speakers and writers. 1920. J 7114

Kleiser, Grenville. Something to say and how to say it. 1920. J 7112

—Successful methods of public speaking. 1919. J 7113

Humor

Cannan, Gilbert. Windmills; a book of fables. 1920. E 2141

Contents: Samways Island.—Ultimus.—Gynecologia.—Out of work.

Considering their history we cannot help admiring the prophetic insight of Mr. Cannan's fables. Upon the outbreak of the war they were condemned and suppressed, although their keen satire had been received with approval when they first appeared.

Cobb, Irvin S. The abandoned farmers; his humorous account of a retreat from the city to the farm. 1920. E 2359

BIOGRAPHY

Aldrich, Mrs. Thomas Bailey. Crowding memories. 1920. C 20544

Mrs. Aldrich had the opportunity of knowing intimately such personages as Edwin Booth, Howells, Mark Twain, Browning, Whistler, Mrs. Howe, and Dickens, and her reminiscences are entertaining, as are all similar scrap-book anecdotal collections, and at the same time well written.

Asquith, Mrs. Margaret Tennant. Margot Asquith, an autobiography. 1920. 2 v. C 20646

Letters and conversations as recorded in the author's diary afford intimate glimpses of leading lights in England. Her own personality is revealed through her reactions to the friends she discusses. She makes no attempt to disguise her impressions, but presents her facts with absolute sincerity in a sparkling and vivacious style.

Carnegie, Andrew. Autobiography. 1920. C 21164

It is a charming self-revealing character sketch of "the iron-master," told with simplicity and unaffectedness. His reminiscences of notables on both sides of the Atlantic are both entertaining and instructive.

Chapin, Charles. Charles Chapin's story written in Sing Sing prison; with an introduction by Basil King. 1920. C 21195

The autobiography of an American newspaper man, who is serving a life term for the murder of his wife. His story reveals much of thrilling interest in the newspaper business and enlists the reader's sympathy throughout.

Clemens, Samuel Langhorne. PAINE, ALBERT BIGELOW. A short life of Mark Twain. 1920. C 21293

Abridged from Mark Twain—a biography, C 21280

Holland, Henry Scott. A forty years' friendship; letters from the late Henry Scott Holland to Mrs. Drew, ed. by S. L. Ollard. 1919. C 22459

Letters during the time from 1876 to 1918 written by the Canon of St. Paul's to Mary Gladstone Drew. They treat of personal and literary matters and are of interest intrinsically and in connection with Gladstone.

Kilmer, Joyce. KILMER, ANNIE KILBURN. Memories of my son, Sergeant Joyce Kilmer; with numerous unpublished poems and letters. 1920. C 22768

Mitford, Mary Russell. HILL, CONSTANCE. Mary Russell Mitford and her surroundings. 1920. C 23418

As an introduction to Miss Mitford's work and personality Miss Hill's book is an admirable achievement. It presents the woman perfectly and brings before the reader again the age wherein she lived.—New York Times.

Normandy, Robert Curthose, Duke of. DAVID CHARLES WENDELL. Robert Curthose, duke of Normandy. 1920. B 2260, 25
(Harvard historical studies.)

Roosevelt, Theodore. LEARY, JOHN J., Jr. Talks with T. R. 1920. C 23971

These are extracts from the diary of a veteran newspaper man who had carefully recorded his conversations with Theodore Roosevelt for many years. The Boston Transcript calls it "a wonderfully readable book about a wonderful personality."

TRAVELS AND DESCRIPTION

Bland, J. O. P. Men, manners and morals in South America. 1920. I 11166

Probably the study of nationalities and the tangled South American race problems is the most illuminating study in the volume, because so woefully little is known of those acute race differences which make men Brazilians, Argentines and Uruguayans. As a source of information for students, this book will prove most helpful.—New York Times.

Gibbs, Philip. People of destiny; Americans as I saw them at home and abroad. 1920. I 4324

Sir Philip chatters delightfully about the America he has seen, which is principally upper New York. He mingles praises with kindly criticism and thinks the main obstacle to our highest influence lies in the conspicuous gulf between our rich and poor.

Greenbie, Sydney. Japan, real and imaginary. 1920. I 10692

A direct and fearless opinion of the people of Japan and their customs by an American who has kept a careful record of his impressions for the last two years. The Dial regards it as the best book on Japan from the standpoint of fact that has been written by an American for some time.

Hale, Louise Closser. An American's London. 1920. I 10380

Mrs. Hale has painted with deft strokes pictures of the changing city that met her eye at every turn. And she has interpreted these pictures in their full significance perhaps more illuminatingly than any Londoner could do. . . . Its pages are lightened by a sprightly sense of humor.—New York Times.

Hamilton, Lord Frederick. The vanished pomps of yesterday; being some random reminiscences of a British diplomat. 1920. I 11251

Duty or inclination took him to India, Portugal, Brazil, Canada and Japan . . . but it is his pictures of the three great courts [Berlin, Vienna, Petrograd] whose pomps have been so tragically revealed as vanities, that make his book timely and absorbing.—Times (London).

Peck, J. M. The traveler's directory for Illinois; containing accurate sketches of the state, a particular description of each county, and important business towns, a list of the principal roads, stage and steamboat routes, land offices, tracts of land unoccupied, a description of the timbered and prairie portions of the state, the rivers, minerals, animals, internal improvements, climate and seasons, the whole intended as a companion to the new sectional map of Illinois. 1839. *I 4353

Sherard, Robert Harborough. My friends the French, with discursive allusions to other people. 1909. I 11900

Wharton, Edith. In Morocco. 1920. I 8955

With the French government's permission and guidance, Mrs. Wharton was able to enjoy a most unusual and fascinating holiday which she here records for us. Motoring from Tangier to Marrakech, from Rabat to Tez, this "Arabian nights" country was revealed to her in all its ancient picturesqueness and color.

HISTORY

Gallagher, Patrick. America's aims and Asia's aspirations. 1920. A 7121

An experienced journalist with a vivacious style here covers the entire peace conference in a very readable manner. He thinks Japan won Shantung because of Wilson's inability to adhere to his originally pro-Chinese position.

Laudyn, Stephanie. A world problem: Jews, Poland, humanity; a psychological and historical study . . . tr. from Polish. 1920. A 2683

From the anti-Semitic viewpoint with reference to the history of Poland.

Magnus, Leonard A. Roumania's cause and ideals. 1917. A 5255

Short historical sketches of Roumania, Transylvania and Bessarabia and a rather complete discussion of the grievances and negotiations with Austria which justified entrance into the war.—Booklist.

Nekludoff, A. Diplomatic reminiscences before and during the world war, 1911-1917. 1920. A 5966

M. Nekludoff was a representative of the Czar in Sofia and Stockholm and later ambassador for the provincial government of Russia in Madrid. His eventful experiences with a government now extinct enable him to reveal to us facts which under other conditions would still be diplomatic secrets.

European War

Bassett, John Spencer. Our war with Germany; a history. 1919. A 7124

Carefully studied and judiciously written, this book is sure to be one of the useful authorities.—Nation.

Frothingham, Thomas G. A guide to the military history of the world war, 1914-1918. 1920. A 7120

The object of the book is to give a general perspective of the war from a military and strategic point of view.—Book Review Digest.

Hamilton, Sir Ian. Gallipoli diary. 1920. 2 v. A 7118

The chief attraction of this book is its characterizations of famous men like Kitchener, Churchill and others, its satire on politics. Its bits of brilliant description, its sense of historical romance, its flights of prose poetry, its fine atmospheric effects.—Times (London).

Hungerford, Edward. With the doughboy in France; a few chapters of an American effort. 1920. A 7127

Johnston, M. A. B., and Yearsley, K. D. Four-fifty miles to freedom. 1920. A 7125

Price, Julius M. On the path of adventure; illustrated with jottings from the author's sketch book and a map. 1919. A 7126

A narrative of the writer's own experiences in the war.

Tuohy, Ferdinand. The secret corps; a tale of "Intelligence" on all fronts. 1920. A 7119

Captain Tuohy draws striking pictures, based on his own experience, of spy and counter-spy work, of the relentless cross-examination of prisoners, of easy chats with refugees, of the deliberate dissemination of false information intended to reach the enemy.—London Times.

The Indians

Kellogg, Laura Cornelius, (Wynnogene). Our democracy and the American Indian; a comprehensive presentation of the Indian situation as it is today. 1920. B 5388

FICTION

Bailey, Temple. The trumpeter swan. 1920. F 10798

A light entertaining novel written in charming style.

Bindloss, Harold. The wilderness mine. 1920. F 11137

A Canadian adventure story.

Blasco Ibáñez, Vicente. The enemies of women (Los enemigos de la mujer). 1920. F 11238

A picture of life at Monte Carlo during the last period of the war. It is an intensive study of the futility and immorality of gambling.

Cohen, Octavus Roy. Come seven. 1920. F 12053

More of the author's inimitable negro stories which have appeared in the Saturday Evening Post.

Couperus, Louis. The inevitable. 1920. F 12171

An emotional Italian story and a satire on feminism.

Douglas, O. Penny plain. 1920. F 12531

A delightful English story with a Cranford background and more than a hint of Barrie in its style.

Fox, John, jr. Erskine Dale, pioneer. 1920. F 12959

A story of pioneer life in Kentucky and Virginia in the years preceding and during the Revolutionary war.

Galsworthy, John. In chancery. 1920. F 13136

A continuation of the story of the Forsyte family, begun in "The man of property" (F 13086), and continued in "The Indian summer of a Forsyte." It is the story of an unfortunate marriage and the tragedy of a man who could not trace the cause of his failures.

Gerould, Gordon Hall. Youth in Harley. 1920. F 13194

The leisurely story of a young man who was a school teacher in a small New England village in the eighties.

Gibbs, Philip. Wounded souls. 1920. F 13247

A series of pictures of what the author saw in Belgium and Germany after the armistice. He shows the bitterness and hatred which exists between the two countries.

Hendryx, James B. Prairie flowers. 1920. F 13687

A typical western story.

Hinkson, Katherine Tynan. The love of brothers. 1920. F 13915

Johnston, Mary. Sweet Rocket. 1920. F 14411

A slight story which the author uses as a means to express her ideas on mysticism and the higher brotherhood.

Lewis, Sinclair. Main street; the story of Carol Kennicott. 1920. F 14645

A well-written story of a girl's unsuccessful attempt to improve and uplift the small western town in which she is to live. It is a good study of life in a small town.

London, Jack. Hearts of three. 1920. F 24630

The romantic tales of a search for buried treasure in the South Sea Islands by the two descendants of Sir Henry Morgan, the famous buccancer.

Macaulay, Rose. Potterism. 1920. F 14965

An English story which satirizes some of the literary tendencies prevailing in England and also in America.

McCutcheon, George Barr. West wind drift. 1920. F 24823

A ship on its way from South America is wrecked and lands on an unknown island. There the survivors try to set up a government which shall be both modern and adequate.

McKenna, Stephen. Lady Lilith. 1920. F 15224

This is the first book of a trilogy entitled "The sensationalists." It is a picture of social and political life in England before the war, centering around Lady Barbara and the men of a certain class at Oxford. It is bright and well written.

Mason, A. E. W. The summons. 1920. F 15216

Martin Hillyard is a member of the English secret service and he is sent to the Sudan on a mission which proves to be very mysterious and thrilling.

Masters, Edgar Lee. Mitch Miller. 1920.

F 15217

Two boys who are fired by the story of Tom Sawyer, set out to try to find adventures just as thrilling.

Monkhouse, Allan. True love. 1920. F 15447

A psychological story showing a German woman's struggle between love for her English husband and loyalty to her country.

Nexö, Martin Andersen. Ditte; girl alive! 1920. F 15656

The pitiful story of a girl's life among poverty-stricken Danish folk. It is powerfully and vividly told.

Poole, Ernest. Blind; a story of these times. 1920. F 16500

The author takes up the cause of socialism and combines fiction and propaganda by giving his convictions through his characters. The book is largely autobiographical and the industrial, political and social life of America is graphically analyzed.

Pryde, Anthony. Marqueray's duel. 1920. F 16658

Ruck, Berta, (Mrs. Oliver Onions). The bridge of kisses. 1920. F 15780

A light story of the romance of a civil engineer and a girl with match-making tendencies.

Tompkins, Juliet Wilbor. Joanna builds a nest. 1920. F 18527

Joanna has a passion for home making and she buys a dilapidated farm house with possibilities, and then both Joanna and the reader have the best of times.

Wharton, Edith. The age of innocence. 1920. F 19269

An accurate picture of New York society in the seventies. It is a penetrating criticism of its members who, bound up in forms, not only miss the flower of life, but keep others from it as well. It is perfect in form and style and one of the best books of the year.

White, Stewart Edward. The rose dawn. 1920. F 19315

This is the third book in an interesting descriptive trilogy on the history and growth of California from the days of the "49rs," to its later development.

Wiley, Hugh. The Wildcat. 1920. F 19484

Wildcat is a negro corporal in the A. E. F. who does not believe in work and who undergoes many perils in order to carry out his belief. Humorous and good for reading aloud.

Wodehouse, Pelham Grenville. The little warrior. 1920. F 19702

A gay comedy-romance full of humor and fantastic adventure.

Woolf, Virginia. Night and day. 1920. F 19763

YOUNG PEOPLE'S BOOKS

Miscellaneous

Burke, Kathleen. Little heroes of France. 1920. A 7123

Twelve true stories of heroic deeds performed by little French children during the war. The author was engaged in relief work and either knew the children personally or heard the stories from those who did.

Carrington, Hereward. The boy's book of magic, including chapters on Hindu magic, handcuff tricks, side-show and animal tricks, ventriloquism, etc.; together with numerous sleights now published for the first time. 1920. K 30254

Describes tricks which an ordinary boy can perform, if he is careful, and without undue expense.

Fabre, Jean Henry. The secret of everyday things; informal talks with the children. 1920. K 18622

Another selection of Uncle Paul's fascinating talks on thread, pins and needles, silk, wool, flax and hemp, weaving, moths, calico dying and printing, human habitations, soap, fire, matches, glass, iron, rust, pottery, coffee, sugar, tea, bread, air, evaporation, rain, snow, the force of steam, sound and light.

Macgregor, Mary. Stories of the Vikings. 1908. H 5202

(Stories from history series.)
A history of the Vikings for children in the lower grades.

Roosevelt, Theodore. PEARSON, EDMUND LESTER. Theodore Roosevelt. 1920. C 23981

(True stories of great Americans.)
A brief biography interesting to boys and, according to the New York Post, one of the best short summaries of Roosevelt's career that has yet appeared.

Stories

Bells, Elsie Spicer. Tales of enchantment from Spain. 1920. H 3696

Old Spanish folk-lore which has been kept alive in South America. These tales are said to have inspired the Spanish children of the long ago to the deeds which made Spain famous for her discoveries and explorations.

Foulke, Elizabeth E. Braided straws. 1898. H 3947

A supplementary reader for second and third grades.

Friedlander, Gerald, ed. and tr. The Jewish fairy book. 1920. H 3933

A collection of tales from various Jewish writings which have been retold in a modern setting.

Perkins, Lucy Fitch. The Italian twins. 1920. H 5657

A good picture of Italian life and customs, charmingly illustrated by the author.

Shute, Henry A. Brite and fair. 1920. H 6565

A continuation of Plupy's diary as given in the Real diary of a real boy. He has all sorts of escapades which are told in real boy way. Will be enjoyed by children and grown-ups.

Spyri, Johanna. Cornelli. 1920. H 6599

Cornelli is a sensitive child who suffers from the unjust suspicion of her elders. How she is restored to herself and reinstated in her father's affections, forms an unusually interesting narrative.

PHILOSOPHY

Psychology, Spiritualism

Blood, Benjamin Paul. Pluriverse; an essay in the philosophy of pluralism, with an introduction by Horace Meyer Kallen. 1920.

L 14698

A posthumous publication of the philosophical theories of a man who believed that the surest knowledge of fundamental truths comes not from ratiocination, but directly through the revelation of anesthetic states. James cites him appreciatively, calling him a "pluralistic mystic."

Coriat, Isador H. Repressed emotions. 1920. L 13887

A sane explanation of what the psychoanalysts mean by repressed emotions, describing the effect of these emotions in primitive society, and showing how they may be sublimated.

Lay, Wilfrid. Man's unconscious passion. 1920. L 13972

McCormick, L. Hamilton. Characterology; an exact science embracing physiognomy, phrénology and pathognomy, reconstructed, amplified and amalgamated, and including views concerning memory and reason and the location of these faculties within the brain, likewise facial and cranial indications of longevity. 1920. L 13763

Stoddart, Jane T. The case against spiritualism. 1919. L 13516

Articles collected from different writers turning even the weapons of believers against themselves wherever possible.

Strong, Charles Augustus. The origin of consciousness; an attempt to conceive the mind as a product of evolution. 1920. L 13108

An important work following out and modifying the author's theories in his Why the mind has a body (L 11200). It is pan-psychistic, but swings in the direction of using the physical tests to interpret the causal mental states.—Booklist.

Warren, Howard C. Human psychology. 1920. L 13956

A comprehensive treatment of the science from the descriptive or static point of view which the author distinguishes from the genetic or historical.

RELIGION

Cooke, George Willis. The social evolution of religion. 1920. M 8804

The author regards religion as a natural phenomenon primarily and essentially of a communal character.

Enelow, H. G. A Jewish view of Jesus. 1920. M 7128

Rabbi Enelow does not accept Jesus as the Messiah, but recognizes his spiritual and ethical importance. He states that Jesus died a Jew "with no idea that he founded a new faith to destroy his own."

Garesché, Edward F. Your own heart; some helps to understand it. 1920. M 9013

Hastings, James, ed. The Christian doctrine of faith. 1919. M 9059, 2

(The great Christian doctrines.)

Excerpts on a wide range of subjects from the best sources, grouped under such heads as faith in one's self, faith in men, and faith in God. The book provides the pastor with a body of material intimately related to the life of today.

Headlam, Arthur C. The doctrine of the church and Christian reunion; being the Bampton lectures for the year 1920. 1920. M 3059

Hodgkin, Henry T. Lay religion. 1919. M 9191

(The Christian revolution series.)

Holloway, Henry. The reformation in Ireland; a study of ecclesiastical legislation. 1919. M 7457

(Studies in church history.)

Kleiser, Grenville, ed. Christ, the master speaker. 1920. M 7139

Contents: The master speaker, by G. Kleiser.—The sermon on the mount.—Notable sayings of Christ.—Christ's preaching.—Jesus as an orator, by J. B. Clayton.—The substance of Christ's teaching, by F. W. Farrar.—Christ, the question of the centuries, by R. S. MacArthur.—Self-culture, by W. E. Channing.

McKay, Fiona, comp. The hills of contemplation; thoughts for contemplation for every day of the year. 1917. M 9519

Snowden, James H. A wonderful night; an interpretation of Christmas. 1919. M 7149

The author undertakes to correlate the Christmas story with science and history and the result is a beautiful little gift book appropriate for the holiday season.

The Bible

Burton, Ernest De Witt. A critical and exegetical commentary on the Epistle to the Galatians. 1920. M 6146

(The international critical commentary.)

Charles, R. H. A critical and exegetical commentary on the Revelation, of St. John; with introduction, notes, and indices, also the Greek text and English translation. 1920. 2v. M 6157

(The international critical commentary.)

Jastrow, Morris. The Book of Job; its origin, growth and interpretation, together with a new translation, based on a revised text. 1920. M 6639

A study from the viewpoint of modern criticism by a scholar of international reputation. Shows that Job was a type of cynical pessimist and that pious commentators have transformed the story into a bulwark of Jewish orthodoxy.—Booklist.

SOCIAL SCIENCES

Social Problems

Eddie, Lionel D., ed. Current social and industrial forces. 1920. L 16763

Extracts from the writings of critics of our present economic conditions. They represent no one system of propaganda, but present the ideas of all types of social betterment, leaving the reader to form his own judgment of their comparative merits.

Storey, Moorfield. Problems of today. 1920. L 15442

Contents: The use of parties.—Lawlessness.—Race prejudice.—The labor question.—Our foreign relations.

The author has chosen present-day subjects of vital interest, dealing with "the essentials of free government and the duties of the citizen."

Economics

Fisk, Harvey E. The Dominion of Canada; its growth and achievement; its relation to the British Empire; its form of government; its natural and developed resources; its home and foreign trade; its national finances; its banking and currency system; and its railroads and its shipping. 1920. L 16690

Laing, Graham A. An introduction to economics. 1919. L 16686

A readable and interesting presentation of this subject with special reference to American conditions. An attempt is made to give due consideration to the causes of economic discontent so that readers may arrive at a reasonable scientific judgment.

Husslein, Joseph. Democratic industry; a practical study in social history. 1919. L 16764

An appraisal of the Roman church as the guardian of democracy throughout the history of labor from slavery and serfdom down to the era of the guilds.—American Economic Review.

Knoepfel, C. E. Women in industry; an address based on answers to 1,000 questionnaires on women in industry, delivered before the national conference on "labor problems under war conditions." 1918. L 16907

Watkins, Gordon S. Labor problems and labor administration in the United States during the world war. 1920. L 4079, 8 III-IV

(University of Illinois studies in the social sciences.)

Socialism, Bolshevism

Miliukov, Paul. Bolshevism, an international danger; its doctrine and its practice through war and revolution. 1920. L 17606

The author was at one time the leader of the Constitutional party in Russia, and while minister of foreign affairs of the first provisional government he was a well-known international figure.

Solomon, Charles. The Albany "trial." 1920. L 16419

Finance, Prices

American Exchange National Bank, New York. Trusts and trustees. 1920. L 17367

Dow, Charles H. Scientific stock speculation; a condensed statement of the principles upon which successful stock speculation must be based. 1920. L 17456

Friday, David. Profits, wages, and prices. 1920. L 16687

It gives in brief compass the most comprehensive statement anywhere accessible of the present distribution of income in the United States. Especially interesting is the account of profits. . . . It offers a hope that the new theory will be couched in terms that everybody can understand.—New Republic.

McPherson, Logan Grant. The flow of value. 1919. L 16688

Continuation of How the world makes its living, L 16629.

A discussion of the causes and effects of prices, wages, profits and capital, from a point of view which the Survey calls "progressively orthodox."

Wallace, Henry A. Agricultural prices. 1920. L 17872

Political Science

Haldane, Viscount. Before the war. 1920. L 16337

The former chancellor seeks to justify Great Britain's policy preceding 1914 against the charge of insufficient preparation and in her effort to obtain a better understanding with Germany. While blaming Germany for the war his tone is temperate and generous.

Lundin, Hilda G. The influence of Jeremy Bentham on English democratic development. 1920. L 15421, 7^{III}

(University of Iowa studies in the social sciences.)

Stearns, Harold. Liberalism in America; its origin, its temporary collapse, its future. 1919. L 15823

The theme is the breakdown of American liberalism during the war as evinced in conscription, prohibition, and the intolerant mood of the country generally.

United States Government

Ashley, Roscoe Lewis. American government, for use in secondary schools. 1917. L 18361

Bartlett, William H. Handbook of American government; rev. and enl., by Henry Campbell Black. 1920. L 18367

This is a revised edition covering changes since 1912 which include not only the amendments to the Constitution, but alterations in the judicial system, as well as special changes brought about by the war.

Beck, James M. The passing of the new freedom. 1920. L 18016

Imaginary conversations among leading participants in the peace conference regarding President Wilson's policies.

Institute for Government Research, Washington, D. C. The U. S. Reclamation Service; its history, activities and organization. 1919. L 18395

(Service monographs of the United States government.)

Relates the origin, development and policy of the service, and its achievements with regard to irrigation and the reclamation of public lands.

Kimball, Everett. The national government of the United States. 1920. L 18379

The book partakes of the twofold character of a textbook in which institutions are described and analyzed, and of a source book in which appear the actual words used by the court in expounding or limiting the powers of governments.—Book Review Digest.

Turkington, Grace A. My country; a textbook in civics and patriotism for young Americans. 1918. L 18455

It clothes the dry bones of civics with flesh and blood and makes the study a vital living thing. It presents and suggests facts and methods whereby the mind of the child can be trained in the direction of good citizenship.—Bookman.

Law, Administration

Bernhardt, Joshua. Government control of the sugar industry in the United States; an account of the work of the United States Food Administration and the United States Sugar Equalization Board. 1920. L 17846

Eno, William Phelps. The science of highway traffic regulation, 1899-1920. 1920. L 18251

Haines, Charles Grove. The conflict over judicial powers in the United States to 1870. 1909. L 6589, 35^I

(Columbia university studies in history, economics and public law.)

Education

Nutt, Hubert Wilbur. The supervision of instruction. 1920. L 19524

(Riverside textbooks in education.)

Principally a discussion of the supervision of classrooms and the methods and technique which should and should not be used.

Osler, Sir William. The old humanities and the new science. 1920. L 19889

A highly inspiring, scholarly essay on the mutual dependence of natural science and the classics, characterized equally by wit and wisdom.

Francis W. Parker School, Chicago. Studies in education. June, 1912-June, 1920. L 19452

Contents: The social motive in school work.—The morning exercise as a socializing influence.—Expression as a means of training motive.—Education through concrete experience; a series of illustrations.—The course in science.—The individual and the curriculum; experiments in adaptation.

Segsworth, Walter E. Retraining Canada's disabled soldiers. 1920. L 19712

Stafford, Hazel Straight. The vacation religious day school; teacher's manual of principles and programs. 1920. L 19903

(The Abingdon religious education texts. Vacation day school series.)

LANGUAGE

Willis, George. The philosophy of speech. 1920. J 3348

Treats of the origin of speech and its relation to thought, and contains admirable attacks on the ordinary grammar books, ending with some startling arguments advocating the teaching of Latin in the elementary schools as a cure for all social ills.

Russian Language

Prince, John Dyneley. Russian grammar for class and reference use; a progressive method of learning Russian. 1919. J 4232

Solomonoff, J. First steps in Russian. 1918. J 4217

The best textbook available for teachers who wish to use the conversational method. . . . Consists of a series of pictures with accompanying texts, questions, and notes; and, most important, with a good vocabulary at the close.—Nation.

SCIENCE

Baker, Frank Collins. The life of the Pleistocene or glacial period as recorded in the deposits laid down by the great ice sheets. 1920. K 20514

(University of Illinois bulletin.)

Black, N. Henry, and Conant, James Bryant. Practical chemistry; fundamental facts and applications to modern life. 1920. K 19801

The lessons are planned to awaken the student's interest by appealing to his love of the miraculous and the dramatic; and by touching his curiosity concerning the things of everyday life.

Duclaux, Émile. Pasteur; the history of a mind. 1920. K 20572

This account of Pasteur's researches and achievements by one of his pupils is of necessity also the history of the development of much in chemical and biological science during the period of his activity.

Eaton, Walter Prichard. In Berkshire fields. 1920. K 20686

A charming sympathetic account of the author's wanderings through woods, fields, and hills. He knows this country in every season and in every mood, and he deals with it not as a scientist but as a lover of nature and its wild places.

Harrow, Benjamin. From Newton to Einstein; changing conceptions of the universe. 1920. K 19101

Contents: Newton.—The ether and its consequences.—Einstein.

A simply written booklet giving in outline the various steps in scientific progress between Newton and Einstein and showing how the latter's conception of time and space explains certain deviations from Newton's law.

Long, William J. Wood-folk comedies; the play of wild-animal life on a natural stage. 1920. K 21610

Cheerful tales based on the contention that wood-folk lead happy and care-free lives in winter or summer and know nothing of a struggle for existence.

Newman, Horatio Hackett. Vertebrate zoölogy. 1920. K 21609

Parker, G. H. The elementary nervous system. 1919. K 20555,2

(Monographs on experimental biology.)

One of the main objects of this work on the simplest states of the nervous system as it appears in sponges and other elementary forms is to help remove the preconception that interprets their behaviour on an analogy with the human system.

Stoner, Dayton. Nesting habits of the hermit thrush in northern Michigan. 1920. K 21598,9¹¹

(University of Iowa studies in natural history.)

USEFUL ARTS

Mees, C. E. Kenneth. The organization of industrial scientific research. 1920. K 22285

A brief for extending scientific control to that phase of manufacturing work where quality is measured and where all economies in process can be discovered. Clearly, forcefully and tersely written.—New Republic.

Medicine

Hygiene

Fielding, William J. Sanity in sex. 1920. N 1273

Basing his views on statistics and the experience of welfare agencies during wartime, the author emphasizes the importance of decent living wages for raising the standard of morality, and advocates psychoanalysis, birth-control, and open instruction on sex matters by the parents.

Illinois medical blue book; containing a list of physicians and surgeons of Illinois, medical schools and colleges, medical societies, sanitariums and hospitals. 1920. *R 3694

Shelved in Civics Dept.

Mann, W. L., and Folsom, S. A. A manual on foot care and shoe fitting for officers of the U. S. Navy and U. S. Marine corps. 1920. K 31091

Mayberry, James W. Primary physiology and hygiene. 1912. N 176

Sanger, Margaret. Woman and the new race; with a preface by Havelock Ellis. 1920. N 2197

The theory of birth-control expounded by one of its leading propagandists.

Engineering

Electric, Mechanical

American Manufacturing Co., Brooklyn, N. Y. The blue book of rope transmission. 7th ed. 1919. K 22950

De Forest, Lee. The audion; its action and some recent applications. 1920. K 22881

The audion is a device to magnify sound greatly, as the microscope magnifies objects to the eye. Mr. De Forest suggests a number of applications, especially in wireless telephony.

Fish, Fred Alan. Fundamental principles of electric and magnetic circuits. 1920. K 22801

Goldman, O. B. Financial engineering; a text for consulting, managing and designing engineers and for students. 1920.

K 22548

Luckiesh, M. Lighting the home. 1920.

K 23810

The author thinks that attention to apparently insignificant details of lighting equipment does much toward converting a house into a home. Some of the subjects treated are Light as expressive medium, Safeguarding vision, Functions of fixtures, Colored light, etc.

Firearms

Pollard, Hugh B. C. Automatic pistols. 1920.

K 23233

Sawyer, Charles Winthrop. Our rifles. 1920.

K 13185,3

(The firearms in American history series.)

Motor Vehicles

Automobiles

Pagé, Victor W. Hints and tips for automobilists; a handy manual containing many notes to help the busy man care for his automobile intelligently, to drive it properly, oil it regularly, and locate ordinary road troubles easily. 1920.

K 23509

"Tells how to find engine faults, and locate derangements in carburetion, ignition, cooling and lubrication systems, also details common defects in starting and lighting group."

—Motor boats and boat motors, design, construction, operation and repair; includes complete working drawings and full instructions for building five boats—ranging from a sixteen-foot general utility model to a twenty-five foot raised cabin cruiser, by A. Clark Leitch. 1920.

A special chapter on seaplanes and flying boats is included.

A. W. Shaw Co. Motor truck bulletins; increasing profits series. 1920.

(Shaw management service.)

Contents: Planning your delivery system right.—Reducing the cost of loading and unloading.—Trailers; how and when to use them.—Increasing profits with special bodies.—Cutting delivery expense.—Reaching distant markets.

—Motor truck bulletins; reducing upkeep series. 1920.

(Shaw management service.)

Contents: The secret of successful truck operation.—How proper lubrication saves money.—Curb-ing abuses to reduce repair bills.—Selecting the right tires.—How truck associations can help the truck owner.—Getting your drivers' co-operation.

—Motor truck bulletins; truck vs. horse series. 1920.

(Shaw management service.)

Contents: When to change from horse to truck.—Squaring horse costs against truck costs.—How to keep an effective record of costs.—Selecting the right truck for your business.—Meeting competition with the truck.—Solving the garage problems.

Agriculture

Bitting, K. G. The olive. 1920. K 24072

Moorhouse, Hopkins, pseud of Herbert J. Moorhouse. Deep furrows; which tells of pioneer trails along which the farmers of western Canada fought their way to great achievements in co-operation. 1918.

LITERATURE

Bojer, Johan. GAD, CARL. Johan Bojer, the man and his works; with an introduction by Llewellyn Jones, and critiques by John Galsworthy, Joseph Hergesheimer, James Branch Cabell and Cecil Roberts. 1920. J 5607

This volume contains very few facts about the author, but it gives an illuminating analysis of his works, every phase of his writing being given close attention. The New York Post says there is no gainsaying the fact that Bojer's books "challenge the mind, warm up the heart and are good for the soul."

Colby, Elbridge. The echo-device in literature. 1920. J 4736

Collins, Joseph. Idling in Italy; studies of literature and of life. 1920. J 1947

Henry").—Joseph Hergesheimer.—Fannie Hurst.—Jack London.—James Branch Matthews.—Melville Davisson Post.—Mary Roberts Rinehart.—Booth Tarkington.—Edith Wharton.

A valuable reference book devoting a chapter of combined biography and literary criticism to each of twenty of the foremost American writers of short stories.

Poetry

Abu'l-Ala. The luzumiyat of Abu'l-Ala; selected from his Luzum ma la Yalzam and Suct uz-Zand, and first rendered into English, by Ameen Rihani. 1918. E 14443

Benét, William Rose. Moons of grandeur; a book of poems. 1920. E 10658

Romantic poems of ancient Egypt and medieval Italy full of the color of those lands and times.

Burt, Maxwell Struthers. Songs and portraits. 1920. E 10700

Poems of many moods expressed with distinction, including bright little pictures of small-boy life, and reminiscent poems of those fallen at the front similar in form and feeling to the verse of Rupert Brooke.

Gibran, Kahlil. The forerunner; his parables and poems. 1920. E 3107

Further reflections of the Oriental philosopher who wrote The madman.

Herbert, A. P. The bomber gypsy, and other poems. 1920. E 11033

Vivid pictures of life at the front told with imagination and a keen sense of humor reprinted for the most part from Punch.

Iomarbhaidh na bhfileadh, the contention of the bards; ed. by Rev. L. McKenna. 1918. 2 v. *J 1095, 20-21

(Irish texts society publications.)

Le Gallienne, Richard. The junkman, and other poems. 1920. E 7737

Romantic ballads, for the most part, retaining Le Gallienne's youthful lightness of touch combined with strength and passion.

The Maitland quarto manuscript, containing poems by Sir Richard Maitland, Arbuthnot, and others; ed. by W. A. Craigie. 1920. *J 1101, 9

(The Scottish text society publications.)

Masters, Edgar Lee. Domesday book. 1920. E 14864

A dramatic poem with as striking a conception as that of Spoon River Anthology. An inquest brings out the story of the victim's life and all the lives that knowingly or unknowingly touched hers. The New Republic calls it a mixture of satire and dramatic poetry with the immediate interest of a novel.

Mathers, E. Powys. Black marigolds; being a rendering into English of the "Pan-chasika of Chauras." 1919. E 10765

An English interpretative version of an old Sanskrit love poems. The title page bears this explanatory quotation: "And sometimes we look to the end of the tale that there should be marriage feasts and find only, as it were, black marigolds and a silence."

Morley, Christopher. Hide and seek. 1920. E 14877

The most surprising section is "Translations from the Chinese" in which the author dons the mantle of the poet-philosopher of the Celestials and hits off the foibles of contemporary Philistia in pungent epigrammatic verse of fable-like simplicity.—New York Times.

Sassoon, Siegfried. Picture-show. 1920. E 11498

The same outrage and loathing of war is in the new poems, but a darker restraint is here. More scattered and varied than either Sassoon's two earlier volumes, Picture show has no less of his keen sensitivity.—Untermeyer in The New Republic.

Underwood, Edna Worthley, tr. Moons of Nippon; translations from poets of old Japan. 1919. E 14349

Drama

Coriat, Isador H. The hysteria of Lady Macbeth. 1912. E 10071

Glaspell, Susan. Plays. 1920. E 12238
Contents: Trifles.—The people.—Close the book.—The outside.—Woman's honor.—Bernice.—Suppressed desires (in collaboration with George Cram Cook).—Tickless time (in collaboration with George Cram Cook).

These plays produced by the Provincetown Players show imagination and contain good dialogue and character drawing. The first one, Trifles, has been called "the best play written by an American."

Gregory, Odin. Caius Gracchus, a tragedy; with an introduction by Theodore Dreiser. 1920. E 12269

A picture in Elizabethan metric verse of "proud Rome . . . its nest of rogues and fools—Whose souls are appetites, whose minds are lust, And for whose pleasures worlds are ground to dust."

Koch, Frederick Henry. Raleigh, the shepherd of the ocean; a pageant-drama designed to commemorate the tercentenary of the execution of Sir Walter Raleigh. 1920. E 12472

Odell, George C. D. Shakespeare from Berterton to Irving. 1920. 2 v. E 10182

The stage history of Shakespeare's plays from the time of the Restoration to the present, "abounding in apt anecdote, in illuminating quotation and in genial comment."—New York Times.

TRAVEL AND DESCRIPTION

Banfield, E. J. Tropic days. 1918. I 9189

Much more than a book of travel. It gives a charming picture of the author's life in New Zealand with much delightful detail about flowers and trees, the habits of birds, fishes and insects, and the superstitions and customs of black men and white.

Lansbury, George. What I saw in Russia. 1920. I 10533

What Mr. Lansbury saw was a group of idealists undertaking from high moral and religious motives to found a New Jerusalem by way of the Russian revolution.

Lumholtz, Carl. Through Central Borneo; an account of two years' travel in the land of the head-hunters between the years 1913 and 1917. 1920. 2 v. I 10921

The author's records of races, vegetation, climate, folk-lore, etc., are entertaining as well as scientifically accurate.

McMurry, Frank M. The geography of the world war and the peace treaties. 1920. I 11366

Supplementary material for history and geography classes in the upper grades and junior high schools.

United States

Anderson, Isabel. Presidents and pies; life in Washington, 1897–1919. 1920. I 11617

An entertaining book of inside gossip about social Washington. A resident of Washington since the beginning of the McKinley administration, Mrs. Anderson has witnessed many changes with the shifting of presidents and has many delightful anecdotes to tell of public functionaries.

Geldert, Louis N., comp. Facts about Georgia; a state rich in resources and opulent in opportunities. 1916. *R 3739

Massey, Beatrice Larned. It might have been worse; a motor trip from coast to coast. 1920. I 4326

Reik, Henry Ottridge. A tour of America's national parks. 1920. I 4325

Rhodes, Harrison. American towns and people. 1920. I 4327

Contents: Why is a Bostonian?—Who is a Philadelphian?—What is a New Yorker?—The portrait of Chicago.—Washington, the cosmopolitan.—Baltimore.—Is there a West?—The hotel guest.—The high kingdom of the movies.—The American child.—The society woman.

Sketches of the physical and social aspects of American cities presenting the characteristics which make for distinct personalities in cities. The chapter on Chicago is particularly satisfactory—quite the most serious of the book.

Rutzebeck, Hjalmar. Alaska man's luck; a romance of fact. 1920. I 11792

Adventures of a homesteader who left his claim in California for freedom and Alaska after exciting experiences in logging and mining camps, over fascinating wilderness trails, in lonely Indian camps, etc.

Shackleton, Robert. The book of Chicago. 1920. B 7813

A readable miscellany of history, anecdote, and comment.—New York Post.

BIOGRAPHY

Adams, Henry. Letters to a niece, and Prayer to the Virgin of Chartres, with A niece's memories by Mabel La Farge. 1920. C 20496

These letters are affectionate and fine—just the kind of letters that the scholarly but humane Henry Adams would write. They contain interesting bits about the South Seas and conclude with the "Prayer" as a poetical benediction.

Fuller, Margaret. (Marchioness Ossoli), ANTHONY, KATHARINE. Margaret Fuller; a psychological biography. 1920. C 23657

The pathos, the brilliancy, the ludicrous aspects, the thrilling gifts to the world of a woman of genius, all sparkle in the reality of the portrait; and when you close the book you have the sense of having been in the presence of a great woman, of a spirit of beautiful and enriching truth.—Edith Wyatt in The New Republic.

Henry V., King of England. MOWAT, R. B. Henry V. 1919. C 22410

Bound with Beneš' Economic strength of the Bohemian (Czechoslovak) lands.

O'Brien, William. Evening memories; being a continuation of recollections. 1920. A 5513

That one of his ability and experience should in the evening of his days and in the maturity of his judgment himself recount frankly and fully the stories of his most daring activities is indeed a valuable contribution to the history of his time.—Times (London).

Haslett, Elmer. Luck on the wing; thirteen stories of a sky spy. 1920. A 7130

It is full of the fire and fervor of youth, good-natured, natural—a splendid picture of the fighting airman and the life he led behind, over, and beyond the lines. . . . A corking book to read aloud.—C. H. Towne in The Bookman.

McCarthy, George T. The greater love. 1920. A 7135

McCormick, Robert R. The army of 1918. 1920. A 7129

A reliable non-technical statement of facts concerning the training and employment of the American army in the war, based on the author's personal experience. Colonel McCormick's attitude toward our military policy is critical.

Parsons, William Barclay. The American engineers in France. 1920. A 7132

The author covers in outline the work of all the nine regiments of American engineers from the Atlantic to the Vosges, from the Mediterranean to Flanders, "and with an authority that will make this one of the lasting records of the war" (N. Y. Evening Post).

Small, James Louis, comp. Home—then what? The mind of the doughboy, A. E. F., by the doughboy himself; with foreword by John Kendrick Bangs. 1920. A 7131

Stockbridge, Frank Parker. Yankee ingenuity in the war. 1920. A 7137

It was as a reaction of the author's patriotic pride to the slanderous disparagements of America's participation in the war that the book was written . . . not for the scientist or technologist.—Book Review Digest.

Townshend, Charles Vere Ferrers. My campaign. 1920. 2 v. A 7133

A fascinating book by the commanding officer of the British forces that fought at Kut and Ctesiphon, giving a frank interpretation of this important campaign.

The uncensored letters of a canteen girl. 1920. A 7128

These letters were written to some one on this side of the Atlantic by a Y girl with the A. E. F. They were not mailed, but kept until the end of the war, and so are literally uncensored. They are clever and well written and give a true picture of the American soldier in France.

Asia

Cheng, Sih-Gung. Modern China; a political study. 1919. A 8105

A timely volume discussing the chief problems which confront the Chinese statesman and diplomat, together with suggestions for their solution, by an attaché of the Chinese delegation at the Paris conference.

Fascinating family letters relating the different phases of the war of secession from the individual viewpoints of three of the Adams family, Charles Francis Adams, minister at the court of St. James, his secretary-son Henry, and the younger Charles Francis at the front in Virginia.

Graham, R. B. Cunninghame. A Brazilian mystic; being the life and miracles of Antonio Conselheiro. 1920. B 4945

A romantic episode in the history of Brazil in which Antonio Maciel led an army of followers into the mountains and founded a new Zion, defying the temporal power and its modern artillery with out-worn blunderbusses, and dying a martyr to his faith.

Long, Stephen H. Voyage in a six-oared skiff to the Falls of Saint Anthony in 1817. 1860. B 1520, 2

(Collections of the Historical Society of Minnesota.)

The journal of Major Long.

New York (city). Public Library. An exhibition illustrating the history of the water supply of the city of New York from 1639 to 1917. 1917. B 8078

Turner, Frederick Jackson. The frontier in American history. 1920. B 6012

A series of carefully prepared essays forming one concrete whole, in which Professor Turner, according to the New York Times, shows that "in every contest between Eastern and Western ideals the ultimate advantage has remained with the West because it was the frontier always which was creating the new race of Americans."

Wood William, cd. Select British documents of the Canadian war of 1812. 1920. B 4742, 13

(The publications of the Champlain Society.)

FICTION

Anderson, Sherwood. Poor white. 1920. F 10531

The story of the transformation of a sleepy Ohio town to an industrial center, and also of the transformation of the man whose genius brings about the change. It is bitterly realistic and keenly penetrating.

Berbohm, Max. Seven men. 1920. F 20344

Contents: Enoch Soames.—Hilary Maltby and Stephen Braxton.—James Pethel.—A. V. Laider.—"Savonarola" Brown.

"As the drawings are caricatures so are the pen sketches satires on human vanities, weaknesses and foibles, literary and otherwise," says the Book Review Digest about these seven imaginative sketches of six imaginary men and the author.

Brown, Alice. Homespun and gold. 1920. F 20740

Contents: The wedding ring.—Mary Felicia.—A homespun wizardry.—Red poppies.—Ann Eliza.—The return of father.—The deserters.—The house of the bride.—A question of wills.—A brush of paint.—The path of stars.—The widow's third.—White pebbles.—Confessions.—Up on the mountain. Charming and well written sketches of New England life and character.

Holland, Rupert S. Refugee Rock. 1920. H 8442

A mystery story which has its setting on an island off the coast of Maine. Three boys rescue a European refugee from two bands of law-breakers. The refugee proves to be a royal prince whose family have concealed a treasure on this island.

Livingston, Robert. The land of the great out-of-doors. 1920. H 4838

Another book by the author of "What happens do." Pen and Penny tell the story of their experiences in the country. They tell of the animals, holidays and sports of all kinds in a way that is interesting to small children.

Pyle, Katharine. Tales of wonder and magic. 1920. H 5873

Fifteen fairy stories adapted from the folklore of different countries. The illustrations are by the author.

Sabin, Edwin L. Into Mexico with General Scott. 1920. H 6321

(Trail blazers series.)

A story which will take you back to '46 and on a journey full of adventure under a soldier most popular with the men in the ranks.

Schnapps, Charles H. Archag, the little Armenian. 1920. H 6219

(Little schoolmates series.)

The story of an Armenian boy in which the characteristics of that people are brought out. Their endurance and suffering under oppression are told without exaggeration.

Spyri, Johanna. Toni, the little wood-carver. 1920. H 6606

Another book by the author of "Heidi" in which we are again placed in the pleasant atmosphere of the mountains of Switzerland. A good picture of the peasant life of that region.

Tarn, W. W. The treasure of the Isle of Mist. 1920. H 6716

Fiona and her student father live on the Isle of Mist. With the aid of a present from the fairy king and the advice of the animals, Fiona finds the treasure and the best gifts of fairyland. There are numerous references to mythology and folklore.

Sequel to The trail of the cloven foot, H 6921.

Two typical American boys discover and destroy a German submarine base while trying to clear up the title of a mine they have discovered. A tribe of white Indians are encountered who afford many adventures.

The Public Library—Its Present and Its Future

A SERIOUS contraction in revenue, combining with the continuous rise in the cost of all materials—books, supplies, binding—as well as service, has compelled the Public Library to undertake retrenchments of the most drastic sort in order to bring its current expenditures within the measure of its current income. Confronted with a deficit in resources of $246,000 below requirements as determined by a carefully compiled budget, it has been found necessary to institute sharp curtailments in all directions. In the largest three items of the budget, namely, salaries, books and bindings, the cut made imperative by this state of affairs is revealed by the following figures:

	SALARIES	BOOKS	BINDING
Estimated needs	$629,896.00	$150,000.00	$65,000.00
Revised appropriations	516,241.00	75,000.00	40,000.00

These heavy and unavoidable reductions could be met only by corresponding reductions in service, the dismissal of a large group of employees, and the consequent discontinuance of a corresponding number of agencies. On the page opposite will be found a list of sixteen branches that have been temporarily closed. Retrenchments in book and binding funds, postponement of much-needed repairs, and the complete abandonment of all contemplated extensions will together, it is hoped, result in keeping disbursements for 1921 within the required bounds. The Library has no borrowing or bonding power for current expenses, and, under the uncertainties of the Illinois revenue system, anticipation of a possible surplus in years to come would, in any event, be a most unbusinesslike procedure.

The only source of revenue for the maintenance and development of the Public Library is the tax provided by the state library act of 1872, in which the rate is fixed at two-thirds of one mill in cities of more than 100,000 population (and one and one-third mills in cities and towns under that figure). In actual practice this rate amounts, in Chicago, to five and one-third tenths of a mill (.0005 $\frac{1}{3}$). The revenue produced by the levy of this rate for the current year is, in round numbers, \$830,000, or about twenty-nine cents per capita. A compilation of figures on library support in the largest ten cities, printed in the Library Journal of New York in January, 1920, accords Chicago the unenviable distinction of ranking ninth in the per capita expenditure for its Library:

Boston	74 cents
Cleveland	64 cents
Pittsburgh	56 cents
Cincinnati	44 cents
Detroit	41 cents
St. Louis	35 cents
Brooklyn	30 cents
*New York	30 cents
Chicago	29 cents
Philadelphia	20 cents

*In New York only the Circulation Department, i. e., the branch system, is supported by city tax, all other activities being financed from trust funds and large endowments.

The Library Journal tables further show that the Chicago Public Library ranks second only to New York in total number of volumes circulated, fourth in circulation per capita, and lowest in cost of book distributing service.

Chicago has never enjoyed the favor of generous benefactors, whose bounty has provided the means for the splendid physical equipments and ample developments of all of the other great library systems of the country. This Library has no endowments, building funds or other independent resources of any sort whatsoever. At the mercy of an absurdly insufficient, and a precariously fluctuating, tax rate, it has had to make its own way and has thus far, by strict and bitter economies, contrived to maintain a degree of service to its ever-growing constituency that has been at least reasonably adequate. A crisis has now arrived in its affairs that must be recognized and dealt with if the institution is to continue to function and to grow in measurable relation to its constantly expanding task:

The Chicago Public Library, joining with other public libraries of the state equally hard hit, has applied to the General Assembly now in session at Springfield for an amendment to the Library Act of 1872 increasing the tax rate in cities of over 100,000 to one mill, and in municipalities of smaller population to two mills, on the dollar of assessed valuation.

This means five cents more on each hundred dollars, or, to the average householder paying taxes on $6,000 to $10,000, one additional dollar per year for the Public Library.

In furtherance of the adoption by the General Assembly of this amendment, the Public Library invites the active cooperation and support of its friends and patrons by promoting the passage of House Bills No. 224 and 225.

Books and Reading

Moore, Annie Carroll. Roads to childhood; views and reviews of children's books. 1920. J 2845

Chapters written with charm and understanding by the supervisor of work with children in the New York Public Library, and containing suggestive material for authors as well as for parents, teachers, and librarians.

Quiller-Couch, Sir Arthur. On the art of reading. 1920. J 2852

Contents: Introductory.—Apprehension versus comprehension.—Children's reading.—On reading for examinations.—On a school of English.—The value of Greek and Latin in English literature.—On reading the Bible.—On selection.—On the use of masterpieces.

Lectures by a devout book-lover who wishes to inculcate in his students a broad-minded taste and a warm-hearted love for books. The New York Times says that the book is "humane in its treatment, extensive in its inward scope, catholic in its comparative method, classic in its standards."

PHILOSOPHY

Bergson, Henri. Mind-energy; lectures and essays. 1920. L 12923

Contents: Life and consciousness.—The soul and the body.—"Phantasms of the living" and psychical research.—Dreams.—Memory of the present and false recognition.—Intellectual effort.—Brain and thought: a philosophical illusion.

Bergson's own selection of essays written from 1901 to 1913. For the most part they confirm the views expressed in his main philosophical works, with some elaboration of detail and some new application to special problems.

Spiritualism

Jones, Lloyd Kenyon. God's world; a treatise on spiritualism founded on transcripts of shorthand notes taken down, over a period of five years, in the seance-room of the William T. Stead Memorial Center (a religious body incorporated under the statutes of the state of Illinois, Mrs Cecil M. Cook, medium and pastor). 1919. L 13517

Psychology

Dewey, Evelyn, and others. Methods and results of testing school children; manual of tests used by the psychological survey in the public schools of New York city, including social and physical studies of the children tested in 1920. L 13732

The tests include not merely those of a "performance" character, but they carry through into the physical and social backgrounds of the children, in the light of which, eventually, all mental tests must be understood.—Survey.

O'Higgins, Harvey. The secret springs. 1920. L 13977

In very simple and obvious hypothetical cases based on conversations with a physician of the psycho-analytic school the author is able to give the uninformed layman some idea of the advantages and scope of this branch of therapeutics.

Wright, George E. Practical views on psychic phenomena. 1920. L 13541

A sympathetic and intelligent account of the work of the Society for Psychical Research expressed clearly and concisely.

Ethics, Conduct of Life

Barton, Bruce. It's a good old world; being a collection of little essays on various subjects of human interest. 1920. L 14115

Bright and clever chapters on character, which seek to encourage happiness and cheerfulness.

Hill, Owen A. Ethics, general and special. 1920. L 14107

An exposition of the ideals of Catholicism in the light of scientific knowledge and the life of today, which finds the subjectivity of modern philosophy responsible for many existing evils.

Thompson, Vance. Live and be young. 1920. L 14117

Preaches the gospel of the play and irresponsibility of childhood as a rule of conduct for the mature.

- Van Wesep, H. B. The control of ideals; a contribution to the study of ethics. 1920. L 14152

The distinction is made between ideals and fixed ideas, placing emphasis on the relative importance of living and dying for them. The bearing of the whole is on the theme of war prevention.

RELIGION

- Burroughs, John. Accepting the universe. 1920. M 8686

Philosophic essays, though not profound, which are optimistic in tone in spite of the fact that they do not lay claim to any solution of the riddle of the universe, regarding it as unsolvable.

- Donne, John. Donne's sermons; selected passages, with an essay by Logan Pearsall Smith. 1919. M 5075

For those who know their Donne as a poet, it is right they should know him too as a divine. His appreciation for verbal and chromatic beauty is apparent in his homilies even as when perpetuating the inspired moment in his verse.—Boston Transcript.

- Le Roy, Edouard. What is a dogma? tr. by Lydia G. Robinson. 1918. M 9439

M. LeRoy is a Catholic layman, and his article first appeared in a French fortnightly journal in 1905 and gave rise to a heated controversy. He presents the point of view of the intelligent questioner outside the church and appeals to theologians within it to give a satisfying answer in the same spirit.

- Methodist Episcopal Church. The rise of Methodism in the West; being the Journal of the Western Conference, 1800-1811; ed., with notes and introduction, by W. W. Sweet. 1920. M 7921

- Rice, John A. The Old Testament in the life of today. 1920. M 6663

Scans the Old Testament broadly, so that the reader brought up on isolated texts and chapters may see the evolution of the set of books, the ideas dominating the authors and the effect which years of retouching and interpreting have had upon original manuscripts.—Booklist.

- Schmidt, George T. The principal Catholic practices; a popular explanation of the sacraments and Catholic devotions. 1920. M 7717

- Smith, David. The life and letters of St. Paul. 1920. M 2670

Dr. Smith has produced a work of genuine literature. He has a lucid style, a finely poised imagination, deep historical insight, a rich understanding of religious values and a full grasp of the profoundest scholarship.—Bookman.

Non-Christian Religions

- Bentwich, Norman. Hellenism. 1919. M 8277
(Movements in Judaism.)

- Zwemer, Samuel M. The influence of animism on Islam; an account of popular superstitions. 1920. M 8120

The book shows how much of primitive animism still persists in the popular expression of the Moslem religion.

SOCIAL SCIENCES

- Friedman, Elisha M., ed. America and the new era, a symposium on social reconstruction; with a foreword by Herbert Hoover. 1920. L 15464

A sequel to American problems of reconstruction, a symposium on the economic and financial aspects, L 16670.

Mr. Hoover's analytical survey of the present situation is followed by such well-known social experts as Sophonisba Breckinridge, C. B. Davenport, Graham Taylor, F. C. Howe, E. S. Ames, R. T. Ely, and Francis G. Peabody.

- Mackenzie, J. S. Outlines of social philosophy. 1918. L 15322

(Studies in economics and political science.)

The plan is to survey the field of social philosophy, which is distinguished from sociology, and to determine the bases of social order, national order, and world order, and the functioning of institutions, forces, and ideals in their development.—Athenaeum.

- Secrist, Horace. Readings and problems in statistical methods. 1920. L 15609

Chapters on the meaning and application of statistics, sources and collection of data, units of measurement, tabular, diagrammatic and graphic presentation, averages as types, index numbers, comparison and correlation, accompanied by illustrative problems.

Economics

- Dole, Charles F. Economics for upper grades. 1920. L 16694

- Figgis, Darrell. The economic case for Irish independence. 1920. L 16692

- Haynes, John. Economics in the secondary school. 1914. L 16695

(Riverside educational monographs.)

- Tawney, R. H. The acquisitive society. 1920. L 16693

A thoughtful and brilliant study on the principles of property, their relation to production, the evils that have arisen from their neglect, and the changes that have taken place in British opinion regarding them.

- Tornquist, Ernesto, & Co. The economic development of the Argentine Republic in the last fifty years. 1919. L 16689

Labor

- Bloomfield, Daniel. Labor maintenance; a practical handbook of employees' service work. 1920. L 16984

- Donovan, Frances. The woman who waits. 1920. L 16903

The author has gathered her material from personal experience in all types of Chicago restaurants. Her intimate contact with waitresses as co-workers is related in this chatty book, but the picture of conditions it reveals is not a pleasant one.

- Frankel, Lee K., and others. The human factor in industry. 1920. L 16987

A comprehensive manual giving statistics which show the advantage to the employer in lessened hours, improved working conditions, etc. It should prove a useful reference tool for business managers on account of its valuable illustrative examples and contains information of interest to social workers.

Furniss, Edgar S. The position of the laborer in a system of nationalism; a study in the labor theories of the later English mercantilists. 1920. L 16988

(Hart, Schaffner & Marx prize essays.)

A comparison of the after-war nationalistic reaction of today with the economic conditions in England between 1660 and 1775.

Knowles, Morris. Industrial housing; with discussion of accompanying activities, such as town planning, street systems, development of utility services, and related engineering and construction features. 1920. L 17050

A comprehensive treatment of a subject of the utmost importance to public officials and employers of labor by an engineer especially experienced in dealing with the housing problems precipitated by the war.

Warne, Frank Julian. The workers at war. 1920. L 16979

(The Century new world series.)

Mr. Warne writes of the government's labor policies and of the war between industrial democracy and autocracy which has followed the great war's interruption of the struggle between labor and capital. He advocates the organization of consumers.

Finance, Insurance

Herrick, Clay. Trust companies; their organization, growth and management. 1915. L 17369

Huebner, Solomon S. Marine insurance. 1920. L 19271

A well written and helpful manual which should be of great assistance to beginners training for the marine insurance, shipping or exporting business.

Kniffin, William H. The business man and his bank. 1920. L 17328

Socialism

Guild Socialism, Bolshevism

Cole, G. D. H. Chaos and order in industry. 1920. L 17881

The author believes that the only remedy for the problem of capital and labor, is nationalization of the industries, with the eventual turning of them over to the management of the workers.

Glasier, J. Bruce. The meaning of socialism. 1920. L 17582

(The new library of science.)

An idealistic interpretation of socialism, regarding humanism as its most profitable field and urgent duty.

Kautsky, Karl. The dictatorship of the proletariat. 1920. L 17596

An answer to the challenge in Lenin's State and revolution, L 17602.

Lenin, N., pseud. of V. I. Ulianov. The proletarian revolution and Kautsky the renegade. 1920. L 17603

In The state and revolution (L 17602) the author justified proletarian democracy, or Bolshevism, from a Marxian standpoint. His challenge was answered by Karl Kautsky in defence of bourgeois democracy in The dictatorship of the proletariat (L 17596), which here receives its rebuttal from Lenin.

Loria, Achille. Karl Marx. 1920. L 17600

A sketch of Marx's life and doctrines by an Italian socialist.

Postgate, R. W. The Bolshevik theory. 1920. L 17611

A statement of communist principles such as any believer might give, except that the tone is defensive, and emotional warmth is quite lacking.—Nation.

Russell, Bertrand. Bolshevism: practice and theory. 1920. L 17622

The book is likely to remain the most damning criticism of Bolshevism, whether that strange delusion be considered as a faith or as a political institution.—Spectator.

Webb, Sidney and Beatrice. A constitution for the socialist commonwealth of Great Britain. 1920. L 17643

The power derived from property Mr. and Mrs. Webb would replace by power derived from public service. That this can be effected is the unstated assumption of their system.—New Republic.

Production, Prices

Academy of Political Science, New York.

Inflation and high prices: causes and remedies; a series of addresses and papers. 1920. L 7286,9¹

(Proceedings.)

Contents: Preface.—Causes and progress of inflation, by E. W. Kemmerer.—Treasury methods of financing the war in relation to inflation, by R. C. Leffingwell.—The relation of the federal reserve system to inflation, by H. P. Willis.—Discussion of government's financial policies in relation to inflation, by A. B. Hepburn, J. H. Hollander and B. M. Anderson, jr.—The international factor in price fluctuations, by W. C. Mitchell.—Increased production through the Kansas industrial court plan as a remedy, by H. J. Allen.—Increased production through increased saving as a remedy, by G. E. Roberts.—Remedies for inflation with special reference to the British situation, by J. J. Broderick.—Remedies for inflation with special reference to the French situation, by M. Casenave.—Remedies for inflation with special reference to the Italian situation, by B. Attolico.—Inflation as a world problem and our relation thereto, by P. M. Warburg.—Discussion of contribution the United States may make toward improving the European situation, by W. S. Kies and C. C. Plehn.—Increased production and increased saving as remedies for inflation, by H. Withers.

Eckel, Edwin C. Coal, iron and war; a study in industrialism, past and future. 1920. L 16691

Major Eckel is convinced that the power of nations will shift considerably in the near future and that while the centers will be determined as always largely by national character and the stability of governments, they will be vastly affected by the location of resources in coal and iron.

Pearl, Raymond. The nation's food; a statistical study of a physiological and social problem. 1920. L 17862

Statistics resulting from the research of the Food Administration during the war, which go to make a valuable source book.

Political Science

Drachsler, Julius. Democracy and assimilation; the blending of immigrant heritages in America. 1920. L 16051

Professor Drachsler urges replacing the present method of what he calls "hasty assimilation" by a policy of "incorporation" taking into account the immigrant's contribution to American cultural life while presenting to him a fundamental conception of what true Americanism is.

Duguit, Léon. Law in the modern state; tr. by Frida and Harold Laski. 1919. L 15755

A remarkably interesting presentation of the changes taking place in the structure of society and its attitude toward law and government. The emphasis is no longer on the authority the state can exercise over the community but on the service it can render to the general welfare.

Graham, Stephen. The soul of John Brown. 1920. L 16175

Mr. Graham is an English writer well known for his interest in gaining firsthand knowledge of oppressed peoples, notably the peasants and Jews of Russia. He has tramped through the South following Sherman's march to the sea and he presents the negroes' case with sympathy and optimism.

McLaughlin, Andrew Cunningham. Steps in the development of American democracy. 1920. L 15896

(Wesleyan University. George Slocum Bennett foundation lectures.)

The treatment is broad, but it is marked by a sense of proportion and by genuine insight. In brief, Prof. McLaughlin gives expression to the universal feeling that the experiment of democracy is not beyond peril.—Bookman.

Roberts, Richard. The unfinished programme of democracy. 1920. L 15895

One of the ablest of the ministers of the English Presbyterian church here discusses the social problem in a comprehensive and practical way, with a full appreciation of new conditions and new trends of thought.—The Times (London).

Stevens, Doris. Jailed for freedom. 1920. L 15984

A vividly written history of the struggle of American women for suffrage.

Immigration

North American Civic League for Immigrants. Annual report, 1908-1909 to 1918-1919. L 16078

Thompson, Frank V. Schooling of the immigrant. 1920. L 19719

(Americanization studies.)

Mr. Thompson's own point of view undergoes expansion between the first chapter and the last. . . . He reaches the conclusion that Americanization means remaking ourselves and our institutions, including the schools, quite as much as it means the remaking of the immigrant.—J. K. Hart in The Survey.

United States Government

Federal, Municipal

Crozier, William. Ordnance and the world war; a contribution to the history of American preparedness. 1920. L 18371

The purpose is to describe the ordnance department and to trace the various steps in equipping the army for France, leaving the reader to judge to what extent the department met its responsibilities.—Book Review Digest.

Fosdick, Raymond B. American police systems. 1920. L 18226

(Publications of the Bureau of Social Hygiene.) Companion volume to European police systems, L 9855.

Mr. Fosdick's report is encouraging when compared to conditions of half a century ago, but does not bear comparison with European systems where "the mechanism is the product not of political expediency but of painstaking care and deliberation."

The U. S. Geological Survey, its history, activities and organization. 1919. L 18394

(Service monographs of the United States government.)

International Relations

Fahs, Charles Harvey. American's stake in the Far East. 1920. L 16339

(World problem discussion series.)

Hovde, Brynjolf J. Diplomatic relations of the United States with Sweden and Norway, 1814-1905. 1921. L 15421, 7^{IV}

(University of Iowa studies in the social sciences.)

Pooley, A. M. Japan's foreign policies. 1920. L 16340

It records the rapid imperialistic developments in Japan and its Chinese policy and hints at the possibility of a war between America and Japan in the making.—Book Review Digest.

Law

Meigs, William M. The relation of the judiciary to the Constitution. 1919. L 18017

Scott, James Brown. The United States of America: a study in international organization. 1920. L 18026

(Publications of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Division of international law.)

Wigmore, John Henry. Problems of law, its past, present, and future; three lectures. 1920. N 5466

(University of Virginia. Barbour-Page foundation.)

Professor Wigmore believes that we are at the beginning of a new era in which considerable legislation will be necessary to adjust things properly, and that one of the greatest needs will be legislators who are made experts by decreasing their number and increasing their terms of office and salaries.

International Law

League of Nations

Gray, Sir Edward, and others. The league of nations, with an introduction by Viscount Bryce. 1919. L 21454

Contents: Introduction, by Viscount Bryce.—The league of nations, by Viscount Grey.—The league of nations in history, by A. F. Pollard.—The league of nations and the coming rule of law, by Sir Frederick Pollock.—The league of nations and freedom of the seas, by Sir Julian Corbett.—The league of nations and primitive peoples, by Sir Sydney Olivier.—The league of nations: its economic aspect, by Hartley Withers.—The league of nations and labour, by Arthur Henderson.—The league of nations and the democratic idea, by Gilbert Murray.—The spiritual sanctions of a league of nations, by E. S. Talbot.

Hicks, Frederick Charles. The new world order: international organization, international law, international cooperation. 1920. L 21446

The author's personal conviction is "that the League of nations should be supported not merely because it provides means for putting war a few steps farther in the background, but because it emphasizes the necessity for cooperation between sovereign states."—Preface.

Scott, James Brown. The project of a permanent court of international justice, and resolutions of the Advisory Committee of Jurists; report and commentary. 1920. L 17958,35

(Pamphlet series of the Carnegie endowment for international peace. Division of international law.)

Sweetser, Arthur. The League of Nations at work. 1920. L 21455

The author was a member of the American peace commission and now of a provisional secretariat of the League of Nations. His book is a simple and clear exposition of the structure of the League and the work that it has accomplished.

Wilson, Woodrow. The hope of the world; messages and addresses delivered by the President between July 10, 1919, and December 9, 1919, including selections from his country-wide speeches in behalf of the Treaty and Covenant. 1920. L 18474

Supplementary to Why we are at war (1917), A 6378; In our first year of war (1918), A 6625; Guarantees of peace (1919), L 18472; International ideals (1919), L 16327; The triumph of ideals (1919), L 18473.

The papers include the message on the high cost of living; the memorandum upon Shantung; the statement to the railway shopmen; the letter to the National Industrial Conference; the appeal to the coal miners; and the message to the new Congress.

Education

Bonser, Frederick Gordon. The elementary school curriculum. 1920. L 19890

Briggs, Thomas H. The junior high school. 1920. L 19804

(Riverside textbooks in education.)

Cope, Henry Frederick. Education for democracy. 1920. L 19371

Democracy, according to this author, "is more than a form of government, it is a social ideal, a mode of life, a quality of the human spirit," and with this idea in mind he suggests ways in which school and community may help in the development of character.

Griffith, Ira Samuel. Teaching manual and industrial arts; a textbook for normal schools and colleges. 1920. L 19570

It aims to help relate the more theoretical courses to manual and industrial instruction.

Hudson, Jay William. The college and new America. 1920. L 19935

Social reconstruction, the author holds, requires the aid of the colleges and looks to them for skilled intelligence of a special sort. This requires reform and the first reform needed is that of the college professor himself.—Book Review Digest.

James, Edmund J. Sixteen years at the University of Illinois; a statistical study. 1920. L 19976

Jones, Henry Arthur. Patriotism and popular education; a letter addressed to the Right Hon. H. A. L. Fisher. 1920. L 19457

It deplores the inadequacy of the English educational system for the needs of the worker, the decadence of skilled labor, the absence of serious purpose in the theater and the future of England in general.

Owen, Grace, ed. Nursery school education. 1920. L 19745

Sears, J. B., and others. The Boise survey; a concrete study of the administration of a city school system. 1920. L 20048
(Educational survey series.)

LITERATURE

Abrahams, Israel. By-paths in Hebraic bookland. 1920. J 5704

Gwynn, Stephen. Irish books and Irish people. 1919. J 5727

Contents: Introduction.—Novels of Irish life in the nineteenth century.—A century of Irish humour.—Literature among the illiterates: The Shanachy. The life of a song.—Irish education and Irish character.—The Irish gentry.—Yesterday in Ireland.

These essays are for the most part revived from the years 1897–1907, representing the views, during the changing moods of the decade, of this capable and cultured essayist.—Times (London).

Harrison-Berlitz, Maxime. Outlines of English literature for foreign students. 1920. J 6389

Muddiman, Bernard. The man of the nineties. 1920. J 6395

A review of English literature of that period.

Spence, Lewis. Legends and romances of Spain. 1920. J 5501

A beautiful volume summarizing Spanish literature as expressed in its chivalric novels, ballads and tales of magic, and humorous romances. Historical backgrounds, synopses and metrical translations are given.—Booklist.

Thorndike, Ashley H. Literature in a changing age. 1920. J 6368

Contents: Changing literature.—The reading public.—The literary inheritance.—The literary environment and Carlyle.—Progress and poverty.—Democracy and empire.—Religion.—Woman.—Science, invention, and machinery.—Beauty and art.—The future.

Examines changes in literature as resulting from change in society, political change, religious change, industrial change, and change in the position of woman.

Journalism, Authorship

Edson, C. L. The gentle art of columnning; a treatise on comic journalism, with introductory essays by Don Marquis, Christopher Morley, Franklin P. Adams and George Horace Lorimer. 1920. J 7247

An amusing book on the proper methods to be followed by writers whose professional duty it is to be amusing.—New York Times.

Flint, Leon Nelson. The editorial; a study in effectiveness of writing. 1920. J 7249

An intelligent analysis of a large number of American editorials with regard to their style, content, and appearance on the printed page, together with a discussion of the relations between press and public, and various aspects of editorial ethics.

Hearn, Lafcadio. Talks to writers; with an introduction by John Erskine. 1920. J 7646

Contents: On the relation of life and character to literature.—On composition.—Studies of extraordinary prose: The Norse writers; Sir Thomas Browne; Björnson; Beaudelaire.—The value of the supernatural in fiction.—The question of the highest art.—Tolstoi's theory of art.—Note upon the abuse and the use of literary societies.—On reading.—Literature and public opinion.—Farewell address.

Stimulating and suggestive chapters gathered from Interpretations of literature (J 5230), and Life and literature (J 4829). They urge the necessity of discipline for literary success, advocating translation as excellent training in craftsmanship and diction.

Poetry

Collections

Contemporary Verse anthology, favorite poems selected from the magazine; with an introduction by Charles Wharton Stork. 1920. E 14334

Frothingham, Robert, ed. Songs of horses; an anthology. 1920. E 14337

These delightful poems are arranged in groups on The wild West, Orient and Occident, Track and field, "Horse-play," and The horse in war.

Rootham, Helen, tr. Kossovo, heroic songs of the Serbs; introduction by Maurice Baring. 1920. E 14329

Serbian and English.

The battle of 1389, which lost the Balkan peoples their freedom, is here described in epic ballads which are very readable with their Christian idealism and primitive naturalness. With the translation is a Serbian version in Roman characters.

Walters, L. D'O., comp. An anthology of recent poetry. 1920. E 14351

An attractive collection of poems by thirty-nine British poets, some of them well-known, which will appeal to both young and old.

Wells, Carolyn, comp. The book of humorous verse. 1920. E 14352

Here is a volume of comic verse which contains something for everybody with any fondness for fun. It is a department store of rhymed whimsies, of parodies of limericks, of familiar verse, of epigrams and of satires.—New York Times.

Poetry by Individual Authors

Blok, Alexander. The twelve; translated from the Russian by Babette Deutsch and Abraham Yarmolinsky. 1920. E 10666

(The Freeman pamphlets.)

The poem has been hailed in Russia as the epic of the revolution even by those of Blok's fellows who are bitterly antagonistic to him politically. Two million copies were distributed in Russia and the poem has been translated into six languages.—New York Post.

Bodenheim, Maxwell. Advice; a book of poems. 1920. E 10668

Comments strung on a thread of a grey-eyed bitterness; snatches of story and description that would reveal the trivialities of life and its futility.—Dial.

Burke, Thomas. The song book of Quong Lee of Limehouse. 1920. E 14508

Burke's poems are basically serious attempts to present the thoughts and dreams of an Oriental shop-keeper in the Limehouse district of London. His idiom is "childlike and bland," the mingled pathos, nobility and comicality of his thoughts well caught.—New York Post.

Burns, Robert. The poems of Robert Burns, the poet of religion, democracy, brotherhood and love; ed. by James L. Hughes. 1920. E 14511

They are grouped into nature poems relating to Ayr and Alloway districts, religious and ethical poems, poems of democracy and brotherhood, and love songs, and contain numerous photographs of the Burns country.

De La Mare, Walter. Collected poems, 1901-1918. 1920. 2v. E 14583

v. 1. Poems: 1906.—The listeners.—Motley.

2. Songs of childhood.—Peacock pie.

Mr. De la Mare's poetry possesses the magic of English twilights, and according to the New York Times "his pictures are frosted on the window pane, a fine faint tracery; not fire on a hearth, a riot of red color. He creates ghosts as real and wistful as people, and people as vague and wispy as ghosts."

Dircks, Helen. Passenger; with a preface by Frank Swinnerton. 1920. E 14585

Many of these pieces are happy little efforts in lyrical poems of love or regret, and the whiffs of verse in vers libre are felicitous.—Times (London).

Knibbs, Henry Herbert. Songs of the trail. 1920. E 11147

Poems of the old-time west by a writer who Lew Sarett in the Daily News says "knows his land of the butte and the waterhole, whose note is authentic, and whose outdoor lyrics and rugged ringing ballads are contributions to American literature."

Percy, William Alexander. In April once. 1920. E 11399

Contents: Siciliana: In April once; a drama, and six poems.—Lyrical pieces.—From a soldier's notebook, poems.

Mr. Braithwaite in the Boston Transcript calls the title-drama a "delicately wrought piece with the atmosphere of the thirteenth century wavering through thought and action," and adds that in the poems Mr. Percy "has captured a strain of beauty that one cannot shake off."

Noguchi, Yoné. Japanese hokkus. 1920. E 11342

A remarkable book in that "its poems are of that sensitive and illusive loveliness that is rare in the realism of contemporary publications, and because the book links the literature of the Orient and the Occident rather more than any other poet whom we recall."—Boston Transcript.

Robinson, Edwin Meade, (Ted Robinson). Piping and panning. 1920. E 14969

A volume of humorous newspaper verse by a writer who conducts a column in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Schauffler, Robert Haven. The white comrade, and other poems. 1920. E 11570

Contents: Between two shores.—Magic casements.—Conflict.—Other poems.

The title poem has dramatic intensity and emotional appeal. It describes the appearing of the white-robed healing Savior on the battle fields to care for the wounded. Other outstanding poems are Acknowledgment, Hit, and Worship.

Stockbridge, Dorothy. Paths of June. 1920. E 11556

A first book of lyric poems which have beautiful lines and thoughts, with an occasional outstanding tribute such as "Masfield."—Booklist.

Surrey, Henry Howard, Earl of. Poems. 1920. J 4852, 1

(University of Washington publications. Language and literature.)

Walsh, Thomas. Don Folquet and other poems. 1920. E 15102

The title poem is a picturesque tale of a trader's son who became a celebrated troubadour, left the court to become a monk, and finally, when Bishop of Toulouse, pronounced a ban upon the city for its vice.

Wood, Clement. Jehovah. 1920. E 15121

A dramatic poem vigorously descriptive of an encounter between the Israelites and the Kenites in the reign of David.

Drama, The Stage

The best plays of 1919-1920 and the Year-book of the drama in America. 1920.

E 13492

A comprehensive record of the plays of the season, with excerpts and descriptive synopses of the ten best plays.

Contents: Abraham Lincoln, by J. Drinkwater.—Beyond the horizon, by E. O'Neill.—The famous Mrs. Fair, by J. Forbes.—Declassée, by Z. Aikins.—Jane Clegg, by St. J. Ervine.—The jest, by S. Benelli.—Wedding bells, by S. Field.—Mamma's affair, by R. B. Butler.—Adam and Eva, by G. Bolton and G. Middleton.—Clarence, by B. Tarkington.

Hamilton, Clayton. Seen on the stage. 1920. E 12292

Mr. Hamilton manages to display a thorough knowledge of the stage and good taste in choosing the dramas to praise. One of his most thorough criticisms is that of Eugene O'Neill, whom he thinks the greatest dramatist of the present day.—New York Post.

Patterson, Frances Taylor. Cinema craftsmanship; a book for photoplaywrights. 1920. E 13333

The author is instructor in photoplay composition in Columbia University. She believes heartily in the future possibilities of the motion picture art and writes of many phases of the subject—plots, setting, adaptation, scenario technique, the treatment of comedy, the critical angle, etc.

Platt, Agnes. Practical hints on playwriting. 1920. E 14196

In this excellent manual aspirants to success as dramatists will discover a fund of useful information, shrewd counsel and valuable suggestions concerning the choice of plot and characters, the art of writing "telling lines," practicability and the like.—Athenaeum.

Plays

Barrie, J. M. A kiss for Cinderella; a comedy. 1920. E 13503

Claudé, Paul. The city; a play. Tr. from the French by John Strong Newberry. 1920. E 13611

Forbes, James. The famous Mrs. Fair, and other plays. 1920. E 12164

Contents: The chorus lady.—The show shop.—The famous Mrs. Fair.

The title play is regarded as one of the best social comedies that has appeared within the decade. The moral is not new but is timely and suggestive.

Galsworthy, John. Plays, 4th series. 1920. E 12211, 4

Contents: A bit o' love.—The foundations.—The skin game.

The first contrasts the Christian ideal of forgiveness with the church's disciplinary attitude on divorce. The second shows that war has not lessened economic unrest. The third, using the analogy of social struggle, casts a veiled reproach on England's conduct of the war.

Shakespeare, William. The first quarto edition of Shakespeare's Hamlet; ed. with an introduction and notes, by Frank G. Hubbard. 1920. J 4855, 8

(University of Wisconsin studies in language and literature.)

Essays and Miscellanies

Arnold, Julian B. The school of sympathy; reminiscences in essay and verse. 1920. E 1805

Essays on sympathy, Sir Edwin Arnold (probably the most worth while), magic carpets, etc., by Sir Edwin Arnold's son.

Baroja, Pio. Youth and egolatri. 1920. E 1858

(The free lance books.)

Autobiographical reflections from which we gather the outline of the author's life, his philosophy of disillusionment and his opinions of other Spanish writers. Baroja is considered the first among living Spanish novelists.

Carlyle, Thomas. Past and present. 1918. E 2167

(The modern student's library.)

Crothers, Samuel McChord. The dame school of experience, and other papers. 1920. E 2320

Contents: An interview with an educator.—The teacher's dilemma.—Every man's natural desire to be somebody else.—The perils of the literate.—Natural enemies and how to make the best of them.—The spiritual adviser of efficiency experts.—The pilgrims and their contemporaries.—Education in pursuit of Henry Adams.—The hibernation of genius.—The unpreparedness of liberalism.—On the evening of the new day.

Gentle humorous essays on the adjustment of man to his environment, the first one describing the school of experience in which the individual begins his adjustment.

Gourmont, Remy de. Philosophic nights in Paris; being selections from Promenades philosophiques. 1920. E 3147

Contents: Introduction.—Hévétiüs and the philosophy of happiness.—The player's illusion.—The beyond.—The question of free will.—The insurrection of the vertebrates.—The pessimism of Leopardi.—The colors of life.—The art of seeing.—The rivers of France.—The fall of days.—Insinuations.—Footprints on the sand.

Holliday, Robert Cortes. Men and books and cities. 1920. E 3474

Contents: An indictment or foreword.—I stage my first death scene.—Meredith Nicholson and a camel.—The soul and the trap-drummer.—Why Shakespeare's audience didn't walk out on him.—Booth Tarkington discusses cosmos.—Riley and a colored barber.—Boyhood of the hero.—Miltonic angels, not Herrick blossoms.—The author goes wool gathering.—The effeminacy of pajamas.—A farewell from William Marion Reedy.—Mrs. Joyce Kilmer at Walnut Hills.—E. V. Lucas fools Chicago.—Maternity and climate.—To San Francisco: a new walking-stick paper.—A pal of Jack London.—I become a movie "director."

This whimsical survey of men and books and cities is the outgrowth of a literary pilgrimage across the United States taken by Mr. Holliday in search of literary loot. The book is full of fresh and amusing gossip about writers living in New York, Indianapolis, Chicago, and on the Coast.—New York Times.

Howe, E. W. The anthology of another town. 1920. E 3532

An anthology in prose decidedly more genial and humorous than that of Spoon River.

Kirkland, Winifred. The view vertical, and other essays. 1920. E 3979

Contents: The view vertical.—Confessions of a scene-maker.—With the why-nots.—Stylish stouts.—The friends of our friends.—An argument for absence.—On being and letting alone.—A soliloquy on sorting.—Drudgery as a fine art.—The perils of telepathy.—Family phrases.—Hold Izzy!—On adopting one's parents.—In defense of worry.—Courtships and calories.—Back-street philosophy.—April burial.—Grace before books.—Some reasons for being rejected.—The story in the making.—The wizard word.—The pleasures of the preposition.—Faces in fiction.—Background past and present.—A portrait for the contemporary.—Victuals and drink in Jane Austen.—The man in the dictionary.—Robinson Crusoe re-read.—Shakespeare on the servant problem.—A boy in a book.—Americanization and Walt Whitman.—Poetry by the pennyworth.—A little excursion in a hymnbook.—Print and pulpit.—Gift-books and book-gifts.

Whimsical humor is the keynote to all the essays

Lindsay, Vachel. The golden book of Springfield; being the review of a book that will appear in the autumn of the year 2018, and an extended description of Springfield, Illinois, in that year. 1920. E 4318

Surely the most bizarre bit of mere fantasy we have ever met with, the book is yet pervaded by spiritual conviction and an indubitable fantastic genius. . . . There is much civic criticism, fantastically expressed, that the Middle West could profitably take to heart.—New York Post.

Mackall, Lawton. Scrambled eggs. 1920. E 4422

A satire on modern social reform and reformers in the form of a story of the poultry yard.

Morgan, Emanuel, pseud. of Witter Bynner. Pins for wings. 1920. E 2139

Combines the art of metaphor with that of criticism, brilliant in the one, gently malicious in the other. It consists of five- or six-word epigrams on about two hundred contemporaries, chiefly poets. Always audacious and good fun.—Dial.

Morley, Christopher. Pipefuls. 1920. E 4482

One rejoices in passages of real charm in these crisp, amusing little essays. With a touch of satire, they are delightfully human and full of cheery good nature.

Sabin, Edwin L. How are you feeling now? With illustrations by Tony Sarg. 1919. E 5563

Starrett, Helen Ekin. The charm of fine manners; being a series of letters to a daughter. 1920. E 5752

New edition of Letters to a daughter.

Sturgis, Mrs. R. Clipston. Personal prejudices. 1920. E 5862

Contents: Preface by the author's husband.—Gardens.—Husbands and housekeeping.—Autres temps, autres mœurs.—The lost art of letter-writing.—My bolshevist.—Old friends.—New acquaintances.—House and home.—Quality versus equality.—Differences and distinctions.—Epilogue by the favourite nephew.

Whether she is writing about husbands or house-keeping, about gardens or the novelists of an elder day, comparing English and American hospitals or chronicling the trials attendant upon securing domestic help, her commentaries sparkle with the same charming wit.—New York Times.

Yeats, John Butler. Further letters of John Butler Yeats; selected by Lennox Robinson. 1920. E 6324

Continuation of Passages from the letters of John Butler Yeats, selected by Ezra Pound, E 6326.

Public Speaking

Kleiser, Grenville. Word-power, how to develop it. 1920. J 7117

Woolbert, Charles Henry. The fundamentals of speech; a behavioristic study of the underlying principles of speaking and reading; a text book of delivery. 1920. J 7122

TRAVELS AND DESCRIPTION

Anderson, William Ashley. South of Suez. 1920. I 8841

Contents: A coin is spun.—Soldiers, sand, and sentiment.—Cross and scimitar in Abyssinia.—Es-Swahil.—Zanzibar, the spicy isle.—The wilderness patrol.—Kwa Heri.

Charming sketches of the experiences of a young American who helped drive the Germans from eastern Africa and took delight in the romantic color of these strange lands.

Chesterton, G. K. The new Jerusalem. 1921. I 10906

Reflections on Jewish character, the labor problem, theological controversies, the crusades, ethical and social interplay, and of course Zionism. To comment on the brilliancy of thought and expression would be superfluous, but the catholicity of attitude is noteworthy.—Publishers' Weekly.

Cornell, Fred C. The glamour of prospecting; wanderings of a South African prospector in search of copper, gold, emeralds, and diamonds. 1920. I 8920

A veracious story simply told of experiences that possess all the fascination of romance and adventure.

Dilnot, Frank. England after the war. 1920. I 10363

An impartial report of social, industrial and political conditions in England during the present period of transition by an observer who is the more impressed by the changes that have taken place because of over two years' absence in America.

Faris, John T. Seeing the far West. 1920. I 4413

The history and geography of our western states are here combined, enlivened by original descriptions and bits of gossip. There are some vivid chapters on the scenery of Colorado, Arizona, the Yellowstone, the Sierras, Oregon, and Washington.

Parks, Leighton. English ways and by-ways; being the letters of John and Ruth Dobson, written from England to their friend. 1920. I 10362

Experiences of an American minister and his wife motoring through England and writing entertainingly about the great North road, the England of Fielding, rural England, education, a by-election, sheepdogs, the black country, the boat-race, vested interests, church and state, etc.

Pinochet, Tancredo. The gulf of misunderstanding; or, North and South America as seen by each other. 1920. I 4328

The author sets forth the views of the two Americas by a novel device in which a Chilean in Chicago writes letters home, showing such bitterness toward the United States that they outraged the feelings of a woman in the censorship office who enclosed a refutation of her own with each one.

Reed, Earl H. Tales of a vanishing river. 1920. I 4352

History and romance perpetuating the local traditions of the Kankakee River country now rapidly coming under the spell of the commercial spirit which is widening its channel, draining its swamps and cutting its forests. The illustrations are from the author's own delightful etchings.

Squires, W. H. T., comp. Guide to Norfolk, Va., Portsmouth, Virginia Beach, Ocean View, Old Point Comfort, Hampton, Newport News, and vicinity. 1920. I 2616

Contents: St. Christopher.—St. Denis.—St. Helena.—St. Alban.—St. George.—St. Nicholas.—St. Ambrose.—St. Martin.—St. Augustine of Hippo.—St. Bride.—St. Gregory the Great.—St. Augustine of Canterbury.—St. Etheldreda.—St. Swithin.—St. Dunstan.—St. Hugh of Lincoln.—St. Zita.—St. Francis of Assisi.—St. Catherine of Siena.—St. Joan of Arc.

Individual Biography

Austen, Jane. AUSTEN-LEIGH, MARY AUGUSTA. Personal aspects of Jane Austen. 1920. C 20684

Much that is new upon a subject that is always new and always old goes to the making of this little volume, which contains chapters on Jane Austen's education, upon the moral influence of her novels, and upon various members of the Austen family.—Boston Transcript.

Balfour, Arthur James. RAYMOND, E. T. A life of Arthur James Balfour. 1920. C 20732

A clever study of Mr. Balfour as a politician and statesman from the pen of a keen and shrewd observer.

Burroughs, John. BARRUS, CLARA. John Burroughs, boy and man. 1920. C 21057

A sympathetic and intimate record of the life and personality of John Burroughs, the man and the naturalist, by his private secretary, who has been for many years the companion of his walks and the confidante of his reminiscences.

Eugenie, Empress of the French. CAREY, AGNES. Empress Eugenie in exile. 1920. C 21833

The record of a sorrowful period in the life of a gentle and courageous woman, told by a companion of Eugenie's two Spanish nieces during her residence in England.

Gambetta, Léon. DESCHANEL, PAUL. Gambetta. 1920. C 22043

A biography by one who is well qualified temperamentally to interpret his great leader . . . bringing to light some new hitherto unpublished material. There is nothing else in our language that so completely covers the subject.—New York Post.

Hoover, Herbert. LANE, ROSE WILDER. The making of Herbert Hoover. 1920. L 22473

Written with the interest in really delightful settings and small circumstances of life that a novelist employs to characterize a hero. Children will like this book.—Booklist.

Kartini, Raden Adjeng. Letters of a Javanese princess, with a foreword by Louis Couperus. 1920. C 22713

Letters to friends in Holland from a Javanese regent's daughter who rebelled against Moslem tradition and the European prejudice against native progress which combined to keep the women of Java in the darkness of ignorance. Although she died young, her influence is felt today in Kartini schools all over the island.

Lincoln, Abraham. DRINKWATER, JOHN. Lincoln, the world emancipator. 1920. C 23007

The purpose is really to plead for such understanding between Britain and America as will enable them to work together in solving the problems of the world in the direction of liberty and brotherhood, and Lincoln is the sympathetic figure necessary to draw them together.—New York Times.

—MILNER, DUNCAN C. Lincoln and liquor. 1920. C 23008

Mabie, Hamilton Wright. MORSE, EDWIN WILSON. The life and letters of Hamilton W. Mabie. 1920. C 23122

A sum of letters and comments which together, rather than in particular instances, build up the consciousness of a generous and able personality.—Booklist.

Mazzini, Giuseppe. Mazzini's letters to an English family, 1844-1854, ed. and with an introduction by E. F. Richards. 1920. C 23338

They are full of a spirit of melancholy occasionally, but, more often, of a gentle interest in things of every-day life, and a certain unexpected but very delightful humor.—Boston Transcript.

Stevenson, Robert Louis. BAY, J. CHRISTIAN. Echoes of Robert Louis Stevenson. 1920. C 24374

The unpublished letters (1873-88) here gathered together from the time of the "inland voyage," interlarded with charming new bits of Stevensoniana, are combined with unusual charm in the physical structure of the book.

Tolstoy, Count Leo. GORKY, MAXIM, pseud. of A. M. Pyeshkov. Reminiscences of Leo Nicolayevitch Tolstoi. 1920. C 24577

"Gorky set out to disprove that Tolstoy was a "saint" to discourage the growing legends among the Russian people that he was a saint, but wound up by depicting him as godlike.—New York Times.

Wilson, Woodrow. HALE, WILLIAM BAYARD. The story of a style. 1920. C 24914

Beginning with an essay written at the age of twenty-two, Mr. Hale examines Mr. Wilson's writings and speeches, pointing out his excessive use of adjectives, his habits of repetition and interrogation, etc., and drawing his inferences therefrom.—Book Review Digest.

HISTORY

Inge, W. R. The idea of progress. 1920. A 2340

(The Romanes lecture.)

Dean Inge traces the ideas both of progress and decadence in the leaders of every great period and nation, concluding with a summary of present scientific knowledge regarding man's character and destiny.

Ponsonby, Arthur. Wars and treaties, 1815 to 1914. 1919. A 5961

An outline stating the belligerents, the cause, occasion, course and political result of each of forty wars, written by a member of the British Parliament who believes that the people should have a voice in the direction of foreign affairs in every country.

United States

Bangs, Mary Rogers. Old Cape Cod; the land, the men, the sea. 1920. B 7886

Fascinating reading on the old colony, the towns, the French and English wars, theology and whaling, storms and pirates, old sea ways, old sea captains and the genii of the cape and county.

Flickinger, Robert E. The pioneer history of Pocahontas County, Iowa, from the time of its earliest settlement to the present time. 1904. B 3275

Neihardt, John G. The splendid wayfaring; the story of the exploits and adventures of Jedediah Smith and his comrades, the Ashley-Henry men, discoverers and explorers of the great central route from the Missouri river to the Pacific ocean, 1822-1831. 1920. B 4581

An American prose epic, an absorbing tale of courage and endurance in the face of apparently insurmountable obstacles that does not pale at a comparison with the trials of Ulysses.—Literary Review.

Thwing, Annie Haven. The crooked and narrow streets of the town of Boston, 1630-1822. 1920. B 8022

It is replete with accurate and minute information, and yet does not lack the anecdotal vivacity which makes this kind of a book good reading.—Bookman.

European War

Hall, James Norman, and others, ed. The Lafayette flying corps. 1920. 2v. A 7134

The first volume contains a biographical sketch of each member of the corps accompanied by a photograph. The second is made up of personal experiences gathered from letters and journals of the men.

History of the Fortieth (Sunshine) division; containing a brief history and roster of all the units under the command of Major General Frederick S. Strong, 1917-1919. 1920. A 7144

Miller, Henry Russell. The First division. 1920. A 7142

The official history of the Fifth division, U. S. A., during the period of its organization and of its operations in the European world war, 1917-1919. The Red Diamond (Meuse) division. 1919. A 7143

Official history of 82nd division, American Expeditionary Forces, "All American" division, written by divisional officers designated by the division commander. 1917-1919. 1919. A 7136

Page, Thomas Nelson. Italy and the world war. 1920. A 7138

Mr. Page shows how Italy's part in the Entente was the logical result of her development through the crises of 1859, 1866 and 1870 and terminating in the irony of the previous alliance with Germany and Austria.

Stuart Sir Campbell. Secrets of Crewe house; the story of a famous campaign. 1920. A 7141

A vivid description of the time when the plans of the enemy were halted by Lord Northcliffe directing British propaganda from Crewe House by means of paper balloons, leaflet-scattering airplanes, leaflet-shooting rockets, long range movies, graphophones, etc.

A collection of German war posters.

The Peace

Baruch, Bernard M. The making of the reparation and economic sections of the treaty. 1920. A 7139

Intended to be an explanation of how and why the American delegation, without being themselves either foolish or dishonorable, came to accept a treaty which was both.—John Maynard Keynes in New York Post.

Bass, John Foster. The peace tangle. 1920. A 7140

A discussion of the League and secret peace treaties in relation to all nations concerned, advocating Wilson's war utterances as a logical basis for peace. It asserts the failure of secret treaty agreements and urges the cooperation of the United States.

FICTION

Abdullah, Achmed. The mating of the blades. 1920. F 10051

A young Englishman mysteriously called to the heart of Asia owns a wonderful sword the twin of which is in possession of the young princess, and the meeting of the two blades fulfills an old prophecy.

Adams, James Alonzo. A progressive teacher, by Grapho pseud. 1917. F 10152

Baxter, A. Beverley. The parts men play. 1920. F 10295

An interesting and well written novel of wartime England, showing the reaction of representative people to the war.

Dell, Floyd. Moon-calf. 1920. F 12444

This book was listed in the February Book Bulletin on page 30, where by a clerical error it was given the wrong call number.

Dostoevsky, Fyodor. An honest thief, and other stories. 1919. F 12540

Contents: An honest thief.—Uncle's dream.—A novel in nine letters.—An unpleasant predicament.—Another man's wife.—The heavenly Christmas tree.—The peasant Marey.—The crocodile.—Bobok.—The dream of a ridiculous man.

Stories of rather unusual interest to friends of Russian literature and Dostoevsky from the element of humor they contain.

Bower, B. M., pseud of Mrs. B. M. Sinclair. Cow-country. 1921. F 18166

A thrilling western story of cow-boys, Ute Indians, a caravan journey from Texas to Wyoming, exciting horse-races, and a great deal of action generally.

Grey, Zane. The mysterious rider. 1921. F 13229

An entertaining western story with the mountains of Colorado as a background, and with characters very vividly portrayed.

Hamsun, Knut. Hunger; with an introduction by Edwin Björkman. 1920. F 13474

Tells of a young writer whose occasional success in disposing of his wares forms but an interruption in long periods of hardship and privation. The psychology of the hunger he suffers is dwelt upon in painful detail.

Leacock, Stephen. Winsome Winnie, and other new nonsense novels. 1920. F 14675

Contents: Winsome Winnie; or, Trial and temptation.—John and I; or, How I nearly lost my husband.—The split in the cabinet; or, The fate of England.—Who do you think did it? or, The mixed-up murder mystery.—Broken barriers; or, Red love on a blue island.—The kidnapped plumber; a tale of the new time.—The blue and the grey; a pre-war war story.—Buggam Grange; a good old ghost story.

- New nonsense novels parodying in plot and style the absolutely slushy love story, detective story, ghost story, desert-island romance, etc. Some features of our present-day writing have been picked that obviously need ridicule.
- Miller, Alice Duer. The beauty and the Bolshevik. 1920. F 15367
- A gay little love story that makes merry over the difference of opinions between capital and Bolshevism.
- Richardson, Norval. Pagan fire. 1920. F 17148
- A story of political and social life, with the splendors of diplomatic Rome as its colorful background.
- Rihani, Ameen. The book of Khalid. 1911. F 17222
- The adventures and reflections of a Syrian in New York and upon his return to the Orient.
- Walpole, Hugh. The captives; a novel in four parts. 1920. F 18949
- The captives are members of a narrow religious sect in England who become doubters. The author uses the plot as a means to show how a new uncertainty is replacing the old comfortable certainty in matters of religion.
- Watts, Mary S. The noon-mark. 1920. F 19067
- Another of Mrs. Watts's delightful character studies projected against a background of American
- life in an Ohio river city and told with clearness, simplicity and understanding.
- Weale, Putnam, pseud. of Bertram L. Simpson. Wang the Ninth; the story of a Chinese boy. 1920. F 18108
- Wylie, Ida A. R. Children of storm. 1920. F 19897
- A hasty war marriage between people of different social and financial levels, and the readjustment after the war, brings out the old struggle to overcome class prejudices.
- Yeziarska, Anzia. Hungry hearts. 1920. F 19923
- Contents:* Wings.—Hunger.—The lost "beautifulness."—The free vacation house.—The miracle.—Where lovers dream.—Soap and water.—"The fat of the land."—My own people.—How I found America.
- A collection of sketches portraying the Russian immigrant in the Ghetto in his struggles to attain to the higher things of life.
- Young, F. Brett and E. Brett. Undergrowth. 1920. F 19926
- A mystical novel depicting the conflict between modern man (in the person of a Scotch engineer) and the ancient pagan forces still dominant in the atmosphere of a wild Welsh valley. It is a successful story without a woman in it, and beautifully written.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S BOOKS

Miscellaneous

The Work of the Year in the Public Library

THE forty-ninth annual report of the Board of Directors for the calendar year 1920, gives the following tables of home use of books through the various circulation centers of the Public Library.

HOME CIRCULATION

	AGENCIES		VOLUMES
	1919	1920	1919	1920
Central Library	1	1	827,353	859,998
Branches	44	45	4,082,015	4,090,508
High School libraries.....	6	7	332,638	320,616
Traveling libraries	70	69	1,058,793	992,053
Deposit stations	85	112	333,712	337,642
Schoolroom deposits	1,336	1,542	419,381	606,090
Delivery stations	23	16	123,986	88,943
Delivery stations in branches	45	163,180	179,280
Delivery stations in high schools	1	2,411	3,230
Delivery stations in deposits	45	136,998	134,198
Branch reference	28,800	39,370
Total	1,565	1,792	7,509,267	7,651,928
Daily average circulation.....	24,702	25,006
Total increase	142,661
Registered card holders:
General	219,267	226,649
Local	54,508	59,920
Industrial deposits	28,160	37,164
Schools	60,120	69,840
Total	362,055	393,573

The most interesting figures in the above tables are those indicating the extension of schoolroom deposits, a form of library service that is much appreciated by many teachers in the public and private schools of the city. An increase of 206 in the number of these installations and of nearly 200,000 in the number of volumes used indicates that the library is steadily progressing in its plans to develop work with teachers and schools until every room in the city is covered.

As a whole the statistics reveal only slight progress over the preceding year, the branches, with a total circulation of over 4,000,000 volumes, showing a gain of only 8,000. This is directly due to the continued and aggravated shortage in the supply of competent help, which resulted in closing six of the smaller branches in October and the seven high school libraries during September and October. To this was added the difficulty of keeping an adequate book supply in commission because of the frail and inferior makeup of most of the modern books, which wore out faster than they could be replaced. Under normal conditions the total home use of books should have exceeded eight million volumes, and failure to reach that figure is clearly ascribable to the untoward conditions mentioned. The unfortunate contraction in revenue for 1921 will doubtless result in a further loss of ground during the current year and will, of course, preclude any addition to equipment or extension of activities.

In the various reference and reading rooms of the Central Library, 905,511 volumes were consulted. The Music Room and the Civics and Documents Division show especially heavy increases in numbers of patrons served.

The total number of books now in the Library system is 1,075,292, distributed among 1,792 agencies in all parts of the city. Of the latter, the largest is of course the Central Library, housing in excess of 600,000 volumes, and the smallest, the schoolroom collections, each comprising fifty volumes.

In point of home circulation the Chicago Public Library ranks second from the top among the public libraries of the United States and, therefore, of the world. In per capita cost of the Library to the citizens, i. e. in financial support, it ranks fifth from the bottom in a table of American public libraries in cities of a population of 200,000 and over. Among the largest ten cities all but one spend more money for public library support than Chicago; some of them twice and thrice as much.

Books Added to the Library

Books marked * do not circulate; those with the letter P are in the Art room, and those marked Doc. are in the Document department. *Ser. represents serials which do not circulate.

Poetry

Corbin, Alice, (Mrs. W. P. Henderson). Red earth; poems of New Mexico. 1920. E 11023

Research into a field of poetical materials still new and vastly promising, the field of Amerindian lore . . . The adaptations and interpretations take a sure place alongside the work of Mary Austin, Constance Lindsay Skinner and Natalie Curtis Burlin.—Nation.

Walsh, Thomas, ed. Hispanic anthology; poems translated from the Spanish by English and North American poets. 1920. E 14339

(Hispanic notes and monographs.)

Scholarly and charming . . . Mr. Walsh's selections are at once comprehensive and representative, ranging from the beginning of Spanish poetry (about 1150) to the very young poet Muñoz Marín, born in Puerto Rico as late as 1898.—New York Times.

Weaver, John V. A. In American; poems. 1921. E 15105

Poems by a recent Chicagoan, dramatic in themselves and heightened in effect by the vernacular in which they are written. Although at times sentiments seem slightly exaggerated and unreal, for the most part they ring true and convincing. Such poems as "Moonlight" achieve an unexpected beauty.

Theater, Drama

Brown University, (Providence, R. I.) Library. Plays of today; 100 of the best modern dramas. 1920. *O 1208

An annotated reading list for students.

Aeschylus. The Agamemnon of Aeschylus; tr. into English rhyming verse with explanatory notes, by Gilbert Murray. 1920. L 12277

Bolton, Guy, and Middleton, George. The light of the world; a modern drama. 1920. E 13507

Oberammergau is the scene of this play, which takes place between the selection of the actors and the opening of the Passion Play. It illustrates the discrepancy between the life and teaching of Christ and the practice of His followers.

Gammer Gvrtons needle, by Mr. S. Mr. of Art; ed. by H. F. B. Brett-Smith. 1920. J 7582, 2

(The Percy reprints, No. 2.)

A sixteenth-century comedy formerly ascribed to John Still, bishop of Bath and Wells, or to John Bridges, bishop of Oxford, but now attributed to William Stevenson, of Christ's College, Cambridge.

Harris, Rendel. The return of the "May-flower;" an interlude. 1919. E 12295

Will interest those whose curiosity as to the history of the little ship itself is sufficiently keen to lead them through a somewhat discouraging amount of argument and documentary evidence.—Bookman.

Herrick, Gertrude. The full of the moon; an Irish play in one act. 1920. E 13169

Poet Lore plays.

Kaiser, Georg. From morn to midnight; a modern mystery in seven scenes. 1920. E 13169

Poet Lore plays.

Kreymborg, Alfred. Plays for merry Andrews. 1920. E 12484

Contents: Vote the new moon; a toy play.—At the sign of the thumb and nose; an unmorality play.—Uneasy street; a folk play.—The silent waiter; a tragi-comedy.—Monday; a lame minuet.

Full of madness and delight and bewilderment. Their unreality and irony are invigorating and real, and Gordon Craig was quite right in considering them as a test for actors. The title should warn the professionals off and attract the amateur.—Dial.

Lee, Vernon, pseud. of Violet Paget. Satan, the waster; a philosophic war trilogy with notes and introduction. 1920. E 14184

A symbolical drama in which the world war is a great ballet planned by Satan and managed by Death, his ballet master . . . The author regards war as a delusion of under-educated, under-civilized men instigated by Satan, the waster of human virtue.—Booklist.

Nathan, George Jean. The theatre, the drama, the girls. 1921. E 12660

Mr. Nathan attacks his subjects ruthlessly, and in a striking and spectacular manner, but whether one agrees with him or not, one is bound to concede the keenness and brilliance of his criticism.

Pelée, Lillian Sutton. At the Little Pipe; a Hungarian folk play in two scenes. 1920. E 13169

Poet Lore plays.

Bourne, Randolph S. History of a literary radical, and other essays; ed. with an introduction, by Van Wyck Brooks. 1920. E 2069

Contents: History of a literary radical.—Our cultural humility.—Six portraits: Karen, Sophonisba, Mon amie, Fergus, The Professor, One of our conquerors.—This older generation.—A mirror of the middle west.—Ernest; or, Parent for a day.—On discussion.—The puritan's will to power.—The immanence of Dostoevsky.—The art of Theodore Dreiser.—The uses of infallibility.—Impressions of Europe.—Trans-national America.—Fragment of a novel.

Randolph Bourne's interests were as wide as the world; his views were true and tempered; his style is simple and effective . . . Freedom and intellectual adventure, the overthrow of the Puritan, the exorcism of dogma, the approach of social equality—these things he demanded.—Nation.

Chesterton, G. K. The uses of diversity; a book of essays. 1921. E 2358

In this collection of essays Mr. Chesterton does justice to his natural ingenuity and his solid background . . . Probably no writer writes so much and at the same time so well.—Keith Preston in Daily News.

Moore, F. Frankfort. A garden of peace; a medley in quietude. 1920. E 4473

A book of literary, artistic and philosophical digressions interspersing garden lore and atmosphere.

Somerville, E. C., and Ross, Martin, pseud. Stray-aways. 1920. E 5627

Little run-away trips into queer country spots in Ireland and France, a longer visit to Denmark, both amusing and instructive . . . A droll humor and fine character appreciation both in words and sketches.—Booklist.

Wilson, T. P. Cameron. Waste paper philosophy; to which has been added Maggies in Picardy, and other poems. 1920. E 6465

Bits of a wholesome and sympathetic philosophy of life addressed to an imaginary son by a young Oxonian in France, together with fugitive poems found in his war-diary.

Woodberry, George Edward. Heart of man, and other papers. 1920. E 6427

Contents: Heart of man: Taormina; A new defence of poetry; Democracy; The ride.—The praise of English books.—Two phases of criticism: Historical criticism; Esthetic criticism.—Wendell Phillips, the faith of an American.

Public Speaking

Mosher, Joseph A. The effective speaking voice; with passages for practical application. 1920. J 7123

BIOGRAPHY

Bairnsfather, Bruce, and Mutch, W. A. The Bairnsfather case as tried before Mr. Justice Busby, defense by Bruce Bairnsfather, prosecution by W. A. Mutch. 1920. C 20728

Old Bill and his creator are back in the paths of literature again, both in the life history of Mr. Bairnsfather and in sundry drawings . . . If anything in late years has been more amusing than Mr. Bairnsfather's adventures in print it is his adventures in black and white as drawn by himself.—Boston Transcript.

Coles, Edward. NORTON, W. T. Edward Coles, second governor of Illinois. 1911. C 21308

Story of his removal to Illinois, the freeing of his slaves, and his fight to keep Illinois free from slavery.

James, Benjamin. The descendants of Benjamin James, Narragansett; 1665. 1920. C 20311

Mallock, W. H. Memoirs of life and literature. 1920. C 23228

His career has been a unique combination of social enjoyment and earnest endeavor . . . He has sought to suggest the general terms on which the ideals of a true conservatism may be harmonized with those of an enlightened socialism, and he has always been a staunch upholder of the value of religious belief.—Bookman.

Meredith, George. ELLIS, S. M. George Meredith; his life and friends in relation to his work. 1920. C 23375

Personal details which throw the character of the novelist in rather an unpleasant light. Mr. Ellis belongs to what was apparently an uncongenial branch of the Meredith family.

Wentworth, Edward N. A biographical catalog of the portrait gallery of the Saddle and Sirloin Club. 1920. K 24212

TRAVEL AND DESCRIPTION

Freeman, Lewis R. In the tracks of the trades; the account of a fourteen thousand mile yachting cruise to the Hawaiis, Marquesas, Societies, Samoas and Fijis. 1920. I 9188

Goodhart, Arthur L. Poland and the minority races. 1920. I 10565

An entertaining diary kept by the author from July 12 to Sept. 13, 1919, while acting as counsel to the commission sent by President Wilson, at Premier Paderewski's request, to investigate Jewish pogroms in Poland.

Russell, Ruth. What's the matter with Ireland? 1920. I 10269

Contents: What's the matter with Ireland?—Sinn Fein and revolution.—Irish labor and class revolution.—A E's peaceful revolution.—The Catholic church and communism.—What about Belfast?

Miss Russell has undertaken her theme objectively, in the best reportorial sense, and by sounding a number of disparate apostles—as widely dissimilar as De Valera, George Russell, Countess Markiewicz and the Bishop of Killaloe—she manages to throw light upon all phases of the problem.—Freeman.

Wells, H. G. Russia in the shadows. 1921. I 10550

Mr. Wells reports as hopeless a condition in Russia as Bertrand Russell found. He believes that unless some outside power comes to the rescue of the existing government, Russia will become Asiatic once more and form a large hole in civilization into which all Europe may eventually fall.

United States, Cuba

Canby, Henry Seidel. Everyday Americans. 1920. I 4329

Contents: The American mind.—Conservative America.—Radical America.—American idealism.—Religion in America.—Literature in America.—The bourgeois American.

A delightful and sincere study of the national mind by an American of many generations. He holds our conservative-liberal attitude and lack of self-criticism responsible for failure to gain an adequate conception of industrial democracy.

Fairbanks, Harold W. California. 1920. I 11765

(The new progressive geographies developed according to the problem method.)

Hergesheimer, Joseph. San Cristóbal de la Habana. 1920. I 11815

The novelist's imagination has run riot among the splendid trifles of Havana, translating the ordinary into the extraordinary, weaving the commonplace into a texture of colorful romance.—New York Times.

Luttig, John C. Journal of a fur-trading expedition on the upper Missouri, 1812–1813. 1920. I 4429

Smith, C. W. Journal of a trip to California, across the continent from Weston, Mo., to Weber Creek, Cal., in the summer of 1850. 1920. I 4414

Wang, Yates M. The United States as seen by a Chinese. 1919. J 10161
Chinese text, reprinted from the Shun Pao.

FICTION

Aikman, Henry G. Zell. 1921. F 10403

A study of the development of the boy Zell is the main interest in this story of a middle class American family. The plot interest is slight, the characterization clear cut and the combination very readable.

Atherton, Gertrude. The sisters-in-law; a novel of our time. 1921. F 10715

A story of class consciousness and the snobbishness of traditions with the scene extended from San Francisco at the time of the earthquake to France after the armistice.

Bachelor, Irving. The prodigal village; a Christmas tale. 1920. F 10769

Sketchy chapters of village life portraying the various types of modern society, not without a plea for the simple old virtues that contributed to a sane wholesomeness of living.

Bradley, Mary Hastings. The innocent adventuress. 1921. F 20681

A young Italian girl comes to America in pursuit of a fortune by marriage, to make it possible for her less attractive sister to secure a dowry. How she succeeds is the plot of a story, simple and sentimental, but wholesome.

Clemenceau, Georges. The surprises of life. 1920. F 12002

Short stories about the types of French people found in the provinces.

Dawson, Coningsby. The little house. 1920. F 12354

A slight but pleasing story of war days in London. The little house tells how, forsaken during an air raid, it becomes the shelter of a young war widow and her children, and how a young American officer after the horrors of the battlefield, also found refuge there. A pretty little love story follows.

Fletcher, J. S. The orange-yellow diamond. 1921. F 12856

A thrilling detective story in which innocent people get mixed up with a murder mystery. A young author has written some stories and while waiting for his check visits a pawnshop and here the trouble begins.

Ford, Sewell. Meet 'em with Shorty McCabe. 1921. F 22205

Clever short stories, snappy in plot and reeking with American slang.

France, Anatole. Little Pierre. 1920. J 154, 24

Gibbs, George. The vagrant duke. 1921. F 13215

The duke turns American and falls into enthralling adventures, which are well conceived and cleverly developed. The story concludes satisfactorily.

Hudson, W. H. Dead Man's Plack, and An old thorn. 1920. F 14152

The first is a powerfully told folktale of Saxon England a thousand years ago; the second is the tragedy of a young countryman who a century ago was hanged for stealing a sheep in fulfillment of an old superstition, because he had once insulted a thorn tree.

Irwin, Wallace. Seed of the sun. 1921. F 14257

A romantic, colorful story of the Little Japan of the Sacramento Valley, where a young New York widow, inheriting a fruit farm, goes with her children and sister to live. They find themselves caught in the yellow net and their admiration for the race is changed to distrust.

Lynn, Margaret. Free soil. 1920. F 24774

The struggle to keep Kansas free from slavery in the days before the Civil War is the theme of this story. It depicts the life of the settlers, who for the sake of principle, took up claims, endured hardships, established a staple government and fought for a just cause.

McMichael, Charles B., tr. Short stories from the Spanish. 1920. F 24881

Contents: Dario; The death of the Empress of China; The Veil of Queen Mab; The box.—Picon: After the battle; The menace; Souls in contrast.—Alas: Adios Cordera!

Nashe, Thomas. The unfortunate traveller; or, The life of Jacke Wilton. 1920. J 7582, 1

(The Percy reprints.)

A novel by a prominent satirist, poet, and dramatist, published in 1594.

Oppenheim, E. Phillips. Jacob's ladder. 1921. F 15804

A rather fantastic story in which the characters do the strangest and most unexpected things, and the diverting intervals are the rounds of Jacob's ladder by which the hero reaches his goal.

Richards, Clarice E. A tenderfoot bride; tales from an old ranch. 1920. F 17143

The amusing adventures of an Eastern couple whose first home is a large ranch in Colorado where sheep are tended by Mexicans, and one's table companions are the rough cowboys of the West. The story is simply told and the human interest element is strong.

Vorse, Mary Heaton. The ninth man. 1920. F 18807

A story of feudal times in Italy. Egidio Mazzeone, who has just captured a town, desirous of novelty, decrees that at the end of the month "each ninth man shall designate secretly whom he wishes put to death in the public place." The reader feels relieved when in the end the stricken city is redeemed.

New Books for the Blind

THIS list includes books for the blind which the Library has received since the list printed in the Book Bulletin of October, 1919. About two hundred volumes have been added since that time, and these new titles contain some very good literature of a comparatively recent date. Except when the word "Uncontracted" is added, the type includes contractions of grade 1½ or 2.

Books from this collection are loaned to blind residents of the State of Illinois, and may be called for at the Library or may be sent free through the mails to the nearest post office or postal station. They are shelved in the Newspaper and Patents Room, in the main building, first floor, at the right of the Randolph Street entrance, and may be obtained on any week day (not a legal holiday) between the hours of 9 a. m. and 5:30 p. m.

Information for Borrowers of Books for the Blind.

1. When ordering books, borrowers should send a list of at least six numbers or titles in order of preference, and when the book number is not used should indicate the type desired.
2. Whenever possible each book should be returned as soon as read.
3. Books may be kept one month, and then renewed for one more.
4. Books sent by mail must be well protected by several thicknesses of newspaper and a strong outer wrapper, and must be wrapped so as to be examined easily. On the upper left corner of wrapper place the name of the sender, and on the upper right corner write: "Free. Reading matter for the blind." A package weighing more than 4 pounds should contain only one volume.
5. The Library must be notified if packages are not received in good condition.
6. The telephone number of the Library is Central 5822.
7. Letters about books for the blind should be addressed to: Chicago Public Library, Chicago, Ill.

Keats, John. Catalogue of a loan exhibition commemorating the anniversary of the death of John Keats, (1821-1921), held at the Public Library of the city of Boston, February 21 to March 14, 1921. *O 1084

Library Science, Bookplates

Bostwick, Arthur E. Library essays; papers related to the work of public libraries. 1920. J 7282

The second of two volumes of live, forward looking addresses and papers written without any formidable seriousness, but with a pleasant talkative ease which attracts the beginner to the possibilities of the work.—Booklist.

Brangwyn, Frank. Bookplates. 1920.

*P 3791

Reproductions with a foreword by Eden Phillpotts and a technical note by E. Hesketh Hubbard.

PHILOSOPHY

Carr, H. Wildon. The philosophy of Benedetto Croce; the problem of art and history. 1917. L 14699

It offers a refreshing approach to some of the oldest philosophical problems and enchantingly makes philosophy seem a very realistic and vital concern. It relates itself to the everyday fact and problem more convincingly even than the pragmatism of William James or the gospel of the utilitarians.—New York Times.

Marcus Aurelius. Sonnets from Marcus Aurelius by James Vila Blake. 1920.

L 5799

The Greek and prose rendering are placed together, and the sonnet opposite them.

Sorley, W. R. A history of English philosophy. 1920. L 14722

There can be no two opinions about the competence and scholarship of Professor Sorley's treatment, and the style, if serviceable rather than brilliant, is always lucid and direct. . . . This is the best history of English philosophy which has yet been produced.—New Republic.

Psychology

Drummond, Margaret. Five years old or thereabouts; some chapters on the psychology and training of little children. 1920. L 13684

Freud, Sigmund. Dream psychology; psychoanalysis for beginners. 1920. L 13646

Haviland, Mary S. Character training in childhood. 1921. L 14303

An especially valuable book for mothers, as it covers the whole field—physical, mental and moral—in a sane and attractive way. It is conservative in its standards but scientific and progressive in its methods, making very clear the psychological basis for any suggested course.

Martin, Everett Dean. The behavior of crowds; a psychological study. 1920. L 13944

The author holds that "as a practical problem, the habit of crowd making is daily becoming a more serious menace to civilization. Events are making it more and more clear that pressing as are certain economic questions, the forces which threaten society are really psychological." (Foreword).

Spiritism

Chevreuil, L. Proofs of the spirit world (On ne meurt pas). 1920. L 13543

A discussion of spiritism and reincarnation bringing forward and evaluating by the scientific method the evidence of many inquirers.

Crockett, Albert S. Revelations of Louise. 1920. L 13518

The records of spiritualistic communications from a departed daughter to her parents through non-professional means.

The unseen doctor, formerly published in England as One thing I know; or, The power of the unseen. Authorized ed., with preface by J. Arthur Hill. 1920. L 13519

(The psychic series.)

There is nothing fantastic in the story, and it is told with such convincing truth that the reader seems to have no choice save to accept it on its face value.—Springfield Republican.

RELIGION

Kent, Charles Foster, and Jenks, Jeremiah Whipple. Jesus' principles of living. 1920. M 7142

(The Bible's message to modern life.)

The two distinguished university professors, one in Biblical study and the other in political science, have worked together to expound the teachings of Jesus to our modern world.—Boston Transcript.

Mills, Philo Laos. Prehistoric religion; a study in pre-Christian antiquity. M 9612

"An examination of the religious beliefs of the Oceanic, Central African, and Amazonian primitives, their development among the later Indo-Asiatic and Totemic peoples, their interpretation by the western-Asiatic and Caucasian races of Neolithic culture, and their possible connexion with the earliest religion of mankind."

Pratt, James Bissett. The religious consciousness; a psychological study. 1920. M 9746

A scientific study of the religious consciousness of today, including also a consideration of the problems of comparative religion and five chapters on the phenomena of mysticism.

The Church

Duncan-Jones, A. S. Church music. 1920. M 8863

(Handbooks of Catholic faith and practice.)

Horae eboracenses; the prymer, or hours of the Blessed Virgin Mary, according to the use of the illustrious Church of York, with other devotions as they were used by the lay-folk in the northern province, in the XVth and XVIth centuries. 1920. *A1065, 132

(The publications of the Surtees Society.)

Smyth, Newman, and Walker, Williston, ed. Approaches towards church unity. 1919. M 9967

Contents: Walker: The early development of church officers.—Smyth: Vital principles of church development; Concerning schism.—Calkins: The historical method of approach; The place of the creed in the life of the church.—Brent: Concerning unity.—Smyth: Some historical materials for present uses; Historical precedents and opinions.

Stowell, Jay S. Story-worship programs for the church school year. 1920. M 8256

Christian Science

Snowden, James H. The truth about Christian Science, the founder and the faith. 1920. L 15103

The conscientious attempt of a professor of systematic theology to present an analytical summary of the history of the movement and the doctrines of the cult.

THE SOCIAL SCIENCES

Economics

Carver, Thomas Nixon. Elementary economics. 1920. L 16698

It is the purpose of this book to examine the economic foundations of our national welfare and to point out some of the simpler and more direct methods of strengthening these foundations.—Introduction.

Dunn, Arthur. The new world; a story of labor unrest—it's cause and cure. 1919. L 16699

Fackler, Edward B. Notes on life insurance practically explained. 1920. L 19272

"An elementary treatise on the principles governing life insurance and their technical application, designed especially for the use of colleges, students and all persons interested in the subject."

Hobson, J. A. The morals of economic internationalism. 1920. L 16700

The author postulates that there is absolutely no case for an international morality lower than industrial morality. . . . Mr. Hobson's final plea is that America should interpose her wealth and power to stop the awful march to starvation and anarchy of the European populations.—Nation.

Lynch, Frank E. The pathfinder of the great western empire. 1920. L 17495

"Devoted to the purpose of assisting the public in finding useful government land for farms, timber, grazing and minerals; describes vacant land in California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Nevada, Utah, Idaho, Montana, and New Mexico."

Moulton, Harold G. The financial organization of society. 1921. L 17301

Political Science

Depew, Chauncey M. Speeches and literary contributions at fourscore and four. 1918. L 15484

Fenwick, Charles G. Political systems in transition; war-time and after. 1920. L 15758

(The Century new world series.)

An excellent account of the shake-up in governments produced by the war, full of material which must be included in any adequate history.—Boston Transcript.

Macdonald, J. Ramsay. A policy for the Labour party. 1920. L 16557

(The new era series.)

The bulk of the book deals with the vexed question of how far labor is fitted to undertake the responsibilities of government.—New Republic.

Merriam, Charles Edward. American political ideas; studies in the development of American political thought 1865-1917. 1920. L 15794

Continuation of History of American political theories, L6932.

A systematic examination of liberalism under a democratic guise, seeking to understand and control the steady drift toward industrial centralization.—Nation.

Villiers, Brougham, pseud. of F. J. Shaw, and Chesson, W. H. Anglo-American relations, 1861-1865. 1920. L 16344

Law

Blakemore, Arthur W. Make your will; a guide to the drafting of a valid will under the laws of any state. 1920. N 5411

Intended to enable the layman to give expression to his wishes in a legally accredited way.

Clute, William K. The law of modern municipal charters, and the organization of cities on commission, city-manager and federal plans. 1920. 2v. *R 723

"A commentary on the home-rule laws of Arizona, California, Colorado, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Texas, and Washington, including as models the complete charters of Dayton, Des Moines, Galveston, Grand Rapids, Houston and St. Louis."

Education

Beard, Frederica. Pictures in religious education. 1920. L 19902

A practical little manual prepared especially for Sunday-School teachers, but suggestive also for other groups.—Booklist.

Cubberley, Ellwood P., comp. Readings in the history of education; a collection of sources and readings to illustrate the development of educational practice, theory, and organization. 1920. L 19453

(Riverside textbooks in education.)

The readings which this volume reproduces are gathered together and made to run parallel with, and to supplement, the author's History of education, L19449.

Harvard University. Tenth report of the class of 1870 of Harvard College, 1920; fiftieth anniversary. 1920. L 20006

Meiklejohn, Alexander. The liberal college. 1920. L 19951

(The Amherst books.)

Only less admirable than his assertion of academic freedom is the author's plea for a liberal as against a technical education. Whether or not the suggestions are specific improvements, the present volume makes one deeply grateful that there is, in a position of authority, a man so fully convinced that learning is a noble thing.—Nation.

Pittenger, Benjamin Floyd. Rural teachers' training departments in Minnesota high schools. 1914. L 20001, 2

(The University of Minnesota. Current problems.)

Social Welfare

Hart, Joseph Kinmont. Community organization. 1920. L 15307

(The social welfare library.)

A discussion of the theory and significance of community, including chapters on community deliberation, the problem of leadership, and the desirability of a human program.

Hoyt, Franklin Chase. Quicksands of youth. 1921. L 18929

A number of incidents in narrative form, by Judge Hoyt of the Children's Court of New York city, from the records of his court. They betray a deep sympathy with children and a genial humor and, the Survey thinks, have an O. Henry flavor.

Warber, Gustav P. Social and economic survey of a community in northeastern Minnesota. 1915. L 20001, 5

(The University of Minnesota. Current problems.)

Mills, Enos A. Waiting in the wilderness. 1921. K 20698

Mr. Mills is caught this time chasing bears about the Continental Divide and digging for fossils in mountain sides of volcanic ashes. He dwells briefly on the habits of beavers, explodes the superstition of ground-hog day, and tells of a twig and bark eating horse that lived before grass developed.

Sampson, R. A. Theory of the four great satellites of Jupiter. 1921. *V 418, 63
(Memoirs of the Royal Astronomical Society.)

Thomson, J. Arthur. The system of animate nature. 1920. 2v. M4742, 1915-16

The Gifford lectures.

If these Gifford lectures had no other value they would be welcome for their simple and comprehensive statement of the present phase of the Darwinian theory.—The Times (London).

Staley, S. C. and Lowery, D. M. Manual of gymnastic dancing, adopted by the Y. M. C. A. Physical directors' society. 1920. K30305

The first part deals with the history of gymnastic dancing from pre-Grecian days, with the educational value and the method of teaching it, including the selection and use of music. The second gives sample dances, described in detail, ranging from preliminary exercises to the most involved folk dances for men.

Athletics, Lawn Tennis

Inter-Allied games, Paris, 22nd June to 6th July, 1919. 1919. K30488

Tilden, William T. The art of lawn tennis. 1921. K30663

A volume containing much valuable advice by a world's champion, and the fact of its authorship is enough to give it significance and authority although it contains nothing that depends on novelty to give it sensational interest.

LITERATURE

Bierce, Ambrose. STARRETT, VINCENT. Ambrose Bierce. 1920. J7043

Emerson, Ralph Waldo. CROTHERS, SAMUEL McCHORD. Ralph Waldo Emerson. 1921. J7042

A sympathetic and appreciative introduction to Emerson the man as well as to his writing which is likely to prove enjoyable to those who have found Emerson difficult as to those who are already familiar with his philosophy.

Fowler, W. Warde. Aeneas at the site of Rome; observations on the eighth book of the Aeneid. 1918. L2868

A book on ancient Rome full of charm and interest.

Hearn, Lafcadio. Talks to writers. 1920. J7656

This book was listed in the March Book Bulletin on page 44, where by a clerical error it was given the wrong call number.

Lynd, Robert. The art of letters. 1921. J6392

The author succeeds in impressing the reader with his own real love for the English masterpieces he writes about, from Bunyan to the Georgian poets. His papers are infectious in their enthusiasm and inspiring for the real understanding they exhibit.

Mencken, H. L. Prejudices; first and second series. 1919-1920. 2v. J 6439

The best essay of the second series is the first—a survey of American literature and Mencken's analysis of the reason for its poverty. The essay on Roosevelt is provocative and interesting though it will not be approved by Roosevelt's admirers.

Murry, J. Middleton. Aspects of literature. 1920. J 7661

An essay on criticism followed by others which exemplify the principles therein set forth, including one on American poetry.

Squire, J. C. Life and letters; essays. 1921. J 7667

The editor of the London Mercury, a leading English poet and a discerning literary critic, here writes in a clear-cut style and with insight and delightful humor on subjects pertaining to books, including new, familiar, and half-forgotten ones.

Whibley, Charles. Literary studies. 1919. J 6374

Contents. The chroniclers and historians of the Tudor age.—Tudor translators.—Rogues and vagabonds of Shakespeare's time.—Sir Walter Raleigh.—The court poets.—Congreve and some others.—An under world of letters.—Jonathan Swift.

Poetry

Blackburn, Laura. Lyrics. 1920. E 10669

(The little bookfellow series.)
Songs of love and nature by the Chicago poet whose verses appeared so often in B. L. T.'s Line o' Type column in the Chicago Tribune.

Blake, James Vila. Sonnets from Marcus Aurelius. 1920. L 5799

Metcalf, David B. Heart-felt poems. 1921. E 14868

Ridge, Lola. Sun-up, and other poems. 1920. E 14956

Reality which comes rarely into poetry, can come by intuition or by research. Sun-up, a poem of childhood, is real by virtue of both those things. It is the work of a memory intensified by effort and improved by psychology.—Nation.

Roth, Samuel. Europe; a book for America. 1919. E 14972

Vansittart, Robert. The singing caravan; a Sufi tale. 1919. E 15092

The charm of Persian landscape, the wealth of Persian poetry have been woven into these tales, and they may be read just as profitably for the pictures they paint as for the lessons they teach.—Springfield Republican.

Welles, Winifred. The hesitant heart. 1919. E 15107

Will be highly prized by those who find excellence in sweet-blooded serenity, in piety that finds no sacrilege in unembittered laughter, in a fine receptivity to loveliness, and in autobiographical restraint.—Bookman.

Drama

Guitry, Sacha. Deburau, a comedy. 1921. E 13795

It is good because Sacha Guitry still has faith in the great realities of love and art and is able to show how they justify a life even if the art is but the art of a clown and the object of the love one not worthy such devotion.—Bookman.

Heidenstam, Verner von. The soothsayer. 1919. E 13811

A one-act play on a classical Greek subject.

Irish, Marie. The Christmas entertainer; recitations, monologues, drills with songs, exercises and dialogues, for all ages. 1919. J 5954

Lytton, Grace. Scenario writing today. 1921. E 13328

There is much solid advice in the book, as to picturing words, the necessity of simplicity, sincerity, the toning of the atmosphere and story. There is a wealth of corroborative evidence culled from literary giants.—New York Post.

Parker, Louis N. The Liebler Co.'s production of Joseph and his brethren; a pageant play in four acts based on the Biblical narrative. 1913. P 4534

The souvenir book of the play.

Shay, Frank, and Loving, Pierre, ed. Fifty contemporary one-act plays. 1920. E 14229

The efforts of the younger American dramatists are given prominence in this compilation as representing the new American drama. The remaining plays include about twenty translations from contemporary foreign playwrights.

Essays

Bostwick, Arthur E. A librarian's open shelf; essays on various subjects. 1920. E 2042

Contents: Do readers read.—What makes people read.—The passing of the possessive; a study of book titles.—Selective education.—The uses of fiction.—The value of association.—Modern educational methods.—Some economic features of libraries.—Simon Newcomb: America's foremost astronomer.—The companionship of books.—Atomic theories of energy.—The advertisement of ideas.—The public library, the public school, and the social center movement.—The systematization of violence.—The art of re-reading.—History and heredity.—What the flag stands for.—The people's share in the public library.—Some tendencies of American thought.—Drugs and the man.—How the community educates itself.—Clubwomen's reading.—Books for tired eyes.—The magic casement.—A word to believers.

Frazer, Sir James George. Sir Roger de Coverley, and other literary pieces. 1920. E 2968

Contents:—Sir Roger de Coverley: A visit to Coverley Hall; The Spectator in the country; Sir Roger in Cambridge; Sir Roger in Covent Garden; Sir Roger in the Temple.—The quest of the Gorgon's head.—Biographical sketches: William Cowper; William Robertson Smith; Fison and Howitt.—Miscellaneous.

A collection of essays of rare quality, by the author of "The golden bough".

Lucas, E. V. The phantom journal, and other essays and diversions. 1920. E 4363

Where he particularly shines is in discovering old books and people to save him the trouble of writing the essay himself; nobody has a more delicate gift of literary connoisseurship than he nor a more engaging manner in producing his curiosities.—London Times.

TRAVEL AND DESCRIPTION

Curle, J. H. This world of ours. 1921. I 11367

Mr. Curle became a mining engineer in order to see the world, and this he has literally done though admitting that he has "no notion what it all means." He visited more than 500 gold mines in 40 countries from the Klondike to the South Seas and uttermost parts of Asia and Africa and tells it all in an engaging way.

Harris, John H. Africa: slave or free? 1920. I 9014

A discussion of negro labor in Africa and its crying need written with the fervor of the abolitionists of old ante-bellum days.

Marden, Philip Sanford. Sailing south. 1921. I 11823

Enticing excursions into Cuba, Porto Rico, Jamaica and Panama divertingly described. Mr. Marden thinks it important to encourage social and commercial intercourse with our southern neighbors in order more closely to cement friendly alliances with them.

(Michelin illustrated guides to the battlefields, 1914-1918.)

France, Belgium

The Americans in the great war. 1920. 3v. I 2687
(Michelin illustrated guides to the battlefields 1914-1918.)
v. 1. The second battle of the Marne (Château-Thierry, Soissons, Fismes).

2. The battle of St. Mihiel (St. Mihiel, Pont-à-Mousson, Metz).
3. The Meuse-Argonne battlefields (Monfaucon, Romagne, Sainte-Menehould).

Dell, Robert. My second country (France). 1920. I 11848

The work of one who lived long and deeply in France, who suffered indignities from French officials because he was loyal to the France of Voltaire and Montesquieu, and who writes of France as a positivist and a socialist sees her.—Dial.

Gibbons, Herbert Adams. Riviera towns. 1920. I 11857

Instead of an amplified guidebook, he has given a real chronicle of his journey, and each place he describes is made memorable by some incident such as sticks in the minds of travelers.—New York Post.

Hallays, André. The spell of the heart of France; the towns, villages, and châteaux about Paris. 1920. I 11861

(The spell series.)
A nature lover with an artist's eye writes of notable people connected with the parts of France through which he has traveled, including many that have since been devastated by the war.

Marshall, Archibald. A spring walk in Provence. 1920. I 11875

The chronicle of a tramp through southern France. Scenery, history and legend combine to give the text the right variety and interest, and there are numbers of pictures.—Bookman.

Mosher, Ange M. The spell of Brittany. 1920. I 11879

She has drawn upon the legends and the poetry of the peasants and has depicted with honest friendliness the simple souls who live and die in daily contact with their saints and heroes.—Bookman.

Muirhead, Findlay, ed. Belgium, and the western front, British and American. 1920. I 2646

(The blue guides.)
The third of the excellent British series of guidebooks. It contains not merely the usual things interesting to tourists but also a historical sketch of Belgium with special chapters on the art of the country, battlefields, war graves, etc.

Smith, Corinna Haven, and Hill, Caroline R. Rising above the ruins in France; an account of the progress made since the armistice in the devastated regions in re-establishing industrial activities and the normal life of the people. 1920. I 11903

A sensible, unadorned account of the visits the two made in the Departments of the Somme, the Aisne, the Nord, and Pas de Calais, immediately after the armistice on behalf of the children of the frontier.—Nation.

BIOGRAPHY

Collections

Hind, C. Lewis. Authors and I. 1921. C 19607

Incidents and anecdotes with slight critical mention of sixty contemporary poets, novelists and essayists, arranged alphabetically from Anderson, Sherwood, to Yeats, W. B.

The mirrors of Downing street; some political reflections by a gentleman with a duster. 1921. C 19823

With engaging candor the author wipes the dust from the mirrors that reflect Lloyd George "who might have been the greatest man in British history," Mr. Balfour who "might have settled the Irish question," Lord Fisher, Mr. Asquith, Lord Northcliffe, Lord Kitchener, Mr. Churchill, and many other notables.

Genealogy

Arden, Juliette. Cole 200-1920 A. D. Tercentenary ed. 1920. C 20168

A family ancestry referred back to King Cole himself of nursery renown.

Ewing, P. K., and Ewing, M. E. W. The Ewing genealogy with cognate branches; a survey of the Ewings and their kin in America. 1919. C 20243

Individual Biography

Barbellion, W. N. P., pseud. of B. F. Cummings. A last diary. 1920. C 21463

A continuation of The journal of a disappointed man (C21464), portraying the last days of a brave and unsparingly honest man in the grip of a merciless disease, loving life but eager for its end, agonizing only in sympathy for his wife, and pitifully hoping life will last until he receives his book from the publishers.

Benson, E. F. Our family affairs, 1867-1896. 1921. C 20828

A penetrating chronicle of the Victorian period and spirit interpreted through the lives of this remarkable family, consisting of an archbishop of Canterbury and his three distinguished and diversified sons and one charming daughter.

Grenfell, Wilfred T. WALDO, FULLERTON L. With Grenfell on the Labrador. 1920. C 22177

Hoover, Herbert. ROSE WILDER LANE. The making of Herbert Hoover. 1920. C 22473

This book was listed in the March Book Bulletin on page 48, where by a clerical error it was given the wrong call number.

Lincoln, Abraham, BARTON, WILLIAM E. The paternity of Abraham Lincoln; was he the son of Thomas Lincoln? An essay on the chastity of Nancy Hanks. 1920. C 23009

A convincing study which leaves not a square inch of ground for the scandal to stand on. Mr. Barton's researches have been exhaustive and accurate. . . He has included practically all the documents in the case.—Nation.

Mackenzie, Robert. MACKENZIE, JEAN KENYON. The story of a fortunate youth; chapters from the biography of an elderly gentleman. 1920. C 23144

The early experiences of a young Scot, Robert Mackenzie, before and after his arrival in America, retold by his daughter with a charm not unlike Barrie's own in his life of his mother.

Robinson, John. BURGESS, WALTER H. The pastor of the Pilgrims; a biography of John Robinson. 1920. C 23969

The volume shows wide study of the whole literature of contemporary separatism and of its opponents, and may be heartily commended not only as a biography of the Pilgrim pastor, but as a most readable and informing account of the separatist movement of his day.—American Historical Review.

Taylor, Frederick Winslow. Frederick Winslow Taylor; a memorial volume. 1920. C 24493

"Addresses delivered at the funeral of Frederick Winslow Taylor, Germantown, Pa., March 24, 1915; at a memorial meeting, October 22, 1915; and at Mr. Taylor's home 'Boxly,' Chestnut Hill, October 23, 1915."

Venizelos, Eleutherios. GIBBONS, HERBERT ADAMS. Venizelos. 1920. C 24671

At the present time it is, doubtless, the best and clearest exposition yet made of the important part Greece played in the events that brought about the second Balkan war and in the developments of the great war in the Near East.—New York Times.

Warde, Frederick. Fifty years of make-believe. 1920. C 24764

Reminiscences of the author's career as an actor, giving a good picture of the American theater of thirty or forty years ago.

HISTORY

Europe

Boulenger, Jacques. The seventeenth century. 1920. A 5721, 3

(The national history of France. v. 3.) Vivid realizations of the coteries of Louis XIII and Louis XIV, of Richelieu, Mazarin, Marie-Thérèse, and many others, the pomp and pageantry of the aristocrats and the motley of the crowds, the subtle play of politics and the graceful culture of the "great age."—Booklist.

Buell, Raymond Leslie. Contemporary French politics. 1920. A 5745

The keynote of Mr. Buell's interpretation lies in his recognition of three significant basic elements inherent in the French character—respect for authority, public spirit, and attachment to property.

Finlay, George. A history of Greece from its conquest by the Romans to the present time, B. C. 146 to A. D. 1864. 1877. 7v. A 70

1. Greece under the Romans, B. C. 146-A. D. 716.
2. The Byzantine empire. Pt. I. A. D. 716-1057.
3. The Byzantine and Greek empires. Pt. II. A. D. 1057-1453.
4. Mediaeval Greece and the empire of Trebizond, A. D. 1204-1461.
5. Greece under Othoman and Venetian domination, A. D. 1453-1821.
6. The Greek revolution. Pt. I. A. D. 1821-1827.
7. The Greek revolution. Pt. II.—Establishment of the Greek kingdom.

Henry, R. M. The evolution of Sinn Fein. 1920. A 5520

A penetrating history of the Sinn Fein idea from its first dominance of the Celtic Literary Society at the beginning of this century to its present unqualified demand for the recognition of the republic. The author is a Belfast professor who believes it the only creative movement in Ireland today.

Krey, August C. Bulletin for teachers of history. 1915. L 20001, 7
(The University of Minnesota. Current problems.)

MacSwiney, Terence. Principles of freedom. 1921. A 5521

It is to his followers, not to the English, that MacSwiney explains with anxious care the "principles of freedom," often obviously in fear that they cannot be got at present to understand these principles, though always with a glorious faith that in the end they will understand.—New York Times.

The New Russia; a weekly review of Russian politics, ed. by the Russian Liberation Committee. v. 1-3. Feb. 5, 1920-Dec. 16, 1920. 1920. 3v.

Nikolau, Stanislav. Geographical sketch, outline of the history, and importance of the Bohemian (Czechoslovak) state. 1919.

A 7786

With this are bound the declaration of independence of the Czechoslovak nation by its provisional government, a report on the Czechoslovak festival in London May, 1919, entitled "Czechoslovak Music and the British press," and articles on the country by Walter Littleton and C. D. Hazen.

Saltus, Edgar. The imperial orgy; an account of the tsars from the first to the last. 1920.

A 7920

It is a book for the lover of words rather than for the student of history. It is by a writer for writers. It is burdened with ornament, blazing with rich and terrible dyes, impressive as a march of rajah's elephants in jeweled trappings, yet swift as the telling of a story.—Boston Transcript.

Stevens, William Oliver, and Westcott, Allan. A history of sea power. 1920.

K 23199

This volume covers the evolution and influence of sea power from the beginnings to the present time and treats naval history not from the point of view of a sequence of battles but as a vital force in the rise and fall of nations and in the evolution of civilization.—Book Review Digest.

Telberg, George Gustav, (comp. and tr.), and Wilton, Robert. The last days of the Romanovs. 1920.

A 7884

A compilation and translation of the evidence obtained in an investigation of the murder of the Czar and his family by N. A. Sokoloff of the Kolchak government, supplemented by the personal narrative of Robert Wilton.

Turner, Edward Raymond. Europe, 1789-1920. 1920.

A 5967

The fairness of Dr. Turner, his freedom from prejudice, and his determination to write clearly give his volume a value which is rather unusual in a popular book.—New York Times.

European War

Blücher, Evelyn, Princess. An English wife in Berlin; a private memoir of events, politics, and daily life in Germany throughout the war and the social revolution of 1918. 1920.

A 7151

A portrayal of events that is neither envenomed by partisanship nor warped by propagandist intention. Informal, racy of the moment, lively in its mingling of personal incident with political happening, it reflects the development of the German catastrophe and the aftermath of disaster.—New York Evening Post.

General Electric Company. National lamp works, Cleveland. The National in the world war, April 6, 1917-November 11, 1918. 1920.

A 7160

Knapen, Theodore Macfarlane. Wings of war; an account of the important contribution of the United States to aircraft invention, engineering, development and production during the world war. 1920.

A 7147

Mr. Knapen is among those who believe that in spite of all the revelation of congressional investigations made during the past two years, the aircraft achievements of our government, considering our unpreparedness at the outset, were highly creditable.—Review of Reviews.

Nutting, William Washburn, and others. The Cinderellas of the fleet. 1920.

A 7156

A description of the submarine chasers, their construction, equipment, operation, and participation in the great war.

Sergeant, Elizabeth Shepley. Shadow-shapes; the journal of a wounded woman, October, 1918-May, 1919. 1920.

A 7149

The world—humankind—is typified for her by her visitors, by the shadow shapes which wander in and out of her hospital room. They may have seemed shadowy to her at the time, but to us she has painted them in startlingly clear colors.—Amy Lowell in the New York Times.

Sims, William Sowden, and Hendrick, Burton J. The victory at sea. 1920.

A 7148

How the challenge was met by our navy with skill, audacity, bravery, and that most American of characteristics, inventive ingenuity, is the theme of the book. It is more than a book for the historian or friend of the navy; it is a book for every American citizen.—Atlantic Monthly.

Skillman, Willis Rowland. The A. E. F.; who they were, what they did, and how they did it. 1920.

A 7150

A soldier's handy compilation of war material. Some of the most interesting parts describe the organization of the A. E. F., the different branches of the service, the various divisions and their insignia and the army honors and symbols.

United States Army. 33d Division. Illinois in the world war; an illustrated history of the Thirty-third Division. 1920.

White, William A. Thoughts of a psychiatrist on the war and after. 1919.

L 14286

The author places his hope in some sort of a government which may make it possible for the nations of the earth to outgrow war as individuals and communities are supposed to have outgrown recourse to physical combat.

War Welfare Agencies

Bakewell, Charles M. The story of the American Red Cross in Italy. 1920.

A 7145

A readable book not overloaded with statistics.—Booklist.

Jones, Rufus M. A service of love in war time; American Friends relief work in Europe, 1917-1919. 1920.

A 7152

The labors of the Friends (Quakers) behind the lines and in reconstruction work in France and Russia told in what the author calls "the simple story of an attempt to practice love both with friends and enemies in the midst of the disaster and catastrophe."

The Peace

Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Division of International Law. Official statements of war aims and peace proposals, December 1916 to November 1918; prepared under the supervision of James Brown Scott. 1921. L 17958, 31
(Pamphlet series of the Carnegie endowment for international peace.)

Haskins, Charles Homer, and Lord, Robert Howard. Some problems of the Peace conference. 1920. A 7146

The point of view presented is that of the supporters of the treaty, and the book contains useful ethnological, historical, and geographical information.

Lansing, Robert. The peace negotiations; a personal narrative. 1921. A 7154

Step by step, Mr. Lansing traces the growth of the differences between himself and the president showing carefully just why and how he disagreed. An informative inside view of events at Paris and also a calm, detached explanation of a personal position.—Booklist.

Asia, The Jews

Aslan, Kevork. Armenia and the Armenians from the earliest times until the great war (1914). 1920. A 4816

It discusses the geographical situation, the climate, religious ideas and customs, the conversion to Christianity, Armenian literature, Armenia under the Byzantine Empire and during the succeeding centuries. The translator's introduction is a passionate plea for Armenian independence.

The cause of world unrest; with an introduction by the editor of "The Morning post" (of London). 1920. A 2682

An attempt based on the notorious Protocols of Nihil to prove the existence of a far-reaching conspiracy to overthrow all existing governments ostensibly in the interests of communism, but really to procure world domination for its leaders.

Grant, Elihu. The Orient in Bible times. 1920. A 2418

A history of the Bible country and the surrounding regions—Egypt, Babylonia, Assyria, Persia and the Mediterranean peoples who touched Hebrew life. An excellent background with a description of present customs in Palestine.—Booklist.

Omori, Annie Shepley, and Doi, Kochi, tr. Diaries of court ladies of old Japan, with an introduction by Amy Lowell. 1920. A 4972

Contents: The Sarashina diary.—The diary of Murasaki shikibu.—The diary of Izumi shikibu.

These diaries reveal the manners and morals of the Japan of the eleventh century of our era more fully than the comments of the most expert student of today possibly could.

The protocols and world revolution; including a translation and analysis of the "Protocols of the meetings of the Zionist men of wisdom." 1920. A 2685

The American edition of the pseudo-documentary attack upon the Jews as responsible for the political and industrial upheaval all over the world. Though obviously a fraud it has attracted enough attention to call forth a refutation from a committee of the best representatives of the race in this country.

Africa

Maugham, R. C. F. The republic of Liberia; being a general description of the negro republic, with its history, commerce, agriculture, flora, fauna, and present methods of administration. 1920. I 9089

Mr. Maugham is British consul-general at Monrovia. His study of Liberia tries on the one hand to say pleasant things concerning Liberia, and on the other hand to show British merchants that now and here is their chance to exploit a rich land.—The Nation.

Morel, E. D. The black man's burden. 1920. A 4764

Mr. Morel's attitude is that of the liberal Englishman who believes that the negro is the only race that can build homes in the tropical Africa and should be encouraged there and protected from exploitation, but he has no thought of a self-governing Africa.

Woolf, Leonard. Empire and commerce in Africa; a study in economic imperialism. 1920. A 4773

Separate chapters are devoted to Algeria, Tunis, Tripoli, Abyssinia, Zanzibar, and the Belgian Congo . . . No patriotic bias is shown in the record. France, Italy, England, Germany and Belgium are accused impartially of sordid motives and heartless conduct.—American Economic Review.

United StatesCanada, Philippines

Canfield, Chauncey L., ed. The diary of a forty-niner. 1920. B 2875

Based on the diary of Alfred T. Jackson, a pioneer miner who cabin'd and worked on Rock Creek, Nevada county, California, from 1850 to 1852, this book gives an authentic background from which to judge Bret Harte's stories.

Clark, George Rogers. The conquest of the Illinois. 1920. B 4553
(The Lakeside classics.)

Fernández, Leandro H. A brief history of the Philippines. 1919. B 7618

A textbook for intermediate grades in the Philippine schools.

Guittau, William Backus. Our United States; a history. 1919. B 5701

Hudson's Bay Co. The governor and company of adventurers of England trading into Hudson's Bay, during two hundred and fifty years, 1670–1920. 1920. B 9042

Lord, Arthur. Plymouth and the Pilgrims. 1920. B 7951

(Brown university. The Colver lectures, 1920.) An outline of the most essential facts relating to the landing of the Mayflower, presented by the chairman of the Tercentenary Committee in a topographical treatment which helps to visualize the event.

Robinson, Will H. The story of Arizona. 1919. B 4642

The author has indeed succeeded in writing a most entertaining book with the pen of a humorist, and the most exacting reader will forgive him the "figures and dry facts" that would after all creep in.—Book Review Digest.

Fiction

Audoux, Marguerite. Marie Claire's workshop. 1920. F 10552

Sequel to Marie Claire, F10550.

Marie Claire's story continues in Paris where she is employed in a dressmaking establishment. Her life and that of her fellow workers is charmingly told in minute detail. It is sad but very lovely and gives glimpses of the joys and sorrows, hopes and fears of the Paris working girls' struggles for self-support.

Black, Alexander. The seventh angel. 1921. F 11203

The theme is the confusion in all the elements of life for which the war is responsible, like the seventh angel of the Apocalypse whose vial precipitated the plague of disorder.

Buck, Charles Neville. The roof tree. 1921. F 20782

A light story of love and adventure centering around the conventional elements of the hero, the girl, and the villain.

Buckrose, J. E., pseud., of Mrs. A. E. F. Jameson. The girl in fancy dress. 1921. F 14344

We have the trite situation of a wealthy girl who masquerades as a poor relation and wins the love of the idealistic heir of the family in spite of the concerted plan to marry him to an heiress. But the plot is well constructed, with variety in the details and a light and whimsical style.

Canfield, Dorothy, (Mrs. J. R. Fisher). The brimming cup. 1921. F 22100

An honest record of a successful marriage told in an original manner. . . . A truly American novel, written with beauty and dignity and founded on the unshakable truth of experience.—New York Post.

Cohen, Octavus Roy. Six seconds of darkness. 1921. F 12059

An unusually ingenious detective story that keeps the reader on the alert until the very end.

Crabb, Arthur. Samuel Lyle, criminologist. 1920. F 12191

A group of short stories revealing the methods of a clever criminal lawyer who seems to have had a special insight into human psychology.

Footner, Hulbert. The owl taxi. 1921. F 22182

A swift-moving mystery and detective story, centered about a group of Spanish-Americans and some New York taxi drivers. There are murders and intrigues in abundance and a love story which culminates happily for all concerned.

Gatlin, Dana. Missy. 1920. F 13138

The seven years of Melissa Merriam's life from ten to seventeen, are told in these chapters. She is a deadly serious child whose mental processes are original and lead to surprising results.

Grimshaw, Beatrice. The terrible island. 1920. F 13219

The discovery of a South Sea island after many obstacles—including a mysterious blindness afflicting those who land on the island, and the loss and restoration of Lady Mary's memory—and the satisfactory ending of two romances, are among the events of a novel plot.

Guillaumin, Emile. The life of a simple man. 1920. F 22650

A narrative of a peasant's life in the beautiful country of provincial France, describing the charming scenery and outdoor recreations, the labor and toil, pleasures and frolics of the people.

Haggard, H. Rider. She and Allan. 1921. F 13414

Sequel to King Solomon's mines, F 3882; Allan Quatermain, F 3870; The ancient Allan, F 13413; and She, F 3875; Ayesha, the return of She, F 13460

A new Haggard story telling of Allan's visit to She-who-commands, with all its attendant dangers and thrills. It contains many of the familiar characters of the Allan Quatermain and She series, and so is a continuation of each and a connecting link between the two.

Hall, G. Stanley. Recreations of a psychologist. 1920. F 13443

Contents: The fall of Atlantis.—How Johnnie's vision came true.—A conversion.—Preestablished harmony, a midsummer reverie of a psychologist.—Getting married in Germany.—A man's adventure in domestic industries.—A leap year romance.—Note on early memories.

Stories and sketches, some of them written many years ago and now published for the first time. The "Note on early memories" describes and analyzes the author's feelings upon visiting familiar scenes of his childhood after he was grown.

Hamsun, Knut. Growth of the soil. 1921. 2v. F 13438

A character novel which reveals the freshness and simplicity of farm life in Norway and reflects an atmosphere of elemental beauty in a keen analysis of its many and individual characters.

Hanshew, Mary E., and Thomas W. The riddle of the mysterious light. 1921. F 13528

Sequel to Cleek, the man of forty faces, F 13488; Cleek of Scotland Yard, F 13486; The riddle of the purple emperor, F 13473; The riddle of the frozen flame, F 13472.

A detective story with a unique plot in that the detective is the pursued as well as the pursuer.

Hughes, Rupert. "Momma," and other unimportant people. 1920. F 14154

Contents: "Momma."—The stick-in-the-muds.—Read it again.—The father of waters.—Innocence.—The college of Lorelei.—Yellow cords.—The split.—A story I can't write.—The butcher's daughter.—The quick-silver window.—The dauntless book-keeper.—You hadn't ought to go.

Humphrey, Zephine. The sword of the spirit. 1920. F 14233

The story of the drifting apart of a wife, preoccupied with emotional religious mysticism and a husband who is frankly materialistic. The incidents which bring them together are plausible, and the characters themselves are live.—Booklist.

Kahler, Hugh MacNair. Babel. 1921. F 14443

Contents: Babel.—The oblige.—Wild carrot.—The hammer.—The lazy duckling.—The buckpasser. A clever and entertaining collection of six short stories written with a keen insight into the working of the average man's mind. They betray an earnest study of mob psychology and of the easiest way to handle emergencies.

Locke, William J. The mountebank. 1921. F 24573

A whimsical story with the Locke romantic touch. It tells how Petit Patou, a child of the circus and hero of French music halls became a brigadier general in the world war with many distinguished friends, returning once more to the simple state of Petit Patou.

McKenna, Stephen. The sixth sense. 1921.
F 24858

The sixth sense is the attribute of the hero. He is endowed with it only as concerns the woman he loves. The militant suffrage movement is the background of this double love story.

Means, E. K. Further E. K. Means. 1920.
F 15203

"Is this a title? It is not. It is the name of a writer of negro stories, who has made himself so completely the writer of negro stories that this third book, like the first and second, needs no title."

Contents: The left hind foot.—The 'fraid cat.—The consolation prize.—The first high janitor.—Family ties.—The ten-share horse.—A chariot of fire.

Miln, Louise Jordan. The feast of lanterns. 1920.
F 15384

A beautiful Chinese princess is sent to London to be educated, without anticipating the influence of English life upon her or a possible romance. Of course there is a love story, but Chinese tradition and ideals prove too strong for it, and the princess returns to take part in the Feast of the Lanterns.

Norris, Kathleen. Harriet and the piper. 1920.
F 15701

A pleasant and readable story featuring the allurements of Oriental philosophy and the development of character by resisting threats and temptations.

Nyburg, Sidney L. The gate of ivory. 1920.
F 15723

A story of the Peter Ibbetson kind. But Allen Conway lives his dream life of happiness alone after becoming an outcast in order to shield the ungrateful woman he loved and her husband from the consequences of their crime.

O'Kelly, Seumas. The golden barque, and The weaver's grave. 1920.
F 15755

His characters are new, not picked from the crowd but found here and there in Ireland with individuality stamped all over them. They are not very important characters, but such as they are they challenge attention.—Springfield Republican.

Onions, Oliver. A case in camera. 1921.
F 15756

A well-conceived and clever mystery story with a great deal of mystification in it, told by a novelist who though a guest at the breakfast party where the difficulty started had very little personal connection with the case itself.

Orczy, Baroness, (Mrs. E. Barstow). The first Sir Percy; an adventure of the laughing cavalier. 1921.
F 15848

Sequel to The laughing cavalier, F 10883.

A lively romance about a penniless soldier of fortune of the seventeenth century who became one of the happiest and luckiest of men only to be thrust again into misery.

O'Riordan, Conal, (Norreys Connell). Adam of Dublin; a romance of today. 1920.
F 15865

The story of an amusing little waif, full of the best of Irish humor and pathos. It furnishes incidentally a description of the lights and shadows of Dublin life as seen by a keen and sympathetic observer.

Oyen, Henry. Twisted trails. 1921. F 15869

A story of adventure and romance in deep swamps, the dune depths of the Black Woods. The "twisted trails" lead to a fitting climax in a rose garden.

Phillpotts, Eden. The grey room. 1921.
F 16298

A surprising story from this author—pure mystery of the most sensational kind admirably presented. Death after death occurs in the grey room of a historic estate, and the reader follows one tragic ending after another until the solution is found.

Raine, William MacLeod. The big-town round-up. 1920.
F 16808

An entertaining romance featuring a typical Westerner as its hero, but with New York as a setting. Filled with exciting situations.

Ruck, Berta, (Mrs. Oliver Onions.) Sweet stranger. 1921.
F 15781

The story is told by the twin sister of Jim, the English lad who falls in love with the American girl he met in a London "tube." He loses sight of her and they do not meet again until after an extensive search on both sides of the Atlantic.

Singmaster, Elsie. Ellen Levis. 1921.
F 18158

A love story above the ordinary, in which the many characters are all convincingly drawn. The plot is unusual enough to hold the interest of the reader, and the atmosphere surrounding the group of Seventh Day Baptists is distinctive and well portrayed.

Tooker, L. Frank. The middle passage. 1920.
F 18529

A story of sea adventure in connection with the slave trade and efforts made to prevent it, and with a contrastingly delightful element of love interest.

Vachell, Horace Annesley. The fourth dimension. 1920.
F 18814

A decidedly well-written story on the familiar theme of a woman's sacrificing her artistic career for that of her husband to ensure their conjugal happiness. The title refers to the imaginary fourth wall of the stage.

Williams, Wayland Wells. Goshen Street; a novel. 1920.
F 19535

The story begins and ends in Goshen Street, a country road in Connecticut, but in the meantime the center of action is removed to wartime France.

Being a Librarian

LIBRARIANSHIP is either a "job" or a vocation. To the right kind of person it soon becomes a vocation, a call to social usefulness, a life occupation with, incidentally, a chance to earn a fair living while doing the things one loves to do. To the wrong kind it remains always a job, to be shirked and complained of, and to be escaped from as quickly as may be. The difference is not one of duties but of state of mind. Many a little junior in a big city library brings to her modest tasks a spirit of service and breadth of sympathy that glorifies her day's routine and so transforms her little job into a profession before she knows it. The difference between being a librarian and "working in a library" is not one of position but of attitude—of state of mind. It is the difference between the right and wrong kind of persons in librarianship.

Next to the public schools there is no other agency supported by the whole people for its own service that stands so high in public favor, makes friends so easily and has so many of them, as the public library—not of this town alone, but everywhere. No other branch of the municipality enters more intimately into the daily lives of its constituents, ministers to them more suavely, demands less and gives more, or leaves behind it a pleasanter memory of its visits. To no other is it given to be of greater usefulness; to touch human lives at more points, to fill more different kinds of wants of more different kinds of people.

There is, thus, much work to be done in a public library. A great deal of it in serving the multitudes who come, and as much more in bringing in those who have stayed away. Much work of many kinds, requiring many kinds of ability and degrees of preparedness, but all of it work of the sort that means service, devotion to a cause; the sort of which the old monks used to sing: Laborare est orare, "Work is worship."

Every public library in the country is short of help—of the right kind. From all quarters comes the same story: vast opportunities for service and too few willing to serve. And always the same explanation is given: The pay is too low; public libraries cannot compete with business salaries.

The pay! What pay? What is the pay for library service? Is it represented only in the figures on the monthly check? If it is, then the high-school girl who takes a six weeks' course in filing, or learns how to pound a writing machine has the best of it, assuredly! Library salaries are too low. That is well known, though they are higher now than they were five years ago, and five years hence they will be still higher. They will never compete with business salaries because the public library is not in business. It has nothing to sell; it gives its goods away, and cannot add its increased expenses to the selling price. And the more business it does, the more help it needs and the more its always scanty revenue is strained. Yet there is ever more business to be done than there is help to do it with—help of the right kind, of the kind of high-school girl who will submit to a half year of training in a library apprentice class on little or no salary in order to become fit to serve; who will go out to some little branch library in a congested district and stand behind a desk for eight hours, cheerfully serving, surrounded by boisterous youngsters in whom she is skilfully planting a habit and a friendship that will never leave them, and that may change and surely will brighten their squalid lives: the reading habit and a friendship for books! Who will do this day after day, and some nights, in order that those whose days are too full of labor may also be served by her—the tired mother to be sent away with a cheerful story; the father who has not the English language, to be fitted out with the simple manuals in his own tongue to help him acquire it; the lad who had to go to work too soon, with something about other kinds of work more to his liking, or with tales of other lads in other times and climes in which he may steep himself and so forget his own and take courage. It takes a state of mind to do that kind of work and to know that the school chum with the six weeks' business course is getting a bigger pay check for less work and shorter hours, the state of mind that amounts to the conviction that work is worship and the pay check not its goal.

The Chicago Public Library expects to have places for a hundred young women—of the right kind—within the next year. It has a training class offering free instruction to a limited number of acceptable apprentices upon terms described on the next page. The beginners' salary is sixty-five dollars a month, for a forty to forty-four hour week, part of it night work, with small annual increases and good opportunities for steady though not rapid advancement. To the right kind of young woman there is here presented an opportunity for high usefulness, amid pleasant surroundings and with congenial associates, leading up to a professional career of service and a safe and sufficient livelihood. To the wrong kind it means only a poorly paid job. That kind should not apply.

CHILDREN'S BOOK EXHIBIT (Woodlawn Branch)

LIBRARIANSHIP AS A VOCATION

YOUNG WOMEN with the requisite educational background are invited to consider the opportunities for useful and attractive occupation open to Trained Librarians.

The Chicago Public Library conducts a Training Class offering free instruction in the fundamentals of library methods and practice, and preparing candidates for employment in this Library under the rules of the Chicago Civil Service Commission.

The next class will open Monday, September 12th, continuing in daily sessions for about eight months.

Complete High School course is the Minimum Educational Requirement for Admission to Training Class.

HOURS: DAILY FROM 9 A. M. TO 1 P. M.

THE STORY HOUR ON THE LAWN
Shedd Park Branch

BOOKS FOR VACATION

VACATION loans are made on and after June first to any registered card-holder. Ten books or less may be taken out to be returned on or before October first. Five of the ten may be fiction, other than seven-day books; the rest may be drawn at will from any or all classes of literature, except the most recent books, or all ten may be non-fiction if preferred.

Vacation loans are made to juvenile borrowers upon the written request of parent or guardian.

The loan must be made in one transaction either at the Central Library or at a branch. Ten books or less will be issued at one time for the whole vacation period and may be returned in installments. The borrower's regular library card must be surrendered when the vacation loan is made, and will be returned to him when all obligations have been canceled.

Borrowers may arrange to have their vacation books shipped out of town to their summer address by leaving the amount of postage plus a fee to cover wrapping and shipping, at the rate of three cents per volume or twenty-five cents for ten. All shipping, both ways, will be at the borrower's risk.

Borrowers may obtain help in making their selections by inquiring at any branch or at the Information Desk of the Central Library.

When books urgently desired for vacation use are not available on the day when the borrower calls, arrangements may be made to have them sent later by leaving a deposit to cover postage and shipping charges. Any balance of such deposit remaining at the end of the vacation period will be refunded.

We would call attention, also, to the parcel-post card issued by the Library. This is a plan enabling the borrower to pay for a dollar's worth of postage at a time, so that he may receive and send back books by mail when out of the city. This arrangement, however, covers only the regular loan period of two weeks (with the privilege of renewal for two more weeks) and does not have reference to vacation loans.

Books Added to the Library

PHILOSOPHY

Psychology

Andrews, Lincoln C. Military manpower; psychology as applied to the training of men and the increase of their effectiveness. 1920. K 31094

Colonel Andrews makes it clear that seventy-five per cent of the whole business of military efficiency is morale, and that morale depends upon the extent to which the officers are thinking men and considerate human beings, qualified to lead others. —New York Post.

Butler, George F. How the mind cures. 1921. N 1643

Spiritism

McCabe, Joseph. Spiritualism; a popular history from 1847. 1920. L 13583

A historical survey since 1848 of the phenomena connected with the development of spiritism, from the point of view of a non-sympathizer.

Schofield, A. T. Modern spiritism, its science and religion; with a foreword by Newell Dwight Hillis. 1920. L 13520

Dr. Schofield, a student for over thirty years of psychological problems, gives an instructive review of the history of spiritism and its modern developments. . . . He regards spiritism of today to be full of the gravest dangers, mental and spiritual, and to be definitely anti-Christian.—The Times (London).

THE SOCIAL SCIENCES

Economics, Labor

Cole, G. D. H. Guild socialism; a plan for economic democracy. 1921. L 17889

A closely argued exposition of the whole guild-socialist case. It contains some fresh matter—notably a chapter on the application of the guild idea to agriculture, and it works out in some detail a new structure of local government on the guild basis.—London Mercury.

Hodges, Frank. Nationalisation of the mines. 1920. L 17869

Mr. Hodges is secretary of the miners' federation in Great Britain. He advocates compensation to the owners and operation through a mining council half elected by the miners and half by the public. The result would be an increase in economy and in the dignity of labor.

Lippincott, Isaac. Economic development of the United States. 1921. L 16701

An outline of the policies that have been followed with reasons for their failure or success, emphasizing technical improvements, use of raw materials and by-products, increased organization, specialization, and vocational education of all kinds.

Maciver, R. M. Community; a sociological study, being an attempt to set out the nature and fundamental laws of social life. 1920. L 15323

Treats the study of the common life as a science by itself, different from and something more than a combination of economics, politics, ethics, etc.

Murphy, John J. The housing famine, how to end it; a triangular debate with Edith Elmer Wood and Frederick L. Ackerman. 1920. L 17052

Robbins, Hayes. The making of tomorrow; the art of industrial right living. 1920. L 16768

Faces squarely the unrest of the present day, examines conditions and suggested cures, and stresses the need for understanding and co-operation.—New York Times.

Speare, Morris Edmund, and Norris, Walter Blake, ed. Vital forces in current events; readings on present-day affairs from contemporary leaders and thinkers. 1920. L 15437

Taylor, G. R. Stirling. The guild state; its principles and possibilities. 1919. L 17888

The solution provided by guild socialism for the problem of what the author calls in his preface "the disasters of modern statesmanship."

Wera, Eugene. Human engineering; a study of the management of human forces in industry. 1921. L 15448

A psychological analysis of the principles underlying the evolution of industry of great interest to the thoughtful student of conditions. The author believes that a peaceful solution of present problems is to be found in the logical development of our institutions.

Finance, Prices

Bonbright, James C. Railroad capitalization; a study of the principles of regulation of railroad securities. 1920. L 6589, 95'

(Columbia university studies in history, economics and public law.)

Jordan, David F. Jordan on investments. 1921. L 17458

Murchison, Claudius Temple. Resale price maintenance. 1919. L 6589, 82'¹¹

(Columbia university studies in history, economics and public law.)

Political Science

Bryce, James, (Viscount Bryce.) Modern democracies. 1921. 2v. L 15889

A discussion of the great democracies of the world, France, Switzerland, New Zealand, North and Latin America. The Atlantic Monthly says it is "the work of a master hand which has not lost its cunning."

Chafee, Zechariah. Freedom of speech. 1920. L 15735

An informing book for those who think our country can make no mistakes, and a consoling one for the pessimists who despair of the cause of freedom of speech in America.

Irwin, Inez Haynes. The story of the Woman's party. 1921. L 15976

A book of historical value, furnishing a correct account (with statistics) of the struggle preceding the federal amendment that gave the suffrage to women.

Mason, Augustus Lynch. Guiding principles for American voters; an introduction to the study of elementary Americanism. 1920. L 18383

A handbook of Americanism intended first of all for the newly enfranchised voter. It is a popular argument for a conservative interpretation of the federal constitution and its fundamental principles.

Metcalfe, A. E. At last; conclusion of Woman's effort. 1919. L 15981

Americanization

Daniels, John. America via the neighborhood. 1920. L 16052

(Americanization studies.)

A thorough and authoritative account of the various ways to reach foreigners—through settlements, schools, libraries, churches, etc.

Park, Robert E., and Miller, Herbert A. Old world traits transplanted. 1921. L 16082

(Americanization studies.)

This book explains the immigrant's attitude as due to the traditions he brings with him. It sets forth the obstacles to adjustment that confront him, shows the importance of the foreign colony as a stepping stone to assimilation, and illustrates by stories of almost every nationality.

Roberts, Peter. The problem of Americanization. 1920. L 16087

Foreign Relations

Chamberlain, George Agnew. Is Mexico worth saving. 1920. L 16345

Mr. Chamberlain takes the position that the only alternative to perpetual chaos in Mexico is to establish an orderly nation by depriving her of self-determination and deciding for her what she shall and shall not do.

Dickinson, G. Lowes. Causes of international war. 1920. L 16348
(International relations series.)

Levermore, Charles H. What the League of Nations has accomplished in one year, January to December, 1920. 1921. L 21467

Pitkin, Walter B. Must we fight Japan? 1921. L 16346

The writer has presented in a sane, impartial and scholarly manner those factors which are tending to keep the peace. The book performs an important service in clearing away many false impressions.—Joseph Mosher in the Publishers' Weekly.

Law

Holmes, Oliver Wendell. Collected legal papers (1885–1918). 1920. N 5452

The forbiddingly colorless title does grave injustice to an extraordinary book of thoroughly matured human wisdom. The bulk of this volume is devoted to technical legal essays, but the law interests Justice Holmes mainly as a window looking out on life and destiny.—New Republic.

Taft, William Howard. Taft papers on league of nations. 1920. L 21457

This volume embodies much of the soundest thinking on the subject of the League of Nations that has thus far found expression in America.—Review of Reviews.

Education

Beeley, Arthur L. An experimental study in left-handedness, with practical suggestions for schoolroom tests. 1918. L 19749, 2¹¹

(Supplementary educational monographs.)

Coursault, Jesse H. The principles of education. 1920. L 19372

(Beverly educational series.)

The book is excellently organized for teaching purposes. The reinterpretation of the contributions of the great educational philosophers is clear and concise, and is interwoven most appropriately with the unfolding of the theme.—School Review.

Craddock, Ernest A. The class-room republic. 1920. L 19498

An untechnical account of the application of democracy to secondary class-room government; relating how the author introduced the plan to the boys, and how they worked it out successfully for themselves.

Freeman, Frank N., and others. The hand-writing movement; a study of the motor factor of excellence in penmanship. 1918. L 19749, 2¹¹¹

(Supplementary educational monographs.)

Hanus, Paul H. School administration and school reports. 1920. L 20059

Contents: The meaning of education.—Some principles of school administration.—Town and city school reports, more particularly superintendents' reports.—Testing the efficiency of public schools.—Courtis arithmetic tests applied to employees in business houses.—Measuring progress in learning Latin.—How far shall the state go?—The German example.—German schools and American education.

—Germany's kultur.—The Harvard graduate school of education.

A book intended for the practical guidance of school boards and officers.

Hobson, Elsie Garland. Educational legislation and administration in the state of New York from 1777 to 1850. 1918. L 19749, 3¹

Johnson, Richard Otto. Standardization—efficiency—heredity; schools for the deaf. 1920. L 19686

The report of a committee to investigate the efficiency of schools for the deaf and its measurements by mental tests. The subjects include psychological theory, various scales, the physiology of the defect, qualifications of teachers, and suggestions for courses of study.

Lyon, Leverett S. A survey of commercial education in the public high schools of the United States. 1919. L 19749, 2^v

(Supplementary educational monographs.)

MacCracken, John Henry. College and commonwealth, and other educational papers and addresses. 1920. L 19952

Embodies a fine coherent philosophy of life and education profoundly needed in America today. The content of every paragraph is worth while, and the clear strong style rises not infrequently to what Matthew Arnold calls nobility.—Survey.

Smith, Henry Louis. Your biggest job, school or business; some words of counsel for red-blooded young Americans who are getting tired of school. 1920. L 19428

Little talks on the value of education and the importance of study.

LITERATUREHistory, Criticism

Beers, Henry A. The Connecticut wits, and other essays. 1920. J 6383

Contents: The Connecticut wits.—The singer of the Old swimmin' hole.—Emerson's journal.—The art of letter writing.—Thackeray's centenary.—Retrospects and prospects of the English drama.—Sheridan.—The poetry of the cavaliers.—Abraham Cowley.—Milton's tercentenary.—Shakespeare's contemporaries.

Scholarship and humor are admirably blended in these essays.—Outlook.

Carden, Percy T. The murder of Edwin Drood, recounted by John Jasper; being an attempted solution of the mystery based on Dickens' manuscript and memoranda. 1920. J 7231

Mr. Carden's solutions are ingenious and plausible, worked out by Sherlock Holmes methods.—New York Post.

Ellis, Havelock. The new spirit. 1921. J 7650

(The modern library of the world's best books.)

Contents: Preface.—Introduction.—Diderot.—Heine.—Whitman.—Ibsen.—Tolstoi.—Huysmans.—Conclusion.

Haney, John Louis. English literature. 1920. J 6388

Meets the puzzling requirement of interest with instruction to a remarkable degree of success. Adaptation and a somewhat novel approach are the two prime virtues of the book. The book is rich in fresh personal details, oddly significant anecdotes, typical remarks, and so on.—New York Post.

Mencken, H. L. RASCOE, BURTON, and others. H. L. Mencken: Fanfare, by Burton Rascoe; The American critic, by Vincent O'Sullivan; Bibliography, by F. C. Henderson. 1920. J 7045

Neilson, William Allan, and Thorndike, Ashley Horace. A history of English literature. 1920. J 6396

A textbook for high schools.

Poe, Edgar Allan. SMITH, C. ALPHONSO. Edgar Allan Poe; how to know him. 1921. J 7044

A detailed and informative discussion of Poe the man, of Poe the teller of tales, the poet, and the critic. Prof. Smith lays particular stress upon the influence of Poe in European as well as American literature, and shows that as a world author he has attained a position equaled by few if any Americans.—Bookman.

Pollak, Gustav. International minds and the search for the restful. 1919. J 7663

A collection of essays divided into two groups, in the first of which the author claims "that intellect recognizes no distinctions of nationality, race, or religion." The second deals with Feuchtersleben and his Hygiene of the soul.

Smith, Lewis Worthington, and Hathaway, Esse V. The sky line in English literature. 1920. J 6369

A discussion of the high lights of the literature which the authors regard as necessarily the greatest in the world in proportion as the English speaking people hold the leading place in a material sense.

Stevenson, Robert Louis. BROWN, GEORGE E. A book of R. L. S.; works, travels, friends and commentators. 1919. J 6384

A Stevenson commentary arranged in dictionary form covering his works and the places and characters mentioned in them, his friends and the people who wrote of him, in entertaining articles of some length.

Journalism

Bleyer, Willard Grosvenor. How to write special feature articles. 1920. J 7243

"A handbook for reporters, correspondents and free-lance writers who desire to contribute to popular magazines and magazine section of newspapers."

Latin Literature

Sallust. Sallust, with an English translation, by J. C. Rolfe. 1921. L 12260

(The Loeb classical library.)—Latin and English text.

Poetry

Berdan, John M. Early Tudor poetry, 1485–1547. 1920. J 6385

(Studies in Tudor literature.)

A critical discussion of the pre-Elizabethan period of English literature treated in its relation to the golden age that followed it.

Brooke, Stopford A. Naturalism in English poetry. 1920. J 6387

Contents: Dryden and Pope.—Young and Thomson.—Collins and Gray.—The French revolution and the poets who preceded it.—Crabbe and Cowper.—Robert Burns.—Wordsworth, the poet of nature.—Wordsworth, Shelley, Byron.—The poetry of Shelley.—Shelley's interpretation of Christianity.—The poetry of Byron.—Byron's Cain.

A critical review of an interesting phase of English literature written with what the New York Post calls "a wholesome lack of those snappy metaphors and that supercilious satire that characterize too much modern writing."

Dryden, John. VAN DOREN, MARK. The poetry of John Dryden. 1920. J 6371

An appreciation of the poetry, exclusive of dramatic work, of "the greatest neglected English poet."

Parsons, Mary Prescott. The new poetry; a study outline. 1919. J 6397

(Study outline series.)

"Includes poets of the United States, England and Ireland, most of whose work has been published since 1900."—Introductory note.

Tennyson, Alfred. SMITH, JEAN PAULINE. The aesthetic nature of Tennyson. 1920. J 6399

Poems

Aiken, Conrad. Punch, the immortal liar; documents in his history. 1921. E 10607
A narrative poem using the puppet character as a prototype of the frailties of mankind.

Banning, Kendall. The phantom caravan. 1920. E 10634

Blunden, Edmund. The waggoner. 1920. E 14496

Puts down what he sees in a language intensely musical and intensely local. He does not try to make poetry by transcribing poetical landscape, but he makes actual landscape and country life into very real poetry.—Llewellyn Jones in the Chicago Post.

Brodhay, O. Chester. Verses of idle hours. 1917. E 14504

Fletcher, John Gould. Breakers and granite. 1921. E 14658

Distinctly American poems of the imagist type written from the perspective of residence in England. The subjects are taken from New York, Chicago, Arizona and other widely scattered regions.

Flexner, Hortense. Clouds and cobblestones. 1920. E 14661

A first volume of lyrics and sonnets on themes as varied as the title indicates.

Hálek, Vítězslav. Evening songs. 1920. E 14734

Lee, Harry. High company; sketches of courage and comradeship. 1920. E 11200

Free verse sketches telling with humor and sympathy of the hospital life of wounded returned soldiers.

Leonard, William Ellery. The lynching bee, and other poems. 1920. E 11196

These poems are like eagles on sunset crags and their plumage is ruffled by the storm. None has surpassed him in seeing the visible world and the things that fill it; none has equaled him in thinking about those things largely and nobly and under some aspect of eternity.—Nation.

Low, Benjamin R. C. Broken music. 1920. E 11223

A collection of Mr. Low's best poems selected from his four published volumes.

Mathers, Edward Powys, tr. The garden of bright waters; one hundred and twenty Asiatic love poems. 1920. E 14341

Most of the poems are in vers libre. The keen music which blows through them like a wind is the more striking . . . The imagery, whether faithful to the original texts or not, is certainly captivating.—Babette Deutsch in the New York Post.

Temple, Anna. The kneeling camel, and other poems. 1920. E 15051

One takes pleasure in these verses in these days of upheaval for the very peace of them, for the simple style of them that might have been Blake's, and we may judge them from much the same literary standpoint.—Boston Transcript.

Van Dyke, Tertius. Songs of seeking and finding. 1920. E 15091

Sonnets and lyrics in standard forms.

Drama

Emerson, John, and Loos, Anita. How to write photoplays; with a complete scenario of The love expert. 1920. E 13084

Jameson, Storm. Modern drama in Europe. 1920. E 12403

The author arranges the European drama of the last half-century by ideas instead of by nationality. She believes that following upon the swift advance made in Ibsen's time the plays of today are distinctly second rate. The London Mercury regards the book as one of the best of recent works on the subject.

North Dakota. University. The book of Shakespeare, the playmaker; written in collaboration by twenty students, under the direction of Prof. Frederick H. Koch. 1916. E 12672

"Designed for the Shakespeare tercentenary commemoration by the Sock and Buskin Society, for presentation at the Bankside theatre on the campus."

Phelps, William Lyon. Essays on modern dramatists. 1921. E 14189

Contents: J. M. Barrie.—George Bernard Shaw.—John Galsworthy.—Clyde Fitch.—Maurice Maeterlinck.—Edmond Rostand.

Plays

Drinkwater, John. Mary Stuart; a play. 1921. E 12019

A presentation of Mary the lover. The action covers only a few days but in the simple dialogue we receive a convincing picture (in the words of the London Times) of her "queenliness, sorrows, her fine temper, her courage, her wisdom, and her unsatisfied heart and brain."

Irving, Washington. The headless horseman; a play based on The legend of Sleepy Hollow, by C. S. Griffin. 1918. E 13792

Maugham, W. S. The unknown; a play in three acts. 1920. E 14087

Varesi, Gilda, and Byrne, Dolly. Enter madame; a play in three acts. 1921. E 12966

A comedy that is better for acting than reading. It presents a famous opera singer whose devoted husband has finally tired of constant subservience to her whims and determines to get a divorce. The play shows how he is won back in spite of himself.

Essays and Miscellanies

Beerbohm, Max. And even now. 1921. E 1887

Cook, Sir Edward. Literary recreations. 1919. E 2317

Contents: The art of biography.—Some remarks on Ruskin's style.—The art of indexing.—Fifty years of a literary magazine.—Literature and modern journalism.—Words and the war.—A study in superlatives.—The poetry of a painter.—The second thoughts of poets.

Hackett, Francis. The invisible censor. 1921. E 3262

A representative collection of sketches and articles reprinted from The New Republic, containing clever and carefully pointed comments on men and events including such varied personalities as Billy Sunday and W. B. Yeats.

Masson, Thomas L. Dogs from Life. 1920.
K 28528

Storm, Marian. Minstrel weather. 1920.
E 5827

Charming essays inspired by the aspects of nature from the impressionistic pen of a writer vividly sensitive to the most delicate of its changing moods.

BIOGRAPHY

Armstrong, Maitland. Day before yesterday; reminiscences of a varied life. 1920.
C 20641

The narrative of an octogenarian who tells his story as simply as if writing his memories in a letter to a friend. It relates many minor incidents in the lives of prominent people.

Choate, Joseph H. MARTIN, EDWARD SANFORD, ed. The life of Joseph Hodges Choate as gathered chiefly from his letters, including his own story of his boyhood and youth. 1920.
C 21229

Gaps in the letters are filled first from an attempted autobiography which covers the period up to his marriage, and later from a well-stocked scrapbook extending over forty years.

Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von. BROWN, P. HUME. Life of Goethe, with a prefatory note by Viscount Haldane. 1920. 2 v.
C 22126

A splendid modern estimate of Goethe, scholarly, sane, and well-balanced, without much of the exaggerated hero-worship characterizing many previous performances.

Johnson, Lionel. Some Winchester letters. 1919.
C 22672

Mason, Stevens Thomson. HEMANS, LAWTON T. Life and times of Stevens Thomson Mason, the boy governor of Michigan. 1920.

C 23584

A charming, witty, whimsical woman, who dying the year before the war left no successors of her type. These pages reflect much of the social side of English political leaders and are filled with amusing stories and with letters from notable people.
—Booklist.

Owen, Robert. The life of Robert Owen, by himself. 1920.
C 23661

The story of the great pioneer in the field of economics who was among the first to understand the underlying reasons of industrial revolution.

Villiers, Frederic. Villiers; his five decades of adventure. 1920.
C 24694

A chatty and interesting autobiography of a veteran war correspondent and artist, covering stirring events during two and a half generations in every part of the globe.

Williams, Roger. STRICKLAND, ARTHUR B. Roger Williams, prophet and pioneer of soul-liberty. 1919.
C 24878

A biography dealing with the struggles of the colonists for freedom of worship.

TRAVEL AND DESCRIPTION

Cameron, Charlotte. A cheechako in Alaska and Yukon. 1920.
I 11789

The detailed record of a 2200 mile journey on the Yukon by an adventurous Englishwoman, describing this fascinating region, its Eskimo life, fur-trading and salmon fishing, and including bits of Indian legend lore.

Chase, J. Smeaton. Our Araby: Palm Springs and the Garden of the Sun. 1920.
I 11763

"Illustrated from photographs by the author; with a descriptive list of desert plants, etc., and Hints to desert motorists, also a new map of the region by the U. S. Geological Survey."

Dana, Richard Henry. Hospitable England in the seventies; the diary of a young American, 1875-1876. 1921.
I 10364

A picture of English hospitality as seen at its best by the son of the traveler "before the mast."

Field (Marshall) & Co. Chicago, the great central market; a collection of editorials and illustrations from the "Field quality news." 1921.
*P 2899

Chicago plan, p. 23-29.

Hamilton, Lord Frederick. The days before yesterday. 1920.
I 11252

Companion to The vanished pomps of yesterday, I 11251.

Lord Frederick Hamilton wanders on in the most charming aimless fashion through pages of the most delightful reminiscence. . . . It is just an old man's talk about his youth—but what a picture he paints!
—North American Review.

Sheridan, Clare. Mayfair to Moscow; a diary. 1921.
I 10544

Mrs. Sheridan's diary, with the refreshing viewpoint she gained while engaged in sculpturing the heads of Russian leaders, somewhat relieves the apprehensions raised by the report of Mr. Wells on conditions in Russia, although she did not have the same opportunity to gain first-hand impressions.

HISTORY

Europe

Baring-Gould, S. Devonshire characters and strange events. 1908.
A 5433

Bouton, S. Miles. And the Kaiser abdicates; the story of the death of the German empire and the birth of the republic told by an eye-witness. 1920.
A 5546

A dramatic account of the fall of the German monarchy by the first enemy war-correspondent to enter Berlin after the armistice. He describes clearly the structure of the monarchy, the growth of socialism, the political history of the war, and the successive revolutions.

Guérard, Albert Léon. French civilization from its origins to the close of the middle ages. 1920.
A 5746

A survey of French life and history of interest to the general reader, while intended primarily to furnish an adequate background for the study of literature.

Konopczynski, Ladislas. A brief outline of Polish history. 1920. A 6097
(Polish encyclopædic publications.)

Taylor, Henry Osborn. Thought and expression in the sixteenth century. 1920. 2v. A 5968 v.1. The humanism of Italy.—Erasmus and Luther.

—The French mind.

2. England.—Philosophy and science.

Reviewers agree in calling this book a "feast" of Renaissance learning and arts. The New York Post says the author "tumbles on the cloth the learning, painting, dogma, poetry, drama, politics, science, philosophy, credulity, and reason of the most variegated of modern centuries."

Williams, Mary Wilhelmine. Social Scandinavia in the Viking age. 1920. A 4459

A careful study of the contents of archeological museums has enabled the author to depict very clearly the living conditions, the religion, the agriculture, martial prowess, language and literature, and the social and political structure of the earliest period of Scandinavian history.

European War

Beaman, Ardern. The squadron. 1920. A 7157

Pleasant, graphic, fluently-written reminiscences of a clergyman attached to a cavalry brigade.

James, Bessie R. For God, for country, for home; the National League for Woman's Service. 1920. A 7162

A review, clear, readable and well illustrated, of all kinds of work which American women united to do in the war days.—Booklist.

Jellicoe, Viscount. The crisis of the naval war. 1921. A 7161

Companion volume to The grand fleet, 1914–1916, A6921.

The authentic story of the defeat of the submarine campaign. It explains questions of policy and strategy, the influence of sea power in the great war, devotes one chapter to the co-operation of the United States, and relates many stories of heroism and daring.

Kincaid-Smith, M. The 25th Division in France and Flanders. 1918. A 7155

Ward, John. With the "Die-hards" in Siberia. 1920. A 7158

A vivid and fascinating narrative set down for the private use of the author's sons in case he did not return. It contains chapters on From Hong Kong to Siberia, Bolshevik successes, Japanese methods and Allied far-eastern policy, Russian labor, etc.

Wythe, George. A history of the 90th division. 1920. A 7159

Japan

Hara, Katsuro. An introduction to the history of Japan. 1920. A 4973

(Yamato Society publications.)

A carefully evolved and well written synopsis of the many centuries of Japanese national life. . . . It is honest Japanese propaganda, and it makes no pretensions of being anything else.—Boston Transcript.

The Jews

Heifetz, Elias. The slaughter of the Jews in the Ukraine in 1919. 1921. A 2690

Dr. Heifetz is not content merely to set down a tale of horrors. He seeks to analyze the social and psychological factors which lie behind this explosion of wholesale murder.—New Republic.

Sampter, Jessie E., ed. A guide to Zionism. 1920. A 2689

Spargo, John. The Jew and American ideals. 1921. A 2691

A defence of American ideals and institutions against anti-Semitism, and especially against the British anti-Semitic press and Henry Ford for their acceptance of the Protocols and consequent attempts to incite religious and racial prejudices by propaganda based upon unproved premises.

United States

Bennett, Helen B., and Haniphy, Joseph A., ed. Historical readings; an introduction to the study of American history; introduction by George Burman Foster. 1920. B 5551

Bolton, Herbert E. and Marshall, Thomas M. The colonization of North America, 1492–1783. 1920. B 5555

A solid treatise providing a more complete account than previous works have done of the colonies of nations other than the English and of English colonies other than those which established their independence.—Times (London).

Pettigrew, R. F. The course of empire, an official record; introduction by Scott Nearing. 1920. B 5935

Contents: Hawaii.—The acquisition of the Philippines.—Imperialism at home.—Appendices.

FICTION

Bassett, Sara Ware. Flood tide. 1921. F 10859

A pleasant, well-written story of Cape Cod containing minor characters that have appeared in the author's earlier books.

Blasco Ibañez, Vicente. The Mayflower (Flor de mayo); a tale of the Valencian seashore. 1921. F 11259

A story of the rough fisher folk of the author's native province told in broad strokes with uncompromising realism and dramatic feeling.

Chekhov, Anton. The schoolmistress, and other stories. 1921. F 11929

Contents: The schoolmistress.—A nervous breakdown.—Misery.—Champagne.—After the theatre.—A lady's story.—In exile.—The cattle-dealers.—Sorrow.—On official duty.—The first-class passenger.—A tragic actor.—A transgression.—Small fry.—The requiem.—In the coach-house.—Panic fears.—The bet.—The head gardener's story.—The beauties.—The shoemaker and the devil.

Russian character sketches comprising some of the finest of Chekhov's stories.

Comfort, Will Levington, and Armstrong, Willimina L., (Zamin Ki Dost). Son of power. 1920. F 12082

A series of short stories, full of Indian mysticism and glamour, about Skag, who first became acquainted with wild animals at the Lincoln Park

- Zoo, about his running away from home to become a circus trainer, and his exploits with various jungle beasts.
- Cullum, Ridgwell. The heart of Unaga. 1920. F 21410
An unusual plot in which an officer of the northwest police devotes many years to the search of the sleep-inducing drug used by the hibernating Indians, and is successful in penetrating to the heart of Unaga where he finds it.
- De Morgan, William. The old man's youth and the young man's old age. 1920. F 12453
This novel was unfinished at the time of the author's death. A short setting written by Mrs. De Morgan and termed "The story" has been supplied to elucidate the plot.
- Dodge, Louis. Tawi Tawi. 1921. F 12542
An absorbing narrative of adventure opening on a large Texan ranch. The heroine is a daughter of a Mexican mother and Spanish father for whose love two young Americans are rivals. After undergoing perilous hardships they finally return to her home where occurs the climax of this thrilling tale.
- Douglas, Norman. South wind. 1920. F 21694
—They went. 1921. F 21695
A fantastic and whimsical tale of a mythical pagan city whose red-haired, green-eyed princess was responsible for the departure of the men alluded to in the title.
- Forbes, George. Adventures in southern seas; a tale of the sixteenth century. 1920. F 22203
A romance of the days of discovery founded on authentic records of the Spanish, Dutch, French and English explorers.
- France, Anatole. The seven wives of Bluebeard, and other marvelous tales. 1920. J 154.25
Contents: The seven wives of Bluebeard.—The miracle of the great St. Nicolas.—The story of the Duchess of Cigogne and of Monsieur de Boulingrin.—The shirt.
- Harben, Will N. The divine event. 1920. F 13522
A story that deals with guardian angels and spirit communication.
- Hichens, Robert. The spirit of the time; a novel of today. 1921. F 13830
An unsolved mystery with the scene laid in a Swiss town of refugees and the plot hinging on a string of pearls purchased by an Englishman of a mysterious exotic Russian princess.
- Hurst, Fannie. Star-dust; the story of an American girl. 1921. F 23283
The story opens in a boarding house in St. Louis, where the heroine lived with her parents and dreamed of becoming a great singer. Her short and loveless marriage, her struggle against a hated environment and her resolute re-making of her life, makes this novel well worth reading.
- Johnston, Sir Harry. The man who did the right thing. 1921. F 14399
A story of an Englishman in the Indian army and his contact both with African missionaries and the British foreign office. It is hard to discover the line between fact and fiction, for it reads as much like adventurous biography as a work of the imagination.
- Kelland, Clarence Budington. Scattergood Baines. 1921. F 14452
A kindly humorous "David Harum" sort of a narrative, reconstructed from short magazine stories.
- Kelley, Ethel M. Beauty and Mary Blair. 1921. F 14455
A story of sophisticated youth growing up in the unrestricted individualism of our present society. The dialogue is clever and slangy and the plot and characters ultra-modern.
- Marshall, Archibald. The hall and the grange. 1921. F 24972
A leisurely story of English country life showing the effect of the war on two brothers living on adjoining estates but with different temperaments and experiences.
- Marshall, Edison. The strength of the pines. 1921. F 24977
The drama enacted by the beasts of the forest (including a remarkable grizzly) and their conflict with man, is more convincing than the rather improbable plot involving the humans.
- Merwin, Samuel. In red and gold. 1921. F 15299
Sequel to Hills of Han, F15298.
Griggsby Doane, the hero of Hills of Han, reappears here, as first mate of a river boat. The story presents a panorama of the great Yangtze river and its life during the outbreak of the Chinese revolution in 1911.
- Oldmeadow, Ernest. The hare. 1921. F 15753
Sequel to Coggin, F15788.
Coggin goes to Europe to cast off his provincialism and the evil effects of class antagonisms. He devotes himself to the study of the arts, especially music, experiences love and grief, and his conversion to Catholicism is the climax following logically upon the fascination he found in cathedral music and services.
- Porter, Eleanor H. Sister Sue. 1921. F 16536
Sister Sue is the older sister in a motherless family consisting of three children and the father who has lost his fortune and his mind at the same time. Sue keeps house, nurses the father, and supports the family (giving up a very promising musical career), but receives her reward at the end.
- Raine, William MacLeod. Gunsight Pass; how oil came to the cattle country and brought the new West. 1921. F 16809
A western story true to type in which the young hero gets mixed up with a group of brigands connected with a horse-stealing, a murder, a hold-up, and an abduction. It ends triumphantly for him in every case.
- Rudwin, Maximilian J., ed. Devil stories; an anthology. 1921. F 17543
Contents: The devil in a nunnery, by F. O. Mann.—Belphegor; or, The marriage of the devil, by Machiavelli.—The devil and Tom Walker, by Irving.—From the memoirs of Satan, by Hauff.—St. John's eve, by Gogol.—The devil's wager; The painter's bargain, by Thackeray.—Bon-bon, by Poe.—The printer's devil.—The devil's mother-in-law, by Caballero.—The generous gambler, by Baude-laire.—The three low masses, by Daudet.—Devil-puzzlers, by Perkins.—The devil's round, by Deulin.—The legend of Mont St. Michel, by Maupassant.—The demon pope; Madam Lucifer, by Garnett.—Lucifer, by France.—The devil, by Gorky.—The devil and the old man, by Masefield.

Sawyer, Ruth. The silver sixpence. 1921.
F 17687

A fairy-tale sort of story in which a professor of philology leaves $4,000,000 to his daughter who had thought they were poor, on condition that she make the first payment of $20,000 yield a good return in five years.

Schem, Lida C. The hyphen. 1920. 2 v.
F 17754

A study of the German group in our American life including all grades of reaction to the old traditions and the adopted country. It is sincere and comprehensive and contains illuminating material for the student of Americanization problems.

Scott, Temple. The silver age, and other dramatic memories. 1919. F 17872

Contents: The silver age.—An odd volume.—The lady and the singing-bird.—“Any vinders to mend?”—Reb Yankel.—New York at twilight.—Fifth Avenue and the Boulevard St. Michel.—The Faubourg Saint Bron-nex.—At the sign of the Golden Disk.

A collection of sketches and short stories filled with the spirit of youth.

Sidgwick, Ethel. Madam. 1921. F 18106

A study of moods and minds; a cross section of society still vibrating to the shock of war. All its persons are English.—New York Post.

Spears, Raymond S. The river prophet. 1920. F 18310

A story of the Mississippi and the drifting lives that dwell upon it.

Stacpoole, H. DeVere. Satan; a romance of the Bahamas. 1921. F 18468

A story with much action and daring adventure. On a cruise in the South Seas Bobby Ratcliffe and his friend desert the yacht to go with Satan and Jude on a tramp boat. Full of romance, Spanish pirates, sunken treasures, and mysterious islands.

Stern, G. B. Debatable ground. 1921. F 18338

The subject is the English Jew—the man in relation to the war and nationalism, the woman in relation to social emancipation. The method is that of Wells in the thorough analysis of conditions in his purpose novels.

Train, Arthur. By advice of counsel; being adventures of the celebrated firm of Tutt & Tutt, attorneys and counsellors at law. 1921. F 18545

Contents: The shyster.—The kid and the camel.—Contempt of court.—By advice of counsel.—“That sort of woman.”—You’re another!—Beyond a reasonable doubt.

Kindly humorous stories of courts and lawyers centering about the genial senior member of the firm whom the New York Times regards as “decidedly a worth-while addition to the gallery of lawyer portraits.”

Williamson, C. N. and A. M. The great pearl secret. 1921. F 19547

A new treatment of the old theme of the substitution of false pearls for genuine ones. The hero is a young English nobleman married to an American heiress.

Young, Francis Brett. The tragic bride. 1921. F 19939

An unusual story of great beauty and touching appeal. It is a new departure for Brett Young in which the New York Times thinks he follows Stevenson’s later style in combining realism of method with romantic idealism and poetic feeling.

YOUNG PEOPLE’S BOOKS

Miscellaneous

Grinnell, George Bird. When buffalo ran. 1920. B 8490

The true story of Wikis, an Indian boy of the plains seventy years ago. The daily life of the Indian from boyhood up to manhood is simply told, with enough incident and adventure to make it a real Indian tale.

Roadknight, Mrs., comp. Old-fashioned rhymes and poems. 1920. E 14340

Rolt-Wheeler, Francis. The boy with the U. S. inventors. 1920. H 6124

The twelfth book in the U. S. Service Series and as readable as the others. Any boy who has an “inventive turn,” will be keenly interested in the description of inventions and in tracing the effect they have had upon civilization and the industries.

Wallace, Edna Kingsley. Wonderings and other things. 1919. E 15101

Stories

Bridges, T. C. Martin Crusoe; a boy’s adventure on Wizard Island. 1920. H 7522

How Martin Crusoe sets out in his hydroplane to locate the mysterious wireless call which came from the center of the Sargasso Sea, and of what he discovered there.

Hawes, Charles Boardman. The mutineers; a tale of old days at sea and of adventures in the Far East as Benjamin Lathrop set it down some sixty years ago. 1920. H 8397

Of the mutiny on board the Island Princess and how Benjamin Lathrop, sixteen years old, helped to outwit the mutineers. A thrilling sea tale filled with the tang of the salt spray, and glimpses of outlandish biigs and murderous crews.

Langford, George. Pic, the weapon-maker. 1920. H 4792

Strange friendship between an ape-boy, a rhinoceros and a mammoth elephant during their travels through France in prehistoric times. Pic’s discovery of a treasure and his ability to fashion weapons brings him into the good graces of a tribe of cave men.

Stephens, James. Irish fairy tales; illustrated by Arthur Rackham. 1920. H 6631

Fairy tales of Ireland which are not found in the usual collections on Irish folklore. The stories are beautifully told, while the illustrations by Rackham are fascinating, bringing out the weird charm of the tales.

Wallace, Dillon. Troop one of the Labradors. 1920. H 6965

When the beloved Doctor Joe and the Angus boys started on a search for a stolen fox skin their adventures began. Not until the last page is the thief found and the mystery cleared up, after experiences which tax the strength, pluck and scoutcraft of the boys to their utmost.

In the Thomas Hughes Room

Chisholm, Louey, and Steedman, Amy, comp. A staircase of stories. 1920.

A graded collection of stories of interest to children from four to fourteen. A good book for a child to own.

Defoe, Daniel. Robinson Crusoe; pictures by N. C. Wyeth. 1920.

GOVERNMENT PUBLICATIONS OF SPECIAL INTEREST

Circulating copies may be issued on the regular library card in the Civics and Documents Department, first floor, Randolph Street entrance.

- Adams, Bristaw. An agricultural almanac for 1921. A1.9 1202
(Farmers' bulletin 1202.)
- Downing, F. P. Standard containers for fruits and vegetables. 1921. A1.9 1196
(Farmers' bulletin 1196.)
Written in the interests of uniformity in size of hampers, baskets, crates, and boxes, for fruit and vegetable containers, to further the standardization, already regulated by law for barrels, grape baskets and berry baskets.
- Hagne, Arnold. Geological history of the Yellowstone National Park. 1920. I 29.2 Ye3
(U. S. National Park Service.)
- Holt, L. Emmett. Your opportunity in the schools. 1921. I16.29 9
(U. S. Bureau of Education. Health Education No. 9.)
Full of suggestions as to methods of arousing the interest of the children in their own health.
- Hunt, Caroline L. Fresh vegetables and fruits as conservers of other staple foods. 1921. A1.9 871
(Farmers' bulletin 871, rev. 1921.)
"Special emphasis is laid on the economy of combining milk and its products with vegetables and fruits."
- Illinois. Dept. of Public Welfare. After care of prisoners released on parole. 1920.
"Accomplishments, statistical data, papers and addresses on its provisions and its administration."
- Lewis, Frank C. Farm buildings. 1921.
(Indiana. Agricultural Experiment Station. Circular 100.)
Valuable suggestions with illustrations, which may be modified to meet individual requirements. Plans and blue prints obtainable.
- Lloyd, J. W. Cooperative marketing of horticultural products. 1920.
(Illinois. Agricultural Experiment Station. Circular 244.)
A series of extracts from an exhaustive study of marketing conditions in California. The discussion of methods employed and principles involved is of value to Illinois and other states.
- Magnusson, Leifur. Housing by employers in the U. S. 1920. L2.3 263
(U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. Bulletin 263.)
A study in mining and manufacturing towns. Includes attractive illustrations of houses, with plans.
- Moomaw, S. B., and Sherman, C. B. Australia and New Zealand as markets for American fruit. 1921. A1.14/2 145
(U. S. Dept. of Agriculture. Dept. Circular 145.)
Gives production of fruit, conditions of markets, fruit importation laws, methods of marketing imported fruit, and possibilities of increasing American trade.
- Moore, J. G. Vegetable gardens. 1921.
(University of Wisconsin. College of Agriculture. Agricultural extension circ. 132.)
A timely circular with suggestions as to location, soils, tools, seeds, weeds, garden pests and sprays.
- Mulford, F. L. Roses for the home. 1921. A1.9 750
(Farmers' bulletin 750.)
- Nolan, Aretas W. Problem of summer teaching in connection with project supervision. 1920. I16.22 7
(U. S. Bureau of Education. Secondary school circular 7.)
Contains suggestions for teaching agriculture with illustrations of the practical application of some vital principles of education.
- Sando, Charles E. Process of ripening in the tomato, considered especially from the commercial standpoint. 1920. A1.3 859
(U. S. Department of Agriculture. Bulletin 859.)
The lack of taste in tomatoes shipped north during the winter from the south, is thought to be the result of picking fruit green, of wrapping and shipping it in closed cars.
- United States. Bureau of Fisheries. Canned salmon: pink and chum; with recipes for using them. 1921. C6.7 48
(Economic circular 48.)
We are told that color in salmon is only a matter of appearance, and that prejudice and custom have caused the public to ignore the pink and light colored salmon in favor of the darker meats.
- Dept. of Agriculture. Fishing, hunting and camping on the Cascade National Forest. 1920. A1.14/2 104
(Department circular 104.)
- — Forest trails and highways of the Mount Hood region. 1920. A1.14/2 105
(Dept. circular 105.)
- — In the open; the national forests of Washington. 1920. A1.14/2 138
(Dept. circular 138.)
- — Land of beautiful water, Chelan National Forest, Wash. 1920. A1.14/2 91
(Dept. circular 91.)
- — Mountain outings on the Rainier National Forest. 1920. A1.14/2 103
(Dept. circular 103.)
- — Vacation on the White Mountain National Forest. 1920. A1.14/2 100
(Department circular 100.)
These pamphlets show the charm of mountain and forest, and with description, illustrations, and maps demonstrate that they are pre-eminently the ideal places for vacations and camping.
- — Peppers. 1921. A1.14/2 160
(Dept. circular 160.)
Directions for their cultivation, with instructions for shipping and canning, together with a number of appetizing recipes.
- National Park Service. Grand Canyon National Park rules and regulations. 1921. I 29.9 G76-1921
Valuable for the traveler and pleasure seeker.
- Young, R. A. Forcing and blanching dasheen shoots. 1920. A1.14/2 125
(U. S. Dept. of Agriculture. Dept. circular 125.)
Dasheen shoots are used much like asparagus. They require a special method of cooking, which is given in this circular.
- Zeasman, G. C., and others. Dairy barns. 1921.
(Wisconsin. Agricultural Experiment Station. Bulletin 325.)
Suggestions and plans for building new barns and remodeling old ones, with attention to sanitation, heating, ventilation, and lighting.

Library Science, Books

Friedel, J. H. Training for librarianship; library work as a career. 1921. J 7292
(Lippincott's training series.)

A glowing account of possibilities and of actual progress achieved in recent years. It touches upon, and in most cases illumines, every important aspect of library work, and tells candidates for the profession how best to prepare themselves for it.—Survey.

Willis, James F. Bibliophily; or, Book-love. 1921. J 2846

Book-love, Mr. Willis says, is a matter of self-education and a mark of culture. His essays are sincere and sound pleas for the love of books.

PHILOSOPHY

Psychology, Psychoanalysis

Edson, David Orr. Getting what we want; how to apply psychoanalysis to your own problems. 1921. L 13886

The author maintains that as we learn through psychoanalysis to understand the structure of our mind and the development of mental processes we can learn to control it as a mechanic controls a machine.

Everett, Mrs. Leo. The privilege of pain; introduction by Kate Douglas Wiggin. 1920. L 13998

A description of the historical evidence that physical debility has often been found allied to genius.—Booklist.

Lawrence, D. H. Psychoanalysis and the unconscious. 1921. L 13971

In so far as it directs attention to the need of bringing into fruitful interaction the discoveries of Freud and our moral ideas in general, it will have done for the psychoanalytic movement the greatest possible service, that of clarifying its issues and lending dignity and significance to its results.—Professor Wuermyer in the New York Post.

Tansley, A. G. The new psychology and its relation to life. 1920. L 13953

Particularly interesting is his discussion of the "universal complexes" of the ego, herd and sex, which result from the play of experience upon the primary instincts. The book is on the whole free from those pathological exaggerations which characterize so many of so-called psychoanalysts.—Survey.

Tridon, André. Psychoanalysis, sleep and dreams. 1921. L 13655

Gives a sane presentation of the Freudian view, while at the same time illustrating some of its defects. As a handbook upon the subject it can be commended on account of the clarity of its presentation.—New York Post.

Child Study

Averill, Lawrence Augustus. Psychology for normal schools. 1921. L 13681

(Riverside textbooks in education.)

Cabot, Ella Lyman. Seven ages of childhood. 1921. L 13683

Mothers who have not read psychology will find in this book the answer to many puzzling phenomena they view tragically if they do not recognize the stages through which children grow.—Booklist.

Godin, Paul. Growth during school age, its application to education. 1920. L 13692

A somewhat technical study of the physical characteristics of childhood and adolescence. Its special value lies in the fact that its results are based on repeated measurements instead of single ones, as is usually the case.

Tracy, Frederick. The psychology of adolescence. 1920. L 13716

(Handbooks of moral and religious education.)

The author discusses the period of youth in its course from home to university and pronounces a warning against emphasizing the differences between children and grownups.

Spiritism

Glenconner, Pamela. The earthen vessel; a volume dealing with spirit-communication received in the form of book-tests, with a preface by Sir Oliver Lodge. 1921. L 13572

The author, who has lost a son in the war, writes this series of testimonials demonstrating spirit phenomena by new methods.

Lay, Wilfrid. Man's unconscious spirit; the psychoanalysis of spiritism. 1921. L 13481

A suggestive analysis of the part the unconscious plays in the psychology of the medium and the credulity of his witnesses.

Occult diary. L 13588

Records of seances held December 1, 1888, to December 27, 1912.

Occultism, Ghosts

Dickinson, Sidney. True tales of the weird; a record of personal experiences of the supernatural. 1920. L 13392

A matter-of-fact record by a journalist whose scientific spirit and sincerity are vouched for by an Oberlin professor of psychology.

Kilner, Walter J. The human atmosphere (the aura). 1920. L 13372

He is not in the least interested in occult mysteries and theosophic theories. All he wants is to ascertain facts, to demonstrate them scientifically, and to find out whether they have practical value. He describes each case in detail, giving the size, shape and color of the aura.—New York Times.

Sinnett, A. P. Collected fruits of occult teaching. 1920. L 13381

Temple, Ronald. The message from the king's coffer. 1920. L 13384
 "This work relates to the genesis of the alphabet and its unition as word."

Ethics, Success

Babson, Roger W. Fundamentals of prosperity; what they are and whence they come. 1920. L 14367

Marden, Orison Swett. Success fundamentals. 1920. L 14401

Contents: Health and success.—Efficiency.—How to find yourself.—Confidence.—The law of opulence.—Salesmanship.

Weaver, E. W. Occupational fitness and promise. 1920. L 14420

Sexual Ethics

Exner, M. J. The rational sex life for men. 1914. L 14463

RELIGION

Dole, Charles F. A religion for the new day. 1920. M 8865

Dr. Dole is not merely a dreamer. His feet are on the ground. The religion that he here describes brings renewed confidence to those who are grappling with modern programs of service and betterment.—Ozora S. Davis in the Survey.

Garesché, Edward F. The paths of goodness; some helpful thoughts on spiritual progress. 1920. M 9014

The author is a popular writer belonging to the Jesuit order.

French Literature

Baudelaire, Charles Pierre. SMITH, T. R., ed. Baudelaire, his prose and poetry. 1919. E 10632

(The modern library of the world's best books.)

Swinburne's poem in memory of Baudelaire, "Ave atque vale," opens this volume of translations from his writings.

Betham-Edwards, M., tr. French fireside poetry, with metrical translations. 1921. E 14342

The French "humbler poets" and the great ones when they also found their themes in the life of the people, in the home, field, vine-yard or workshop. Gives a type of poetry not found in the usual anthology.—Booklist.

Hudson, William Henry. A short history of French literature. 1919. J 5366

A condensed scholarly manual covering the time from the early middle ages to the late nineteenth century.

Poetry

Pound, Louise. Poetic origins and the ballad. 1921. J 7664

Papers intended to disprove the theory of the communal creation of the ballad and its origin in the dance. One chapter shows that traditional ballad making is still going on.—Booklist.

Bangs, John Kendrick. The cheery way; a bit of verse for every day. 1919. E 10633

Love, humor and pathos are to be found in them, and that person is indeed in peculiar circumstances who could not find a touching little sermon among some of the poems included in this whole yearful.—Boston Transcript.

Baring, Maurice. Poems; 1914-1919. E 14484

The sonnet on Mozart, the best poem, perhaps, in the book, is a delightful poem indeed, a sonnet that has got its movement from Mozart himself.—Times (London).

Benét, Stephen Vincent. Heavens and earth. 1920. E 14487

Originality marks his work in spite of the intimation that his themes are somewhat threadbare. He possesses a virility that is manifest at all times and a delight in swinging measures and emphatic rhymes.—New York Times.

Carpenter, Rhys. The plainsman, and other poems. 1920. E 10755

Short poems, partly inspired by modern Greek life.

Chapman, Arthur. Cactus Center; poems. 1921. E 10757

These cowpunchers are genuine, embarrassed, gunning individuals slightly apologetic at being rounded up between the covers of a book, yet nonchalantly indifferent, squid in cheek, to the public gaze.—New York Post.

Cone, Helen Gray. The coat without a seam, and other poems. 1919. E 14545

Sonnets and lyrics of war and peace.

Garrison, Theodosia. As the larks rise. 1921. E 10998

Always worthy of note, this new selection adds a depth of feeling to the author's other poems.—Booklist.

Hare, Amory, pseud. of Mrs. Arthur B. Cook. Tossed coins. 1921. E 14741

Poems full of true friendliness and a spirit of happy living which makes them particularly enjoyable.—Booklist.

A group of poems and songs of Wiltshire, with an exception in "Helgi and Sigrun," an Icelandic ballad.

Kenyon, James B. The harvest home; collected poems. 1920. E 11138

Poems in standard forms.

Owen, Wilfred. Poems; with an introduction by Siegfried Sassoon. 1921. E 11376

This book by a young poet killed in the war breathes a rare poetic spirit, though much of it is freighted with horror.

Reese, Lizette Woodworth. A branch of May; poems. 1919. E 11437

—Spicewood. 1920. E 11436

The spirit is from an old source, that undying sense of beauty and mystery which drifts across all Miss Reese's books of poems.—Boston Transcript.

Robinson, Corinne Roosevelt. The poems of Corinne Roosevelt Robinson. 1921. E 14963

This volume includes, with several new poems, the previous volumes, The call of brotherhood (E 11465), One woman to another (E 11467), and Service and sacrifice (E 11474).

Robinson, Edwin Arlington. Avon's harvest. 1921. E 14967

The Bookman says there is surely no more powerful dramatic poem in American literature than this which Mr. Robinson calls his "dime novel in verse."

Service, Robert W. Ballads of a Bohemian. 1921. E 11582

A collection of poems of Bohemian life in Paris, including a few gripping war pictures. A little prose sketch introducing each poem adds to the appeal.

Wagner, Richard. Tristan and Isolde (Tristan und Isolde); a dramatic poem, freely translated in poetic narrative form by Oliver Huckel. 1913. E 12977

Drama

Shepard, Odell. Shakespeare questions; an outline for the study of the leading plays. 1916. E 10219

(Harvard studies in English.)

Molnar, Franz. Liliom; a legend in seven scenes and a prologue. 1921. E 14105

The theme is slight and rather sentimental, but it is handled so deftly and lightly and redeemed with such sharpness and wit that the result is a drama of considerable dignity.—New Republic.

Neihardt, John G. Two mothers. 1921. E 12663

Contents: Eight hundred rubles.—Agrippina. The two mothers are a nameless Russian peasant woman who murders her son, and Nero's mother, whose son murders her. Both pieces are laconic and bitter, with considerable power in their grim epigrams and tigerish phrases.—Nation.

Noyes, Alfred. Sherwood; or, Robin Hood and the three kings; a play in five acts. School and acting ed. 1921. E 12674

The full text of the original illustrated edition (E 12675) is given with indicated cuttings and directions for production.

O'Neill, Eugene G. The Emperor Jones, Diff'rent, The straw. 1921. E 14166

Easily read plays with vivid characterization following what the reviewer in the Daily News calls the "sad-brow" tradition of Ibsen, Hauptmann, and the Russians.

Peele, George. The old wife's tale. E 12090, 3
(Little theater classics. v. 3.)

Phillips, Stephen. Collected plays. 1921. E 14192

Contents: Aylmer's secret.—Ulysses.—The sin of David.—Nero.—Faust.—Pietro of Siena.

A collection from which it was necessary to omit, because of copyright laws, two of Mr. Phillips' best known plays. "Paola and Francesca," and "Herod."

Przybyszewski, Stanislaw. Snow, a play in four acts; English version by O. F. Theis. 1920. E 14197

A powerful, rather tense play of a mixed-up quadrangular love affair, containing some extremely effective though sombre passages.

Shakespeare, William. Pericles, from Shakespeare. E 12090, 3
(Little theater classics.)

Shaw, George. Back to Methuselah; a metabiological pentateuch. 1921. E 14231

Contents: In the beginning; B. C. 4004 (In the Garden of Eden).—The gospel of the Brothers Barnabas; present day.—The thing happens; A. D. 2170.—Tragedy of an elderly gentleman; A. D. 3000.—As far as thought can reach; A. D. 31920.

Five separate plays forming one series on the subject of evolution and longevity to which is prefixed a survey which Francis Hackett in the New Republic regards as one of the most fascinating of all Shaw's prefaces.

Sheridan, Richard Brinsley. The rivals. 1920. E 14232
(Living literature series.)

Smith, Alice M., ed. Short plays by representative authors. 1920. E 14230

Contents: The Hraun farm, by J. Sigurjónsson.—The merry merry cuckoo, by Jeannette Marks.—The locked chest, by J. Masefield.—The post office, by R. Tagore.—Six who pass while the lentils boil, by S. Walker.—The silver lining, by Constance d'Arcy Mackay.—By ourselves, by L. Fulda.—The rider of dreams, by R. Torrence.—Spreading the news, by Lady Augusta Gregory.—The swan song, by A. Tchekhoff.—The man on the kerb, by A. Sutro.—The shadowed star, by Mary MacMillan.

Wedekind, Frank. Pandora's box; a tragedy in three acts. 1918. E 12998

Whiting, Eleanor. Common ground; a play in one act. 1921. E 13171
(Poet Lore plays.)

Wilcox, Constance. Told in a Chinese garden, and four other fantastic plays for out-doors or in-doors; especially adapted for amateur productions. 1920. E 13017

Contents: Told in a Chinese garden; a play pageant for a garden.—Pan pipes, a woodland play.—Four of a kind; a play for a boat.—The princess in the fairy tale; a children's garden play.—Mother Goose garden; a fantasy for a garden.—They rank as fantasy rather than drama, but with ample opportunity for clever characterization by the players and dramatic reaction between them. Wide scope is given for colorful backgrounds and costuming.—New York Post.

Essays and Miscellanies

Balfour, Arthur James. Essays, speculative and political. 1921. E 1885

Contents: Speculative: Decadence; Beauty, and the criticism of beauty; Bergson's Creative evolution; Francis Bacon; Psychological research.—Political: Anglo-German relations; Treitschke's view of German world-policy; The freedom of the seas; The foundations of a durable peace; A brief note on Zionism.

The philosophical essays are the work of a gifted amateur. Two of the political essays are admirable, an article on Anglo-American relations, and a review of Treitschke's view of German world-policy full of brilliant refutation and decisive wit.—Atlantic Monthly.

Bennett, Arnold. Things that have interested me. 1921. E 1901

A book of confessions that could have been written by no other living man. His style—perky, efficient, decisive—is the echo of a personality. . . . He gives us tips about painting, music, literature, acting, war, politics, manners and morals.—Robert Lynd in the New Statesman.

Conrad, Joseph. Notes on life and letters. 1921. E 2360

Contents: Letters: Books; Henry James; Alphonse Daudet; Guy de Maupassant; Anatole France; Turgenev; Stephen Crane, a note without dates; Tales of the sea; An observer in Malaya; A happy wanderer; The life beyond; The ascending effort; The censor of plays.—Life: Autocracy and war; The crime of partition; Note on the Polish problem; Poland revisited; First news; "Well done;" Tradition; Confidence; Flight; Some reflections on the loss of the "Titanic;" Certain aspects of the admirable inquiry; Protection on ocean liners; A friendly place.

"And so here they are, dusted but in no way polished, extending from the year '20, a thin array of really innocent attitudes. Conrad literary, Conrad political, Conrad controversial."—Preface.

Daly, Arnold. The dominant male; essays and plays. 1921. E 2409

Contents: The dominant male.—Playing golf.—Father and son.—James Stephens, an appreciation.—Democracy's king.—Why Shakespeare's plays could only have been written by an actor.—Between ourselves.—Artistic reasoning. — Gossip.—Letters from and to the author.

Literary diversions of the well-known actor. Perhaps the most valuable is the excellent article on Shakespeare in refutation of the Baconians.

Masson, Thomas L. Well, why not? 1921. E 4443

A group of fifty-nine original and refreshing skits written in a humorous vein on contemporary subjects.

More, Paul Elmer. A New England group and others; Shelburne essays, eleventh series. 1921. E 4586, 11

Contents: The spirit and poetry of early New England.—Jonathan Edwards.—Emerson.—Charles Eliot Norton.—Henry Adams.—Evolution and the other world.—Samuel Butler of Erewhon.—Viscount Morley.—Economic ideals.—Oxford, women, and God.

We are caught by the sheer integrity of his language, we are impressed by the feeling that here was a man of utter veracity, who never swerved aside to be funny or wise or original, but was concerned to say with unflinching precision just what he felt or thought.—New Republic.

Shestov, Leo. All things are possible. 1920. E 5714

The real title of the book is "The apotheosis of groundlessness" and the central idea is that there is no centralized idea. The first and essential condition of life is lawlessness. The one positive ideal is that the human soul believes in itself and in itself alone.—Nation.

Torr, Cecil. Small talk at Wreyland. 1918. E 6016

Author's reminiscences of things he has seen and heard in the family manor of Wreyland in Devonshire. The Athenæum calls it "a book as typically English as a Christmas pudding."

Van Dyke, Henry. Camp-fires and guide-posts; a book of essays and excursions. 1921. E 6229

Contents: Camp-fires and guide-posts.—A certain insularity of islanders.—A basket of chips.—Self, neighbor, and company.—Sympathetic antipathies.—Publicomania.—Moving day. — Firelight views.—Fishing in strange waters.—The pathless profession.—A mid-Pacific pageant.—Japonica.—Interludes on the koto.—Suicidal tendencies in democracy.—A bundle of letters.—Christmas greens.—On saying good-bye.—Fellow-travellers: An old-style American; Interpreter's house; The healing gift; A traveller from Altruria.

Wolcott, Laura. Maddalena's day, and other sketches. 1920. E 6308

Contents: Out of the present: Maddalena's day; Our knight of the lagoons; A corner of Venice; The old custode at Lucca; The spell of Pisa; A foothold in Provence; November by the North Sea; Across the centuries; On donkey-back to Cape Spartel.—Out of the past: The abbey's legend; The priest's dilemma; The iniquity of Midas; A brief for Mistress Socrates; Cophetua and the beggar-maid.

Stories suggested by old legends and travel sketches, mostly European, which are not informative in the conventional sense, but rather impressionistic renderings of colorful landscapes and the happy living of simple people.—Booklist.

Public Speaking

Readers and Speakers

Elson, William H., and Keck, Christine M. Junior high school literature. 1919-1920. 2 v. J 7485

Griscom, Ellwood, jr. Americanization; a school reader and speaker. 1920. J 7492

Johnson, Gertrude E. Modern literature for oral interpretation; practice book for vocal expression. 1920. J 7499

Selections of prose and poetry, chosen because of their power to awaken a responsive interest in students.—Booklist.

Neil, C. Edmund. Sources of effectiveness in public speaking; psychological principles practically used in developing ability to speak. 1920. J 7124

Sindelar, Joseph C., ed. Closing day entertainments. 1920. J 5711

TRAVEL AND DESCRIPTION

Butler, Frank Hedges. Fifty years of travel by land, water, and air. 1920. I 11389

A scrap book of wide travels and pictures, all evidently collected, as the trips were taken, for this English gentleman of leisure's pleasure.—Book-list.

Chamberlain, James Franklin. Geography: physical, economic, regional. 1921. I 11368

(Lippincott's school text series.)

McFee, William. An ocean tramp. 1921. I 11396

The author describes his impressions of life at sea as engineer on a trading steamer. The style is markedly literary and the narrative is interspersed with philosophical digressions.

Europe

Amiens before and during the war. 1919. I 2688

(Michelin's illustrated guides to the battlefields 1914-1918.)

Boucher, François. American footprints in Paris; a guide book of historical data pertaining to Americans in the French capital from the earliest days to the present times. 1921. I 11844

Brailsford, Henry Noel. The Russian workers' republic. 1921. I 10522

A full explanation of the soviet system in Russia and the present dictatorship. The author is optimistic in his analysis of conditions and believes the system will prove successful if peace and trade are restored to Russia.

Cyriax, Tony. Among Italian peasants. 1919. I 10447

In the village of Campi, Tuscany.

Dawson, Coningsby. It might have happened to you; a contemporary portrait of central and eastern Europe. 1921. I 11253

Peace is as alluring a subject to Mr. Dawson as war. He makes a sentimental plea for the starving families in Europe based on a realistic picture of conditions there.

Howe, Frederic C. Denmark; a co-operative commonwealth. 1921. I 10337

An illuminating account of how the individualistic Danes have succeeded in agricultural cooperation, following upon half a century of public high schools that make a point of cultivating the application of trained intelligence to every day life and work.

Roberts, Kenneth L. Europe's morning after. 1921. I 11265

Seligsberg, Alfred F. Invalid Europe; some impressions of recent travel. 1921. I 11266

Thackeray, William Makepeace. Sketch books. I 11269

Contents: The Paris sketch book.—The Irish sketch book of 1842.—Notes of a journey from Cornhill to Grand Cairo.—Sultan Stork.—Dickens in France.

Waddington Old Hall, Waddington, in the West. Riding of the county of York; views of the property and historical descriptive reviews. 1920. I 10394

Wilson, Francesca M. Portraits and sketches of Serbia. 1920. I 11053

Contents: A pagan people and a barbarous speech.—A backwater of the great war.—The flaming bird.—The hidden lake.—Ben Negro.—Dragomir; a story for children.—A professor of antiquities.—A schoolmaster of the Near East.—The return of the exiles.—Requiescat in pace.—The orphan hunt.—Story of a runaway.—Grimm's folklore in the twentieth century.

Asia

Andrews, Roy Chapman. Across Mongolian plains; a naturalist's account of China's "great northwest." 1921. I 10663

A popular narrative of the second Asiatic expedition of the American museum of natural history, 1918-1919.

A popular narrative of a hunting and exploring expedition (1918-1919) which resulted in the addition of splendid groups of Asiatic animals in their natural settings to the Natural History Museum in New York.

Hackenbroch, John P. A trip to Palestine and Syria. 1913. I 10908

McGovern, William Montgomery. Modern Japan; its political, military, and industrial organization. 1920. I 10701

A condensed account of political and military affairs in Japan by a man who has spent ten years in the Far East. The psychology of the people as expressed in literature, art and religion, is also touched upon.

Murdock, Victor. China the mysterious and marvellous. 1920. I 10659

Letters sent from an editor-owner in China to his own country town paper. They are written in a popular, journalistic style.

North America

Buchanan, Angus. Wild life in Canada. 1920. I 4210

A record of value to the scientist and of fascinating interest to any reader describing a journey into northern Saskatchewan by sled and canoe.

Thompson, Wallace. The people of Mexico; who they are and how they live. 1921. I 10024

An intelligent and sympathetic record by a man who lived among the Mexican people for many years. It is pessimistic in so far as he believes that the Diaz government was the only possible ideal and that since its members are scattered there is little hope for the future.

United States

Campbell, John C. The southern highlander and his homeland. 1921. I 11606

This account, written after nearly twenty-five years in Appalachia, shows an intimate knowledge of the mountains and their people, whose social problems are treated wisely and judiciously. It is written without sentimentality, but has real sentiment.

George, W. L. Hail Columbia! Random impressions of a conservative English radical. 1921. I 4330

Sympathetic and witty comments on the American life Mr. George was able to see in six months of interested observation. In his ardent zeal for the various manifestations of industry the New Republic thinks he has taken "a more interesting line on this much discussed country than most of the observers who have preceded him."

Hall, Ansel F., comp. and ed. Handbook of Yosemite National Park; a compendium of articles on the Yosemite region by the leading scientific authorities. 1921. I 11768

Hall, Trowbridge. Californian trails, intimate guide to the old missions; the story of the California missions. 1920. I 11769

There is a circle of legends surrounding each of these missions, either concerned with the spiritual passions of the brown-robed padres or with the carnal hates and loves of the laity, and of these Mr. Hall has gathered a great store.—New York Post.

Munk, J. A. Southwest sketches. 1920. I 4415

During his thirty-five years of ranch life Mr. Munk has collected a large library relating to the region from which, with its mesas, mountains, Indians, and cliff dwellers, we now have these delightful chats.

Ridgley, Douglas C. The geography of Illinois. 1921. I 4351

(Regional geographies of the United States of America.)

South America

Graham, R. B. Cunninghame. Cartagena and the banks of the Sinú. 1920. I 11172

He is responsive to the spirit of the country, and a name or a relic is enough to set him recreating the past in words full of life and color.—Times (London).

Sherwood, F. A. Glimpses of South America. 1920. I 11163

Informal impressions made on the author during trips to Peru and Argentine. His account is very interesting and full of much incidental information.

Oceanica

O'Brien, Frederick. Mystic isles of the South Seas. 1921. I 12084

A chronicle of an American voyaging among those mysterious and colorful islands near the equator. It is written in a fascinating manner and lifts us out of the everyday into a land of romance and unreality.

(The modern library of the world's best books.)

The naive and tender confessions of that delightful child who, dying before her ninth year, has lived through a century by the charm and unconscious whimsy of her diaries and the memory of the devotion which Walter Scott lavished upon her.—New York Evening Post.

Lehmann, Liza. The life of Liza Lehmann, by herself. 1919. C 22935

The autobiography of a famous cosmopolitan singer and composer who knew intimately Liszt, Verdi and the Schumanns as well as Browning, Bret Harte, Nordica, and the artists Millais and Leighton.

Lincoln, Abraham. GORE, J. ROGERS. The boyhood of Abraham Lincoln, from the spoken narratives of Austin Gollaher. 1921. C 23010

One gets the impression of a most unusual boy, gentle, sensitive, humane; ungainly and aware of his ungainliness; passionately desirous of obtaining education; brave, devoted, conscientious.—New York Post.

Mahan, Alfred Thayer. TAYLOR, CHARLES CARLISLE. The life of Admiral Mahan, naval philosopher, rear-admiral United States navy. 1920. C 23207

Reid, Whitelaw. CORTISSOZ, ROYAL. The life of Whitelaw Reid. 1921. C 23909

v. 1. Journalism, war, politics.

2. Politics, diplomacy.

Sprinkled liberally with anecdotes and letters, and written in a strong, positive style, this makes an authoritative and interesting biography.

Van Horne, William. VAUGHAN, WALTER. The life and work of Sir William Van Horne. 1920. C 24653

The romantic history of the builder of the Canadian Pacific and Cuban railways who started life in Joliet as a telegraph messenger boy.

Victoria, Queen of England. STRACHEY, LYTON. Queen Victoria. 1921. C 24684

Perhaps it has occurred to him that an uncommented portrayal of this great national figurehead and fetish, of what this quaint old lady thought and felt as she sat so stolidly on the apex of the British Empire, might make a book of ironic significance more full of what the French call malice than the Eminent Victorians?—Logan Pearsall Smith in the Dial.

HISTORY

Elson, Henry W. Modern times and the living past. 1921. A 2232

A rapid summary of world history emphasizing the human interest throughout is followed by a more thorough account of modern times, exclusive of U. S. history and devoting nearly one hundred pages to the recent war.

Fling, Fred Morrow. The writing of history; an introduction to historical method. 1920. A 2351

Professor Fling's historical work is along the lines of German scientific method. In this volume he distinguishes very clearly between the sciences of history and sociology.

Marvin, F. S., ed. Recent developments in European thought; essays. 1920. A 2366

(The unity series.)

Contents: General survey, by F. S. Marvin.—Philosophy, by A. E. Taylor.—Religion, by F. B. Jewons.—Poetry, by C. H. Herford.—History, by G. P. Gooch.—Political theory, by A. D. Lindsay.—Economic development: The industrial scene (1842), Mining operations, The spirit of association; by C. R. Fay.—Atomic theories, by W. H. Bragg.—Biology since Darwin, by Leonard Doncaster.—Art, by A. Clutton Brock.—A generation of music, by Ernest Walker.—The modern renaissance, by F. Melian Stawell.

Petrie, W. M. Flinders. Some sources of human history. 1919. A 2476

Relics of prehistoric man and earliest civilized times.

Webster, Hutton, comp. Historical source book. 1920. A 2234

A compilation of thirty-three of the epoch-marking documents in the history of England and America, beginning with the Magna Carta. The index serves also as a glossary.

Europe

Gooch, G. P. Nationalism. 1920. A 5963

(International relations series.)

The author holds that the only legitimate nation is that with a culture so peculiar to itself as to make the group, the expression of a human instinct. This unit he opposes to the combination arising from motive demanding the subjugation of other peoples.—Booklist.

Iswolsky, Alexander. Recollections of a foreign minister. 1921. A 7880

In no sense a sensational revelation of state secrets, but rather a carefully pictured series of men and events in Russia from 1905 to 1917 as seen by a man who knew his countrymen from peasant to upper class and a moderate liberal.—Booklist.

Linden, H. vander. Belgium, the making of a nation. 1920. A 4256

The professor of history at Liège dwells in turn upon the forces which have contributed to make Belgium a distinctive nationality.

Mowrer, Paul Scott. Balkanized Europe; a study in political analysis and reconstruction. 1921. A 5969

A book for those who want to understand Europe and who want to understand why Europe, despite our relief organization and military help, does not understand us.—New York Post.

Ransome, Arthur. The crisis in Russia. 1921. A 7912

The crisis is economic and is due to the appalling condition of transportation. Mr. Ransome believes that in spite of the temporary success of the communists the regeneration of industry will prove a very slow process without intervention and may mean collapse of other countries.

Ross, Edward Alsworth. The Russian Bolshevik revolution. 1921. A 7916

The book is engrossing and the story vividly told. . . It is also a most excellent history, a very interesting book and a storehouse of historic pictures.—New York Times.

Thatcher, Oliver J., and McNeal, Edgar Holmes. Europe in the middle age. 1920. A 6488

Similar in scope to Thatcher and Schevill's book on the same subject, but largely rewritten.

United States

Andrews, Matthew Page, comp. The women of the South in war times. 1920. B 7377

Duncan, Louis C. Medical men in the war of the American revolution; the New York campaign of 1776. 1920. B 5451

Eekhof, A. Three unknown documents concerning the Pilgrim Fathers in Holland. 1920. B 7913

Graffenried, Christoph von, and others. Christoph von Graffenried's account of the founding of New Bern; ed. with an historical introduction and an English translation, by Vincent H. Todd and Julius Goebel. 1920. B 4134

(Publications of the North Carolina Historical Commission.)

Hayes, Ellen. Wild turkeys and tallow candles. 1920. B 4170

A description of life in Granville, O., 1850-1860.

Krafft, Herman F., and Norris, Walter B. Sea power in American history; the influence of the navy and the merchant marine upon American development. 1920. B 5817

A well-planned work, treating the course of our sea-power through the prowess of men, rather than in terms of ships and engagements. The authors display a contagious enthusiasm for their subject.

Rutherford, Mildred Lewis. Facts and figures vs. myths and misrepresentations; Henry Wirz and the Andersonville prison. 1921. B 7379

—Truths of history; a fair, unbiased, impartial, unprejudiced and conscientious study of history. Object: to secure a peaceful settlement of the many perplexing questions now causing contention between the North and the South. 1920. B 7378

The Jews, Polynesia

Scholefield, Guy H. The Pacific, its past and future, and the policy of the great powers from the eighteenth century. 1920. A 3890

This book is really an international history of Polynesia. The author makes the point that British policy has been reluctant in accepting the responsibility of government among the islands. Interesting.—Booklist.

Zangwill, Israel. The voice of Jerusalem. 1921. A 2692

A collection of essays devoting much space to appraisal of the present extraordinary political and social position of the Jews with hopes of a Zionist state in Palestine, balanced against massacres in eastern Europe and strong anti-semitism in more westerly countries.

FICTION

Andreyev, Leonid. Satan's diary. 1920. F 10553

The last work of this young Russian novelist. It is a satire on humanity drawn with broad burlesque strokes, in which man is represented as all evil and out-devils Satan who stalks abroad in human form.

Arène, Paul. The golden goat. 1921. F 10650

A delicious tale of love and hidden treasure in a pastoral setting. The true feeling of Provence, its ancient civilization and pleasant country is given by one who himself belonged to Southern France.

Banning, Margaret Culkin. Half loaves. 1921. F 10844

An interesting story of married life to-day. A contrast is drawn between the placid well-bred, convent-raised, mother-type of woman and a childless social climber. The tone is wholesome, the characterizations are excellent and the situations not overdrawn.

Bedford-Jones, H. The Mardi Gras mystery. 1921. F 10975

A swiftly moving, highly improbable, tale with plenty of mystery and a satisfactory ending.

Beresford, J. D. Revolution; a story of the near future in England. 1921. F 20404

An excellently told story growing out of the terror inspired in England by the 1919 railroad strike. It shows Beresford's idea of what a possible revolution would be like and his opinion that it would end in ignominious failure.

Brown, Edna A. Journey's end. 1921. F 20745

A light, pleasant story of New England Quaker life.

Bryant, Marguerite. A courageous marriage. 1921. F 20762

A well-written, cleverly worked out story in which we encounter mystery, blackmail, a touch of spiritualism, and all the factors that keep one interested until the end.

Buckrose, J. E., pseud. of Mrs. A. E. F. Jameson. The house with the golden windows. 1921. F 14342

A slight, sentimental story of a girl who unwittingly accepts a fortune to which as an adopted daughter she is not entitled. The discovery drives away her worthless suitor, but his place is filled by another more deserving of her love.

Burke, Thomas. More Limehouse nights. 1921. F 20797

Short stories of London's Chinese quarter. Contents: The yellow scarf.—A game of poker.—Katie the kid.—The heart of a child.—The dumb wife.—Bluebell.—A family affair.—The little flowers of Frances.—The perfect girl.—The affair at the warehouse.—Big Boy Blue.—Mazurka.—The scarlet shoes.—The good Samaritans.—Twelve golden curls.—Miss Plum-Blossom.—The cane.—The song of Ho Ling.

It is impossible to forget the strange characters that people these tales. However sordid they may be, they fascinate with their blazing frankness toward life and death.—Bookman.

Burroughs, Edgar Rice. Tarzan the terrible. 1921. F 20801

Sequel to Tarzan of the apes, F 11505; The return of Tarzan, F 11333; The beasts of Tarzan, F 11334; The son of Tarzan, F 11335; Tarzan and the jewels of Opar, F 11336; Jungle tales of Tarzan, F 11286; Tarzan the untamed, F 11338.

Camp, Wadsworth. The guarded heights. 1921. F 11594

Humiliated by the taunts of his employer's lovely daughter, the hero leaves the estate where he has served as groom and goes to Princeton. Then comes the war, and in the end he wins everything he set out to—girl and all.

Child, Richard Washburn. The velvet black. 1921. F 11913

Contents: The velvet black.—Identified.—The nightingale.—A whiff of heliotrope.—The cracking knee.—Fiber.—An experiment in rescue.—The avenger.—Pode.—In dancing shadows.—Foxed.

Intensely interesting mystery stories characterized chiefly by an atmosphere of crime. The author is particularly deft in the use of intangible things, like an odor, to create horror.

Comstock, Harriet T. The shield of silence. 1921. F 21328

Two girls from widely different stations in life are adopted by the aunt of one who does not know the two apart. The story is written to prove that the influence of heredity and environment is in the ratio of 1 to 2, not 1 to 1.

Dawson, Coningsby. The kingdom round the corner. 1921. F 12352

Lord Taborly returns from the war to find his fiancée in love with his former valet who has risen to the rank of brigadier general. He gives her up and after helping all concerned to find their "kingdoms" eventually finds his own.

Dorrance, Ethel and James. Get your man; a Canadian mounted mystery. 1921. F 21672

The search for the murderer of John Moore, a mining expert, found dead in his office in Seattle, and the recovery of the stolen formulas for his new process of extracting radium form the plot of a typical Yukon story.

Dwight, H. G. The emperor of Elam, and other stories. 1920. F 12615

Contents: Like Michael.—Henrietta Stackpole, rediviva.—The pagan.—White bombazine.—Unto the day.—Mrs. Derwall and the higher life.—The bathers.—Retarded bombs.—Susannah and the Elder.—The emerald of Tamerlane (in collaboration with John Taylor).—Studio smoke.—Behind the door.—The bald spot.—The emperor of Elam.

Artistically skilful atmospheric stories whose scenes are laid in Alaska, New England, Sweden, Italy and the Near East.—Booklist.

Fenger, Frederic A. The golden parrot. 1921. F 12847

An entertaining tale of a sloop with a will of its own which carries its owners to the West Indies and treasure to be found there.

Fletcher, J. S. The Chestermarke instinct. 1921. F 22127

A detective story centering around a bank robbery.

Freeman, Lewis R. Hell's hatches. 1921. F 22254

The mystery and color of the South Seas, the romance and fascination of high adventure, of swashbuckling men and beautiful women, make this tale with its depths of human degradation and fear-some crime and its heights of superlative bravery and sacrifice worthy of its title.

Gregory, Jackson. Desert Valley. 1921. F 13221

A superannuated professor proves that 'e is very much alive by undertaking a search for gold. His characterization is excellent, and the contrast between him and the rougher people of the mining towns and cattle ranches gives rise to many amusing situations.

Grimshaw, Beatrice. My South Sea sweetheart. 1921. F 22624

A love story with a complicated plot.

Haldeman-Julius, Mr. and Mrs. Dust. 1921. F 13427

A remarkable and well-written story of Kansas, in which the dust of the prairies typifies the somber and tragic lives depicted. The theme seems to be the vanity of human wishes.

Hamp, Pierre. People. 1921. F 13529

Contents: Introduction, by Elizabeth S. Sergeant.—Author's preface.—The Fried-potato sisters.—Nounou.—The Sweet smeller.—Monsieur Robled's throat.—The tight-wads.—A man with a soft job.—Gracieuse.—Mademoiselle Sourire.—The Seine rises.—At the express window.—At the Chevalier restaurant.—Fat-Month.—The Fly-catcher.—A rich city.—"Miller, you're asleep."—A labour demonstration.—Boxers.—A Bourbon's pleasures.—The Joy boys.—Monsieur Becqueriaux.—The king's c's.—The screen.

Sketches portraying the realism of every day life from the point of view of a French working-man who expresses the awakened self-consciousness of his class.

Harris, Corra. My son. 1921. F 13614

Sequel to A circuit rider's wife, F 13508.

Problems confronting the mother of a Methodist preacher do not sound gripping. But the heroine has made them so with her sense of humor, her shrewd, witty observations, her illuminating intuitiveness.—Bookman.

O. Henry memorial award; prize stories of 1919-1920. 2 v. F 18283

1919: England to America, by M. P. Montague.—"For they know not what they do," by W. D. Steele.—They grind exceeding small, by B. A. Williams.—On strike, by A. P. Terhune.—The elephant remembers, by E. Marshall.—Turkey red, by F. G. Wood.—Five thousand dollars reward, by M. D. Post.—The blood of the dragon, by T. G. Springer.—"Humoresque," by F. Hurst.—The lubbeny kiss, by S. Rice.—The trial in Tom Belcher's store, by S. A. Derieux.—Porcelain cups, by J. B. Cabell.—The high cost of conscience, by B. Ravenel.—The kitchen gods, by G. F. Alsop.—April 25th, as usual, by E. Ferber.

1920: Each in his generation, by M. S. Burt.—"Contact," by F. N. Hart.—The camel's back, by F. S. Fitzgerald.—Break-Neck hill, by E. Forbes.—Black art and Ambrose, by G. Gilpatrick.—The judgment of Vulcan, by L. F. Hartman.—The argosies, by A. Hull.—Alma mater, by O. F. Lewis.—Slow poison, by A. D. Miller.—The face in the window, by W. D. Pelley.—A matter of loyalty, by L. Perry.—Professor Todd's used car, by L. H. Robbins.—The thing they loved, by M. Rutledge.—Butterflies, by R. Sidney.—No flowers, by G. A. Smith.—Footfalls, by W. D. Steele.—The last room of all, by S. F. Whitman.

Kaye-Smith, Sheila. Green apple harvest. 1921. F 14460

A story of the black-sheep son of a Sussex farmer whose quest for God is at variance with his everyday life. The characters are finely drawn and there are charming subtleties and bits of pathos, while the country itself stands out indelibly.

León, Ricardo. A son of the hidalgos. 1921. F 14644

The melancholy atmosphere of ruin pervades this tale of a modern son of an ancient race. Its charm lies mostly in the poetical and, sensitive beauty of its style and this is remarkably well retained in the translation.

Leverage, Henry. The ice pilot. 1921. F 14672

An absorbing story of the Bering region by an author who in some quarters is regarded as Jack London's closest successor.

Lincoln, Joseph C. Galusha the Magnificent; a novel. 1921. F 14655

Taken all in all, this new tale is fully equal to his stories that have gone before and highly entertaining. He has by no means worked out that Cape Cod vein.—New York Post.

Lincoln, Natalie Sumner. The unseen ear. 1921. F 24540

A light detective story.

Livingston, Florence Bingham. The custard cup. 1921. F 24550

A wholesome, cheery story of helpfulness and development of character amidst poverty and adverse conditions. It centers around a "Mrs. Wiggs" sort of character and the waifs she adopted.

Lowndes, Mrs. Belloc. From out the vasty deep. 1921. F 24675

A story of love and crime with a strong incidental element of spiritualism and the occult.

Ludovici, Anthony M. Too old for dolls; a novel. 1921. F 24721

A psychological novel dealing with the reactions upon one another of a woman of fifty-five, who persists in keeping up the illusion of thirty-five, and her two daughters.

Lynde, Francis. The fire bringers. 1921. F 24768

An adventure and mystery story connected with an engineering project carried on in a small town.

MacGrath, Harold. The pagan madonna. 1921. F 24845

A novel based on a clash of purposes among four adventurous strong-willed characters under the domination of Chance, the pagan madonna.

MacNamara, Brinsley. The valley of the squinting windows. 1920. F 24897

The scene is laid in Ireland among unpretentious people and centers about one woman, Nan Byrne, and her selfish aspirations. The style is good, the characters though unpleasant, are well drawn, and the story interesting.

Merrick, Leonard. A chair on the boulevard. 1921. F 15272

Tales of Bohemian Paris that have all the sparkle and unexpected twist of O. Henry, and are, in addition, written about more interesting people.—Chicago Evening Post.

Morley, Christopher. Tales from a rolltop desk. 1921. F 15496

Contents: The prize package.—Advise to the loverlorn.—The curious case of Kenelm Digby.—Gloria and the garden of Sweden.—The commutation chop-house.—The pert little hat.—Urn burial.—The battle of manila envelopes.—The climacteric.—Punch and Judy.—Referred to the author.

Has the mellowness of spirit, the easy tolerance, the wide and unselfconscious understanding of books and men, which have become recognized characteristics of the genial conductor of the New York Evening Post's "Bowling Green."—Bookman.

Mulder, Arnold. The sand doctor. 1921. F 15559

A quiet wholesome story of a young doctor and his wife, in which the Michigan dunes hold a Hardy-like place and are associated with all important crises.

Mulford, Clarence E. The Bar-20 three; relating a series of startling and strenuous adventures, in the cow-town of Mesquite, of the famous Bar-20 trio—Hopalong Cassidy, Red Connors, and Johnny Nelson. 1921. F 15568

Sequel to Bar-20, F 15561; Bar-20 days, F 15560; Hopalong Cassidy, F 15563; Buck Peters, ranchman, F 15564; The coming of Cassidy, F 15565; The man from Bar-20, F 15566; Johnny Nelson, F 15567.

Mundy, Talbot. Told in the East. 1920. F 15591

Contents: Hookum hai.—For the salt which he had eaten.—Mac Hassan Ah.

These three stories, two of which are of English army life in India, portray in an interesting manner the habits of the natives and life of the soldier. The third story is a vividly drawn picture of English naval life in Arabia.

Ogden, G. W. The flockmaster of Poison Creek. 1921. F 15744

A western story of the regulation blood-and-thunder type.

Olmstead, Florence. This little world. 1921. F 15760

Your feet are planted firmly in the realism of green muslin dresses with tucks, and a cat that sleeps upon the violet bed of a poisonously inclined neighbor, yet you are whisked away unaware into romance.—Chicago Post.

Ostrander, Isabel. The crimson blotter. 1921. F 15855

Once the unreality of the characters has been accepted and dismissed, the story moves rapidly enough through three hundred pages of incident.

Overton, Grant. World without end. 1921. F 15866

A whimsical story of old Long Island based upon a comedy of errors in which a young woman crosses the ocean to marry a bridegroom who was expecting her sister instead.

Pedler, Margaret. The lamp of fate. 1921. F 16087

The story of a beautiful dancer and her train of suitors, and the suffering she is finally compelled to endure before she can win the respect of the one man whom she loves.

Phillpotts, Eden. Orphan Dinah. 1921. F 16299

An addition to the number of Mr. Phillpotts' Dartmouth stories, with characteristic beauty of description and strength of character portrayal. The theme is the injustice of English divorce laws especially when concerning the humble poor.

Railey, Julia Houston. Show down. 1921. F 16784

Nancy Carroll comes back to her little Arkansas town full of ideas about feminism and social and political reform. The characters are well drawn and the interest of the story is not sacrificed to the talks of peonage and politics.

Reeve, Arthur B. The film mystery. 1921. F 17026

A Craig Kennedy detective novel. Sequel to The silent bullet, F 17018; The poisoned pen, F 17019; The dream doctor, F 17020; The gold of the gods, F 17021; The social gangster, F 17022.

Roche, Arthur Somers. Find the woman. 1921. F 17417

A swiftly-moving mystery story of one exciting week in New York city.

Rohmer, Sax, pseud. of Arthur S. Ward. Bat wing. 1921. F 18992

A detective story dealing with voodooism. The solution of the mystery comes to the reader as a complete surprise.

Swinerton, Frank. Coquette. 1921. F 18501

A naturalistic study of a charwoman's daughter endowed with ambition and determination who realizes that her advancement must come through her relations with men and plans her life accordingly.

Tarkington, Booth. Alice Adams. 1921.
F 27702

Another character sketch of mid-west small-town life, and the Daily News lays the excellence of its delineation to the fact that Tarkington "stands somewhere between the psychologists of the '90s and the psychanalists of today."

Terhune, Albert Payson. The man in the dark. 1921. F 27742

A story of the West Virginia mountains with good characterization—not forgetting Bruce the collie.

Tietjens, Eunice. Jake. 1921. F 18543

The first novel by a well-known Chicago poet. It contains many beautiful bits of poetic description in rhythmic prose, especially of the Dunes, and some noteworthy sketches of incidental characters.

Wilson, Harry Leon. The wrong twin. 1921. F 19590

The story of two brothers from their very entertaining childhood days to the war, which enters the narrative just enough to straighten things out.

How the Chicago Fire Started the Public Library

THE romantic beginnings of the Chicago Public Library are fitly called to mind on this occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of the great Chicago Fire of 1871, since the Library literally owes its inception to that calamity. No doubt Chicago would have had a public library sooner or later, in any event, but certainly the foundation of such an institution was farthest from the thoughts of the distressed city in the distressful winter of 1871. But, among the benefactions pouring in from all parts of the globe, came tidings of a collection of books assembled in London for shipment to Chicago "as a mark of English sympathy." The donors comprised the entire British literary and social world, stirred to this united action by an appeal issued by Thomas Hughes,* himself the author of "Tom Brown's School Days" and other works, and signed with him by Queen Victoria, Gladstone, the Duke of Argyll, Disraeli, Carlyle and many other distinguished personages. No copy of this original circular is now extant, but the following quotation from it sufficiently reflects the sentiments animating the enterprise:

"The Library to be established would be regarded as a token of that sentiment of kinship which, independently of circumstances, and independent of every other consideration, must ever powerfully affect the different branches of the English race." It continues by saying, "that while the home literature of the present day and the last hundred years will form an important portion of the New Library, the characteristic feature of the gift will consist in sending to the Americans works of the thirteen preceding centuries, which are the common inheritance of both peoples."

A letter addressed by Mr. Hughes to the London Times shortly afterwards is also worth quoting:

*The Public Library has sought to signify some slight recognition of its obligation to Thomas Hughes as its virtual founder and patron by incorporating his name in the title of its children's department: The Thomas Hughes Room for Young People.

To the Editor of the Times—
Sir:

In consequence of the favourable replies of British authors & learned societies to the appeal for books for a free library at Chicago the committee have been obliged to look for a space where the gift books can be recd., classified & packed for transportation to America, & I am glad to say that the Board of the Crystal Palace Company have willingly given the necessary space. May I be allowed through your columns, to request that all persons desirous of contributing books will forward them to the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, E. C., merely endorsing "For the Chicago Free Library" on the parcel, & preserving a duplicate list to compare with the list that will be advertised? As Her Majesty has set the good example of giving her autograph on the title-page of her books, I would suggest that all authors should do the same. I may here say, in answer to certain statements which have appeared in the Press, that the proposed gift has been warmly approved both in England & America & the list which will be advertised in due time will include the names of a very large number of our most eminent literary & scientific men as contributors.

As the library will contain books old & new in all departments of literature, donations in money will be employed in the purchase of rare works not otherwise obtainable, & to defray the necessary expenses. Such donations may be sent to Sir John Rose (Morton Rose & Co., 1 Bartholomew-lane, E. C.) who has kindly consented to act as treasurer.

The honorary secretaries Messrs. A. H. Burgess or F. W. Chepon will answer any inquiries addressed to them at 1 Adam-Street, Adelphi.

I am, Sir, yours faithfully,
 (Signed) Thomas Hughes,
 Chairman of Committee.

Lincoln's-Inn. Dec. 2, 1871.

The arrival of the English books, which began to come in instalments before the end of the Fire year, created a situation not without humorous aspects. Contrary to the assumption of the donors, there had been no public library in Chicago before the Fire; the city had no legal authority for maintaining one, and no revenue for its support. Least of all was there any safe or proper place for housing the precious volumes that were being hurried across the Atlantic to the rescue of the stricken populace. Mayor Joseph Medill, to whom Mr. Hughes had unfolded his project in a letter, referred the matter to a committee composed of the Hon. Thomas Hoyne, E. C. Larned, J. M. Walker, D. L. Shorey, S. S. Hayes and Henry Booth, all citizens of eminence and dignity. The first thing this committee did was to secure an abandoned iron water supply reservoir as a temporary store room for the books. The "Tank" stood on a thirty-five-foot high masonry base in the rear of the temporary city hall hastily erected at LaSalle and Adams streets, and locally known as the "Rookery," which present-day citizens will recognize as the name of the stately office building now occupying that site. Circular in shape, with a diameter of sixty and a height of thirty feet, and having but recently demonstrated that it was superlatively fire-proof, the Tank was regarded as a happy find, and the gift books were stored in it, as they arrived, pending developments. The second step of the Committee was to secure the enactment by the Illinois General Assembly of a law enabling municipalities to establish public libraries and to levy taxes therefor. This law was passed March 7th, 1872, and is the statute under which all Illinois public libraries are organized.

Eleven days later, on March 18th, 1872, an ordinance of the City Council established the Public Library under the new law, and on April 8th Mayor Medill appointed the following as the first Board of Directors: Thomas Hoyne, S. S. Hayes, R. F. Queal, J. W. Sheahan, D. L. Shorey, Herman Raster, Willard Woodard, Elliott Anthony and Julius Rosenthal.

Failing more suitable quarters, the Directors proceeded to convert the Tank into a book room by lining its walls with shelves, having a capacity of 18,000 volumes, and cutting a skylight in the roof. A temporary new story was added to the City Hall connecting with the book room by a bridge, and here, on New Year's Day, 1873, a library reading room was opened to the public with 3,157 volumes upon the shelves. Circulation of books for home use was not begun until May, 1874, after removal to more commodious and accessible space at Wabash avenue and Madison street. Meanwhile the first librarian had been secured, in the person of Dr. William Frederick Poole, who came from the Public Library of Cincinnati, and guided the new institution through its critical period of growth for the next fifteen years.

THE BOOK ROOM IN THE OLD WATER TANK.

Other donations received in these early days included a large collection of German books presented by the German book trade at Leipzig at the suggestion of Chicagoans of Teutonic birth, as well as a number of gifts of books and magazines in varying quantities from local citizens. But the English collection must always remain by far the most important and valuable, alike because it literally prompted the foundation of the Library, and because of its intrinsic worth in quality and quantity. It included the works of all the great British authors of the day, in many cases with autograph inscriptions. Among them were found such eminent names as Sir Charles Lyell, Robert Ferguson, J. McGregor, Sir Roundell Palmer, John Bright, Sir Charles Dilke, W. G. Palgrave, Alfred R. Wallace, Charlotte Yonge, W. Stanley Jevons, John Stuart Mill, Henry Maudslley, Julia C. Young, David Masson, A. H. Layard, Charles Kingsley, Aubrey De Vere, W. M. Rossetti, T. F. Palgrave, St. George Mivart, Dean Stanley, R. A. Proctor, W. E. Forster, Octavius Morgan, Herbert Spencer, W. Thornton, W. A. Freeman, Samuel Smiles, Gladstone, Disraeli, Carlyle, Huxley and Thomas Hughes. The Duke of Wellington's Dispatches, in twenty-three volumes, were sent by his successor, and Monckton Milnes included his illustrated edition of Keats.

Queen Victoria contributed an autographed copy of "The Early Years of the Prince Consort." Lady Trevelyan sent the works of her lately deceased brother, Lord Macaulay. Publishers and learned societies gave complete sets of their productions, the universities of Oxford and Cambridge provided sumptuous bindings of polished calf for many of the more important volumes. The British government presented the complete Patent Reports since 1617, and this gift has been continued to date, as have also the great series of historical reprints, calendars of state papers and archives issued by the Master of the Rolls. It is doubtful whether the whole history of culture and literature contains a parallel to those spontaneous and lavish benefactions in the form of books of the highest degree of character and beauty thus freely and generously bestowed by a nation upon the kinsmen across the seas as a token of sympathy in a time of trial and distress.

The home circulation of books for the first year, May 1, 1874, to May 1, 1875, is recorded as 88,682 volumes; the number of volumes in the library was 17,355. Twenty-five years later, in 1900, the home circulation had risen to 1,749,755 volumes and the number of volumes in the Library to 258,498. There were at that time sixty delivery stations through which books could be drawn from the Central Library for home use, and six branch reading rooms without circulating privileges.

Today there are 1,792 separate agencies of the Public Library for home circulation, all but sixteen of which have book stocks of their own, ranging from 50 to 25,000 volumes. The total number of books owned is over 1,100,000, and the total home use 8,000,000 volumes per year.

"Our much-respected Chief-Magistrate, Mayor Medill, said a few weeks ago, in his address at the opening of the new Chamber of Commerce (the first anniversary day of the great Fire), that 'after all, our great Fire may prove to be a blessing in disguise.' I am a convert to his doctrine, and the establishment of this Library is not the least of the blessings which the Fire so providentially has been a proximate cause of producing."

(Thomas Hoyne, in his address at the opening of the Public Library, Jan. 1, 1873.)

FICTION

Abbott, Eleanor Hallowell. Rainy week. 1921. F 10039

A house-party, kept indoors by the rain, and the reaction of the guests upon each other, compose the plot. Miss Abbott's sparkle is apparent in this light readable piece of fiction.

Bone, David W. The brassbounder. 1921. F 20630

Extremely artistic and at the same time full of thrills is this story of a voyage, in a square-rigged vessel, between Glasgow and San Francisco.

Curwood, James Oliver. The flaming forest; a novel of the Canadian northwest. 1921. F 21420

The thrilling and unexpected adventures of Sergt. David Carrigan in the Northwest Territory contain many elements of suspense and blood-curdling interest.

Day, Holman. When Egypt went broke. 1921. F 12296

Tasper Britt, a crafty old miser practically owns Egypt, New England, and makes desperate plans to possess it absolutely, with disastrous results. The book is written in a humorous and piquant vein which makes it decidedly entertaining reading.

Ferguson, John. The Dark Geraldine. 1921. F 12848

The title of this book is the name of a secret society. With plenty of melodrama, mystery, hidden treasure and a murder now and then, the tale is a lively one.

Fletcher, J. S. The borough treasurer. 1921. F 12857

Much above the average mystery story, especially in the character drawing. The construction is sound, and the story is worked out logically, but a more mystifying tale would be hard to find.

Gelzer, Jay. The street of a thousand delights. 1921. F 13164

Contents: The Chinese lily.—The blue eyes of Wang Hai.—In the street of a thousand delights.—The gorgeous jest.—"Mei-Li the beautiful."—China rose.—"The gold lacquered box."—A prince of China.

The setting for this group of stories is the Chinese quarter of Melbourne. One is fairly steeped in the atmosphere of exotic and gorgeous settings.

Hamsun, Knut. Pan; tr. from the Norwegian. 1921. F 13439

A tragedy with an exquisite lyrical background. Thomas Glahn, a hunter in the Nordland forests, and a man of the most primitive instincts, loses what happiness he had in life, through an intense and unrequited love.

Heidenstam, Verner von. The Charles men; tr. from the Swedish. 1920. 2v. F 24526

Lie, Jonas. The family at Gilje, a domestic story of the forties; tr. from the Norwegian. 1920. F 24525

McKenna, Stephen. The education of Eric Lane. 1921. F 24859

The second part of the trilogy "The Sensationalists," of which the first is Lady Lilith, F 15224. Eric, a successful young play-wright in London, meets Lady Babs, an artificial, neurotic woman, who furnishes him with abundant emotional experience to utilize as dramatic material.

MacLeod, Della. A lantern of love; a novel in three parts. 1921. F 24871

A false accusation, a unique escape from prison, and a romantic love theme, make this an absorbing tale to the finish.

Mundy, Talbot. Guns of the gods; a story of Yasmini's youth. 1921. F 15592

Norris, Kathleen. The beloved woman. 1921. F 15702

A little book clerk, accustomed to poverty, is taken to live with a wealthy New York family. Her reactions to her new surroundings and her emotional experiences are worked out consecutively and well.

Noyes, Alfred. Beyond the desert; a tale of Death Valley. 1920. F 15705

Relates the conversion of an escaping I. W. W. convict who, when exhausted in the desert, has a vision in which he meets a party of forty-niners. Their amazement at the progress of civilization makes him ashamed of his own discontent at the uneven distribution of material things.

Rowland, Henry C. The peddler; a novel. 1920. F 17520

An entertaining story combining the very opposite elements of a detective story and the Beloved Vagabond type.

Scarborough, Dorothy. comp. Famous modern ghost stories, selected. 1921. F 17703

Contents: The willows, by A. Blackwood.—The shadows on the wall, by Mary E. W. Freeman.—The messenger, by R. W. Chambers.—Lazarus, by L. Andreyev.—The beast with five fingers, by W. F. Harvey.—The mass of shadows, by A. France.—What was it? by F. J. O'Brien.—The middle toe of the right foot, by A. Bierce.—The shell of sense, by Olivia H. Dunbar.—The woman at Seven Brothers, by W. D. Steele.—At the gate, by Myla J. Closser.—Legcia, by E. A. Poe.—The haunted orchard, by R. Le Gallienne.—The bowmen, by A. Machen.—A ghost, by G. de Maupassant.

Modern stories of fifteen different types of ghosts. They do not duplicate any of those in McSpadden's recent collection of psychic stories, F 24937.

—Humorous ghost stories, selected. 1921. F 17702

Contents: The Canterville ghost, by O. Wilde.—The ghost-extinguisher, by G. Burgess.—"Dey ain't no ghosts," by E. P. Butler.—The transferred ghost, by F. R. Stockton.—The mummy's foot, by T. Gautier.—The rival ghosts, by B. Matthews.—The water ghost of Harrowby hall, by J. K. Bangs.—Back from that bourne; anonymous.—The ghost-ship, by R. Middleton.—The transplanted ghost, by W. Irwin.—The last ghost in Harmony, by N. Lloyd.—The ghost of Miser Brimpton, by E. Phillpotts.—The haunted photograph, by Ruth M. Stuart.—The ghost that got the button, by W. Adams.—The specter bridegroom, by W. Irving.—The specter of Tappington, by R. Barham.—In the barn, by B. Johnson.—A shady plot, by Elsie Brown.—The lady and the ghost, by Rose C. O'Neill.

From beginning to end the book is delightfully entertaining, and there can hardly be any reader, no matter what his attitude toward ghosts, but will find it an amusing and charming companion for a journey or an idle evening.—New York Times.

Vance, Louis Joseph. Red masquerade; being the story of the Lone Wolf's daughter. 1921. F 18825

Sequel to The Lone Wolf, F 18734, and The false faces, F 18789.

An absorbing tale full of intrigue and mystery. The dark plots of the underworld of London are interwoven throughout the story.

Webster, Henry Kitchell. Real life, into which Miss Leda Swan of Hollywood makes an adventurous excursion. 1921. F 19107

A perfectly delightful and impossible little tale, in which the world-famous hero and heroine live through the most hair-raising experiences imaginable, and all in twenty-four hours.

Willis, Honoré. The enchanted canyon; a novel of the Grand Canyon and the Arizona desert. 1921. F 19591

The theme is the regenerative influence of the Grand Canyon upon a life begun under the evil influence of gangsters in Minetta Lane, New York City, and gives ample opportunity for vivid description.

Aids in Selecting Books for Children

AFTER three years, Children's Book Week has now become an institution observed throughout the country by means of book displays, book talks by children's librarians, and the distribution of suggestive lists of children's reading.

For this purpose various lists have been prepared. Among these is the Book Shelf for boys and girls—an annotated list, compiled by two well known children's librarians and the chief librarian of the Boy Scouts of America. The Boy Scout organization does not approve all books published under the caption of Boy Scout stories but prefers that boys read the more realistic type of story recommended in this list.

The Book Shelf is arranged under subject and according to age. The subject headings are especially novel such as: "Stories of real people," "Books written by children," "Stories that might be true," etc. The added feature of the 1921 edition is the Index. This list may be purchased at the Library at the cost price of five cents.

Graded lists in the form of book marks, prepared by the Chicago Public Library, contain interesting suggestions. These lists are annotated to appeal to children. Longer graded lists prepared by the school department supplement these short book marks, and all these lists are for free distribution.

The American Library Association has issued a new buying list for parents and others who desire to make gifts to children. It is an annotated list, arranged under the subject headings of "Picture books and other books for little children," "Books for young children," and "Books for older boys and girls." This may also be procured at the library.

A list of Christmas references for those wishing Christmas stories to tell or read aloud, Christmas plays, Christmas games, or descriptions of Christmas customs in other lands has been compiled by the Chicago Public Library and may be purchased for five cents.

The following books will also be useful to those interested in children's reading:

- Field, W. T. Fingerposts to children's reading. J 2769.
 Hunt, C. W. What shall we read to the children? J 2837.
 MacClintock, P. L. Literature in the elementary school. J 4759.
 Moore, A. C. Roads to childhood; views and reviews. J 2845.
 Olcott, F. J. The children's reading. J 2829.

All these lists and books may be obtained or consulted at the Chicago Public Library.

Experts are nowadays being consulted in business, factory management, and even farming; why should not the busy mother and teacher receive suggestions from those giving most of their time and thought to the subject of the children's reading?

There will be an exhibit of attractive books for children on display during Children's Book Week in the corridor of the Fourth Floor, adjoining the Thomas Hughes Room.

The staff of the Chicago Public Library welcomes this opportunity to meet and advise with those who are interested in children's reading.

Opera Scores, Librettos, and Plots

IN the Music Room on the fifth floor of the Main Library building are to be found librettos together with from ten to twenty copies of the vocal scores of all the favorite operas and a smaller number of the less familiar ones. They may be borrowed on special music cards issuable to all registered book borrowers on application.

Much difficulty has been experienced in trying to secure scores of the new operas and ballet novelties announced for production in the Chicago Opera repertory for this season, and not all have proved to be obtainable. Below is a list of references to books containing plots of the operas in the program for the coming season. The figures refer to the pages and the letters to the books according to the following key:

PHILOSOPHY

Geley, Gustave. From the unconscious to the conscious. 1921. L 13107

The author states his intention to be the inclusion of collective and individual evolution in a more complete synthesis, and a critic in the New Statesman says that "he runs counter to most of the generally accepted maxims of science, religion and philosophy."

Smith, Norman Kemp. A commentary to Kant's Critique of pure reason. 1918. L 14721

SOCIAL SCIENCES

Economics

Eddy, Arthur Jerome. Property. 1921. L 16779

The author's theory is that business exists for the service of the community. He believes that progress depends upon the proper investment of property and illustrates his idea by such concrete examples as the Marshall Field fortune.

Marshall, Leon C., and Lyon, Leverett S. Our economic organization. 1921. L 16708

The distinguishing feature of the volume in the minds of the authors themselves, is to depict social structures in terms of what they do, rather than what they are.—New York Post.

Labor, Finance

Burnham's manual of mid-western securities. 1917-1921. 4v. L 17455

An investor's handbook of useful information concerning the principal securities bought and sold in Chicago and the Middle West.

Continuing Burnham's manual of Chicago securities. Latest edition in Civics Dept.

Dutt, R. Palme, ed. The labour international handbook. 1921. L 16778

Contents: International affairs.—International labour.

Furusest, Andrew, and Merritt, Walter Gordon. The open shop; a debate held at Lexington theatre, New York city, March 13, 1921. L 17202

This debate is one of a series arranged by the Intercollegiate Socialist Society. The participants are respectively president of the International Seaman's Union and counsel for the League for Industrial Rights.

Langston, L. H., and Whitney, N. R. Banking practice; a textbook for colleges and schools of business administration. 1921. L 17373

McCaleb, Walter Flavius. The public finances of Mexico. 1921. L 17758

"It is neither history nor economics, but rather a chronological account into which both are brought."

Socialism

Postgate, R. W. The workers' International. 1920. L 17612

(International relations series.)

A condensed history of international socialism, placing most emphasis upon the First International.

Political Science

Angell, Norman, pseud. of R. N. A. Lane. The fruits of victory; a sequel to The great illusion. 1921. L 16353

Mr. Angell believes that when the common man has a chance to question the premises of the militarists in the light of common knowledge, their whole intellectual fabric will crumble and a way will be opened for mutual trust to replace the doctrines of exclusive sovereignty and balance of power.—Chicago Post.

Bruce, Andrew A. Non-partisan league. 1921. L 16495

(The citizen's library of economics, politics and sociology—new series.)

A vehement protest against the Non-partisan league, claiming it to be a political attempt to capitalize the present unrest.

Fradenburgh, A. G. American community civics for high schools and junior high schools. 1919. L 18386

Hart, W. O. The Democratic conventions of 1908-1912-1916, Republican conventions of 1912-1916, and Progressive convention of 1912, with other political and historical observations. 1916. L 16484

Howe, Frederic C. Revolution and democracy. 1921. L 16707

The author, a constructive reformer, advocates four great legislative changes which "would usher in a social revolution without the use of force" but would "involve no re-organization of society."

Mac Murray, John Van Antwerp, ed. Treaties and agreements with and concerning China, 1894-1919. 1921. 2v. L 21469

- v. 1. Manchu period (1894-1911).

(Bureau of Educational Experiments, New York.)

Slosson, Edwin E. The American spirit in education; a chronicle of great teachers. 1921. B 5086, 33

(The chronicles of America series.)

Yeomans, Edward. Shackled youth; comments on schools, school people, and other people. 1921. L 19559

A Chicago manufacturer with a rare vision of the ideals of education pleads for the consideration of subjects in their broader outlook, in their inter-relations, and his book will be an inspiration to many a discouraged teacher.

Customs

Birth, Death

Dowd, Quincy L. Funeral management and costs; a world-survey of burial and cremation. 1921. L 20779

A plea to sensible people to order plain and inexpensive funerals, urging the value of the example of prominent families in the community. Mr. Dowd advocates cremation as "the quick, sanitary, beautiful" mode of disposal of the dead.

Knight, M. M., and others. Taboo and genetics; a study of the biological, sociological and psychological foundation of the family. 1920. L 20797

A straightforward discussion which disposes of the old superstitions and ignorance, and emphasizes the importance of honestly and sanely facing the facts of life.

LANGUAGE

Æsop. Ysopet-Avionnet; the Latin and French texts. 1919. J 4854, 51v

(University of Illinois studies in language and literature.)

LITERATURE

Eliot, T. S. The sacred wood; essays on poetry and criticism. 1921. J 7649

Contents: Introduction.—The perfect critic.—Imperfect critics: Swinburne as critic; A romantic aristocrat (George Wyndham); The local flavour; A note on the American critic; The French intelligence.—Tradition and the individual talent.—The possibility of a poetic drama.—Euripides and Professor Murray.—Rhetoric and poetic drama.—Notes on the blank verse of Christopher Marlowe.—Hamlet and his problems.—Ben Jonson.—Philip Massinger.—Swinburne as poet.—Blake.—Dante.

Mr. Eliot is a poet, and his criticism deals largely with poetry. He has very definite ideas about the function of criticism, regarding it (in contrast to the impressionistic school) as an exact science and not an art or in any sense creative.

Gosse, Edmund. Books on the table. 1921. J 7653

Contents: The last years of Disraeli.—Boythorn in the flesh.—The aristocrat in literature.—A Frenchman of the fourth century.—The dial of princes."—"The hierarchie of angels."—Pascal and the Jesuits.—The poet among the cannibals.—The letters of Tchekhov.—The unveiling of Tolstol.—"The English poets."—The folk-lore of the Bible.—Edgar Poe and his detractors.—The essays of Mr. Lucas.—"In a green shade."—Autobiography and Mrs. Asquith.—Clough.—Zoffany.—Philip Massinger.—Miss Mitford.—Frederick Locker.—The fox in song.—The sepulchral dean.—Wine and Mr. Saintsbury.—Some French memoirs.—Winner and waster.—The tutor of Marcus Aurelius.—A stormy petrel.—Leonard Courtney.—Paul Claudel.—A bubble burst.—The character of Fielding.—Mr. Dougherty's "Mansoul."—The science of manuscripts.—The psychology of the blind.—Thackeray's daughter.—Carlyle.—The fairy in the garden.—Goethe.—Count D'Orsay's portraits.—Index.

A collection of essays or criticisms of a varied-gated collection of works, showing an artist's appreciation of their faults and virtues.

Meredith, George. CREES, J. H. E. George Meredith; a study of his works and personality. 1918. J 7234

Addressed to those who have so far solved the difficulties of the Master that they wish to make up their minds as to his final position in English literature. The book should do much to crystalize opinion on Meredith, if only because it will induce people to read him again.—Times (London).

Rich, Mabel Irene. A study of the types of literature. 1921. J 6400

(The Century studies in literature for high schools.)

It steers between the ordinary history of literature and the minute analysis of masterpieces. The problem of discovering the characteristics of a type of literature is used as the approach.—Book-list.

Poetry

Tennyson, Alfred. PYRE, J. F. A. The formation of Tennyson's style; a study, primarily, of the versification of the early poems. 1921. J 4855, 12

(University of Wisconsin studies in language and literature.)

Flanner, Hildegard. This morning. 1921. E 14656

Lowell, Amy. Legends. 1921. E 14826

Contents: Memorandum confided by a yucca to a passion-vine (Peru).—A legend of porcelain (China).—Many Swans (North America).—Funeral song for the Indian chief Blackbird (North America).—Witchwoman (Yucatan).—The ring and the castle (Europe).—Gavotte in D minor (Europe).—The statue in the garden (Europe).—Dried marjoram (England).—Before the storm (New England).—Four sides to a house (New England).

Eleven brilliant dramatic tales, highly original and rich in variety of theme, where every mood is reflected in the form and rhythm of the verse, both rhymed and unrhymed.

Mitchell, Stewart. Poems. 1921. E 14872

Sonnets and lyrics with a strong appeal which show delicacy of touch as well as power.

Drama

Bottomley, Gordon. King Lear's wife, The crier by night, The riding to Lithend, Midsummer eve, Laodice and Danaë. 1921. E 13510

There is not one among the plays that has not vision, dramatic quality, characterization and poetry above the average.—Theatre Arts Magazine.

Massinger, Philip. CRUICKSHANK, A. H. Philip Massinger. 1920. E 14073

It is a conscientious work, which contains, we suppose, all the information and nearly all the serious speculations possible, about its subject. In expression of judgment and comparison it is useful.—Athenaeum.

Randolph, Edith. Lammas eve; fantasy in one act. 1921. E 13172

(Poet Lore plays.)

Strange, Michael, pseud. of Mrs. Blanche N. O. Barrymore. Clair de lune; a play in two acts and six scenes. 1921. E 13498

The New York Evening Post calls it an ingenious fantasy with "an abundance of smart, if not very deep sayings."

Totheroh, Dan W. While the mushrooms bubble; a fantasy with or without music, as you please. 1921. E 13172

(Poet Lore plays.)

47 Workshop. Plays of the 47 Workshop. 1918-1920. 2v. E 12166

(Harvard plays.)

1. Three pills in a bottle, by R. L. Field.—"The good men do," by H. Osborne.—Two crooks and a lady, by E. Pillot.—Free speech, by W. L. Prosser.

2. Torches, by K. Raisbeck.—Cooks and cardinals, by N. C. Lindau.—A flitch of bacon, by E. H. Hinkley.—The playroom, by D. F. Halman.

These are one-act plays above the average, simple enough for amateur production.

—The gold bug; a clean comedy of adventure in four acts. 1920. E 13803

(Denison's royalty plays.)

Kaplan, Ysabel DeWitte. The princess weaver of the skies; a tale of the festival of Tanabata—of the 7th night of the 7th moon; a Japanese fragment put into this form. 1921. E 13172

(Poet Lore plays.)

Lodovici, Cesare. The woman of no one; a play in three acts. Tr. by Petronelle Sombart. 1921. E 13172

(Poet Lore plays.)

Humor

Cobb, Irvin S. A plea for old Cap Collier. 1921. E 15410

A defense of the dime novel in preference to the "uplifting" school readers of the McGuffey type.

Marquis, Don. The old soak, and Hail and farewell. 1921. E 4437

Here is American humor at its best; certainly the most delightful bit of philosophical fooling and urbane satire since Mr. Dooley laid down his golden pen.—New York Evening Post.

The mirrors of Washington; with fourteen cartoons by Cesare, and fourteen portraits. 1921. C 19824

Contents: Warren G. Harding.—Woodrow Wilson.—George Harvey.—Charles Evans Hughes.—

Edward Mandell House.—Herbert Clark Hoover.—Henry Cabot Lodge.—Bernard Mannes Baruch.—Elihu Root.—Hiram Warren Johnson.—Philander Chase Knox.—Robert Lansing.—Boies Penrose.—William Edgar Borah.

A collection of clever satirical essays on American statesmen and public present day men.

Quayle, Alexandros Jack. A genealogy line of the Terrills. 1921. C 20393

Rhodes, Cecil. WILLIAMS, BASIL. Cecil Rhodes. 1921. C 23924

(Makers of the nineteenth century.)

A real biography—excellent in perspective, in terseness, and in writing. It gives a finished picture of the man, with his greatness and his weaknesses.—Spectator.

TRAVEL AND DESCRIPTION

Furlong, Charles Wellington. Let 'er buck; a story of the passing of the old West. 1921. I 11780

This is a glowing account of the old west which is rapidly passing away. The annual Round-up at Pendleton, Oregon, is vividly described and accompanied by real photographs.

The glass of fashion; some social reflections by a gentleman with a duster. 1921. I 10366

Contents: Principles of the commonwealth.—Colonel Repington's diaries.—Some glimpses of the normal.—Mrs. Asquith's autobiography.—A study in contrast.—Ill effects.—The other side.—Manners.—Examples in love.—Womanhood.—Conclusion.

Criticisms of the present state of English society from the point of view of Victorian ideals.

Monckton, C. A. W. Taming New Guinea; some experiences of a New Guinea resident magistrate. 1921. I 9186

These personal recollections of an Englishman among the worst savages left in the world contain thrilling and often horrible episodes. They are full of criticism of government policies and officials but nevertheless make a fascinating adventure book.

Paine, Albert Bigelow. The car that went abroad; motoring through the golden age. 1921. I 11884

An informal record of a sixteen month automobile trip through France, made by an American family just before the war. It is more of a sentimental pilgrimage than a thorough sightseeing journey and is illustrated by Walter Hale's delightful sketches.

The Topeka improvement survey. 4 pamphlets. 1914. I 11744

(Russell Sage Foundation pamphlets.)

HISTORY

Adams, George Burton. Constitutional history of England. 1921. L 18019

(American historical series.)

The chief object of the book is to make the continuous growth of the constitution from generation to generation as clear as possible. This leads to a stressing of essentials and to the omitting of details where their inclusion would tend to confuse the larger view.—Book Review Digest.

Chancellor, E. Beresford. The XVIIIth century in London; an account of its social life and arts. 1921. A 5393

Describes his period at length, under the heads of social life, street topography, pleasure resorts, clubs, coffee-houses and taverns, great houses and public buildings, the churches, and the arts, with a supplementary chapter on the architectural remains of 18th century London which are still to be seen.—Times (London).

Dawes, Charles G. A journal of the great war. 1921. 2v. A 7176

Dated August 21, 1917–August 2, 1919.

While these two stout volumes of personal and documentary records are concerned chiefly with the author's own experience and accomplishment, they gleam with sidelights on the attitude and behavior of some of the most conspicuous figures in the war, revealing them as being after all human beings as well as heroes.—New York Times.

Francis, David R. Russia from the American embassy, April 1916–November 1918. 1921. A 7872

Because of Russia's great suffering in the war, the author pleads with America to save her, particularly by destroying her own and humanity's most dangerous enemy—bolshevism.

United States

Adams, James Truslow. The founding of New England. 1921. B 3769

Written with a broad perspective and scientific insight, this exceedingly readable volume gives our traditional views and hero worship many a rough jolt.

Beard, Charles A., and Beard, Mary R. History of the United States. 1921. B 5528

A high school text starting with the colonization period and enlarging the treatment of our own time. It is a topical history bringing in the narrative rather by way of illustration.

The Chronicles of America series, ed. by Allen Johnson. v. 12, 13, 15, 23, 24, 31, 33, 37, 47, 48. B 5086

FICTION

Ash, Sholom. Uncle Moses; a novel. 1920. F 10682

This story of a successful Jew who transplants almost the entire population of a Russian village to New York and employs them in his sweat shops, is one of the best of this popular Yiddish author.

Borden, Mary. The tortoise, a novel. 1921. F 20633

Young Mrs. Chudd was on the verge of running away with a French officer, when the war broke out and adjusted her standard of values. A romantic tale written in a vivid, glowing style.

Bower, B. M., pseud. of Mrs. Bertha M. Sinclair. Casey Ryan. 1921. F 18167

A very clever and humorous western story different from the usual type. It centers about Casey Ryan and his trying experiences with the "three darndest, orneriest, damndest things on earth," a Ford, a goat and an Injun.

Caine, Hall. The master of Man; the story of a sin. 1921. F 11563

The concealment of a mis-step he had once made, entangles a young lawyer in a net work of trouble which finally drags him from the heights of power to the depths of degradation.

Canby, Henry Seidel. Our house. 1919. F 11663

A young man, after attempting to write in the Bohemia of New York, is convinced his life work is to be found in sleepy little old Millingtown of New England.

Cholmondeley, Mary. The romance of his life, and other romances. 1921. F 11945

Contents: Introduction.—The romance of his life.—The dark cottage.—The ghost of a chance.—The goldfish.—The stars in their courses.—Her murderer.—Votes for men, a drama.—The end of the dream.

Characters that are different and situations that are unexpected, make this volume of charming English stories enjoyable reading.

Dowdall, Hon. Mrs. Three loving ladies. 1921. F 21701

An English story with little or no scenery or action, where the charming women, anxious and eager to establish their supremacy, devote themselves to philanthropy and social problems, but (as Robert Nathan says in the New York Post of the author herself) do nothing, feel much and talk more.

Galsworthy, John. To let. 1921. F 22350

Vol. 5 of the Forsyte saga, of which the preceding volumes are The man of property (1906), F 13086; Indian summer of a Forsyte, from the volume Five tales (1918), F 13126; In chancery (1920), F 13136; Awakening (1920), F 22351.

An absorbing story not dependent for its interest on those that precede it. Galsworthy brings his gentle cynical observation of modern society to bear upon the England of 1920.

Howells, William Dean. Mrs. Farrell. 1921. F 14155

This posthumous novel is a charming love story of the seventies, with a boarding house background. The heroine is a widow of twenty-four and during the summer is the object of the affections of two bachelor friends with whom she flirts and both of whom she finally discards.

Lynde, Francis. The Donovan chance. 1921. F 24769

A stirring tale of engineering and mining in Nevada.

Marquis, Don. Carter and other people. 1921. F 24961

Contents: Carter.—Old man Murtrie.—Never say die!—McDermott.—Looney the Mutt.—Kale.—Bubbles.—The chances of the street.—The professor's awakening.—The penitent.—The locked box.—Behind the curtain.—Words and thoughts (a one-act play).

Clever short stories with unusual plots. All of them are emotional and all very readable. One or two are mystery stories.

Oppenheim, E. Phillips. The profiteers. 1921. F 15767

A syndicate in London, covering the world's wheat market, is broken up by an American millionaire who kidnaps three directors and puts them on a starvation diet. Many stirring incidents occur, but the chief point is gained when the price of bread is lowered.

Pedler, Margaret. The house of dreams-come-true. 1919. F 16088

An impassioned love story—or rather two love stories—as they are worked out through vicissitudes to a happy ending. The usual type of English country life is portrayed.

—The splendid folly. 1921. F 16086

A pleasant but unreasonable little romance on the order of Graustark.

Porter, Gene Stratton. Her father's daughter. 1921. F 16522

Against a California background composed of exquisite bird, plant, and floral descriptions, the hero, heroine, and Japanese villain live, move and have their being.

Rice, Alice Hegan. Quin. 1921. F 17135

A returned war hero (a diamond in the rough) wins the girl of his dreams, overcoming the opposition of her extremely aristocratic family and triumphing over his attractive rival who is the villain of the story.

Rideout, Henry Milner. Fern seed. 1921. F 17208

A charming adventure story with England as a background. The hero visiting the home of his ancestors finds himself welcomed and admired only to discover he has been mistaken for a cousin, who appears at the critical moment. There's a black-eyed girl, a stolen letter, a hidden room, a dual, etc.

Rinehart, Mary Roberts. Sight unseen, and The confession. 1921. F 17255

With her usual dexterity and skill, Mrs. Rinehart has written two more detective stories, the first of which deals with the occult. The second is the more logical of the two.

Rowland, Henry C. Mile high; a novel. 1921. F 17517

A light, quickly moving story of exciting incidents, and decidedly modern. There is a criminal quartet of international repute, of which Patricia, a woman of "brilliant beauty but no soul" is loved by the Colorado sheriff of high ideals who succeeds in reforming her.

Sabatini, Rafael. Scaramouche; a romance of the French revolution. 1921. F 17571

A good swashbuckling romance above the average in interest of plot, and vivid as to setting.

Sinclair, May. Mr. Waddington of Wyck. 1921. F 18163

In a smooth and sparkling style Miss Sinclair has achieved the portrait of an egotist which has been compared only to Jane Austen's Mr. Collins and the brother-in-law of Miss Lulu Bett.

Spearman, Frank H. Laramie holds the range. 1921. F 18290

A typical western story with all the regular settings involving rustlers, cattle-men and the usual bad man who falls in love with the girl from the east.

Terhune, Albert Payson. Buff, a collie; and other dog-stories. 1921. F 27743

Written by a real lover of dogs, this group makes wholesome interesting reading. The most powerful of the collection is perhaps "The fowl fancier."

Thayer, Lee. That affair at "The Cedars." 1921. F 27770

A modern mystery and detective story in which no less than five different characters are suspected of a murder. Two or three little love stories which run through the novel add to the interest.

Turner, George Kibbe. White shoulders. 1921. F 27915

A combination of mystery and love story. The heroine and her fortune-hunting mother come to a small town where their arrival starts a flow of gossip connected with a murder mystery. This is finally solved and the girl is happily married to the man she loves.

Van Vechten, Carl, ed. Lords of the house-tops; thirteen cat tales. 1921. F 18811

Contents: The cat, by Mary E. W. Freeman.—Zut, by G. W. Carryl.—A psychical invasion, by A. Blackwood.—The afflictions of an English cat, by H. de Balzac.—Gipsy, by B. Tarkington.—The Blue Dryad, by G. H. Powell.—Dick Baker's cat, by Mark Twain.—The black cat, by E. A. Poe.—Madame Jolicoeur's cat, by T. A. Janvier.—A friendly rat, by W. H. Hudson.—Monty's friend, by W. L. Alden.—The queen's cat, by Peggy Bacon.—Calvin, by C. D. Warner.

Widdemer, Margaret. The year of Delight. 1921. F 19474

Delight, an adopted orphan, falls heir to a vast fortune. Learning she has but one year to live, she tries to crowd into it all the pleasures she has longed for, surrounds herself with the comforts of life, and marries. The diagnosis proved incorrect, however, and the improbable romance ends happily.

Williams, Ben Ames. Evered. 1921. F 19518

The quiet beauty of northern Maine forms the background for this tragedy of primitive passions. The story is of a farmer-butcher whose intense love for his wife manifests itself in brutalities and who thinks he has occasion to doubt her faithfulness.—Booklist.

Wodehouse, P. G. Indiscretions of Archie. 1921. F 19703

An intensely amusing story of a young Englishman who comes to this country and marries the daughter of a hotel owner in New York. Archie's various episodes are cleverly depicted and afford an abundance of clean, unforced fun.

Wright, Harold Bell. Helen of the old house. 1921. F 19810

The story centers about labor troubles in an American mill town. The author believes that industrial problems are as easily adjusted as ranks in the army and attempts to prove it.

PHILOSOPHY

Psychology, Ethics

Flammarion, Camille. Death and its mystery. v. 1: Before death. 1921. L 13522

The first volume of a trilogy which presents the results of fifty years' research by one of the world's best known investigators of psychical phenomena. This volume is devoted to the description of recorded cases and their interpretation.

Hayes, Edward Cary. Sociology and ethics; the facts of social life as the source of solutions for the theoretical and practical problems of ethics. 1921. L 14179

The purpose of the book is to show that, if the next generation is to have an ethic, it must not come along the path of a priori speculation or mystic faith but along the path of science; it must be based on reason and a true conception of human life.—Book Review Digest.

Hill, Owen A. Psychology and natural theology. 1921. L 13048

Philosophical argumentations in the form of theses, proving from the Catholic point of view certain metaphysical points and answering imagined objections.

Munson, Edward L. The management of men; a handbook on the systematic development of morale and the control of human behavior. 1921. L 13975

Discussed in a simple and practical way.

Randall, John Herman. The new light on immortality; or, The significance of psychic research. 1921. L 13547

Contents: The nature of the new light.—Maurice Maeterlinck, the poet.—William James, the philosopher.—Sir Oliver Lodge, the scientist.—James Hervey Hyslop, the psychologist.—The present status of psychic research.—Future possibilities, and a warning.—The age and psychic research.—Its ethical and social implications.—Its meaning for religion.—The real immortality.—The consciousness of immortality.

Deals mainly with the moral and social implications of psychical research rather than with evidence from experiments.

RELIGION

Committee on the War and the Religious Outlook. Christian unity: its principles and possibilities. 1921. M 8774

Wisely discriminating between the various forms through which this movement may express itself; blinking nothing that stands in the way of its progress, and therefore withholding any prediction of the time and the specific means it may require to succeed, the Committee is yet optimistic.—Graham Taylor in the Survey.

Cope, Henry Frederick. The week-day church-school. 1921. L 19899

The object is to take advantage of expert teachers for religious training and to reach a business-like basis of instruction not possible in the ungraded Sunday School.—Booklist.

Genung, John Franklin. The life indeed; a review, in terms of common thinking, of the Scripture history issuing in immortality. 1921. M 9018

(The Amherst books.)

It is not merely religious; it is in the broadest and most inclusive sense a spiritual book because it is the full expression of the personality of the spiritual man.—Independent.

SOCIAL SCIENCES

Weyl, Walter. Tired radicals, and other papers. 1921. L 15449

Contents: Tired radicals.—The only truly revolutionary class.—Equality.—The party of the third part.—The new wealth.—Prophet and politician (Woodrow Wilson).—In the king's robing room.—The crumbling House of lords.—The conquering Chinese.—Japan's thwarted emigration.—Japan's menacing birth-rate.—The clash of the races.

A group of essays on problems of today which will be read with as much enthusiasm in the future as now. They are fair, balanced, and steer steadily between the optimistic and pessimistic.

Economics

Knight, Frank H. Risk, uncertainty and profit. 1921. L 16709

(Hart, Schaffner & Marx prize essays.)

Contents: pt. 1. Introductory.—2. Perfect competition.—3. Imperfect competition through risk and uncertainty.

Labor

Bing, Alexander M. War-time strikes and their adjustment. 1921. L 17220

His book is authoritative in every respect, and is by far the most competent, the most comprehensive, and the most just account of labor adjustment during the war period that has been issued.—G. Soule in The Nation.

Thomas, J. H. When labor rules. 1921. L 15444

This book shows clear, sane thinking. The author is an important Labor member of the British Parliament and a strong advocate of the national control of industries.

Veblen, Thorstein. The engineers and the price system. 1921. L 16780

Contents: On the nature and uses of sabotage.—The industrial system and the captains of industry.—The captains of finance and the engineers.—On the danger of a revolutionary overturn.—On the circumstances which make for a change.—A memorandum on a practicable soviet of technicians.

Finance, Insurance

Montgomery, Robert H. New York state income tax procedure, 1921, including corporation franchise tax. 1921. L 17757

New York (city). Stock Exchange. Constitution of the New York Stock Exchange, and resolutions adopted by the governing committee, with amendments to Jan. nineteen eighteen. 1918. L 17461

Sakolski, A. M. Railroad securities; a course of study with references. 1921.

Civics Dept.

Stevenson, John Alford. Meeting objections. 1921. L 19267

Robert, Henry M. Parliamentary practice; an introduction to parliamentary law. 1921. L 16453

International Relations

Gardiner, A. G. The Anglo-American future. 1921. L 16354

Mr. Gardiner is an English liberal who believes that the chief issue of the future lies in the relation between England and America. His proposal to pool the naval resources of the two nations for the unselfish use of the League of Nations is interesting at this time.

Gleason, George. What shall I think of Japan? 1921. I 10691

A study of Japan, by a man who for nineteen years has been secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in that country, and has an optimistic view of its future. Furniture, Lampshades

Earle, Olive. Lampshades; how to make them. 1921. K 28954

Written to aid the amateur craftsman in duplicating expensive ready made lampshades. Their place in home decoration and suggestions as to the kind of shades to combine with the various styles of bases are considered.

Félice, Roger de. French furniture under Louis XVI and the empire. 1921. K 28951

(Little illustrated books on old French furniture.) This is the fourth volume of the series and traces the history and social life of the two periods in their influence on artistic taste. Characteristic technique and style are described in detail. Chapters on the furnishing of rooms in period styles afford interesting suggestions.

Gardening

King, Mrs. Francis. Pages from a garden note-book. 1921. K 27232

Contains useful suggestions on beautifying gardens and important descriptions of plants. One chapter on women in agriculture is particularly interesting.

Taylor, Albert D., and Cooper, Gordon D. The complete garden. 1921. K 27155

A reference book containing practical suggestions and selected lists of plants; rather scientific, not enlarging upon artistic values.

Daly, Charles D. American football. 1921. K 30675

The makeup of a football team and the personal elements that aid its success are explained in an interesting manner. Single chapters deal with the method of playing different positions with diagrams to illustrate the more important ones.

Ferris, Helen. Producing amateur entertainments; varied stunts and other numbers with program plans and directions. 1921. K 30186

An invaluable store house, not only of information but of inspiration as well, for any one who is looking for help in suggestions either for a party or for an entertainment to raise money.—Survey.

TRAVEL AND DESCRIPTION

Atlas

Rand, McNally & Company. Commercial atlas of foreign countries; a companion volume to the Commercial atlas of America. 1921. *R 5102

Europe

Edwards, A. Herbage. Paris through an attic. 1919. I 11908

A charming narrative of a young couple living within their means in Paris on $350 a year. The descriptions of their little Cubby House, of how Paris amuses itself and their experiences at The Sorbonne during their two year study are exceedingly entertaining.

George, W. L. A London mosaic; pictures by Philippe Forbes-Robertson. 1921. I 10379

A group of scintillating essays on modern London, one of the best of which perhaps is Soups and stews. The unusual illustrations add much to the attractiveness of the book.

Murray, Amy. Father Allan's island; with a foreword by Padraic Colum. 1920. I 10301

A charming description of Father Allan's pasture, a tiny island in the north of Scotland, showing a sympathetic understanding of the lives and customs of its simple inhabitants.

Schwartz, M. Alexander. The voice of Russia. 1921. I 10543

By a Russian-American socialist who went back to Russia where he and his wife were imprisoned as spies. His book expresses tragic disappointment in the Soviet government and the horrible conditions that exist under its régime.

Africa

Marcosson, Isaac F. An African adventure. 1921. I 8923

Contents: Smuts.—"Cape to Cairo."—Rhodes and Rhodesia.—The Congo today.—On the Congo River.—America in the Congo.

Interesting as it is as "an African adventure," Mr. Marcosson's book is especially valuable for its exposition of the modern commercial development and possibilities of the Congo region.—New York Times.

United States

Towne, Charles Hanson. Loafing down Long Island. 1921. I 11576

The story of a walk from Manhattan to the end of Long Island delightfully related by the loafer.

Ellison, Edith Nicholl. The desert and the rose. 1921. I 11725

From the journal of a woman rancher in the Mesilla Valley, New Mexico.

South America

Franck, Harry A. Working north from Patagonia; being the narrative of a journey, earned on the way, through southern and eastern South America. 1921. I 1187

"A companion-piece to 'Vagabonding down the Andes,'" I 11129.

A thoroughly reliable and in many places amusing work. The fine photographs and their accompanying comments are not the least of its attractions.

BIOGRAPHY

Genealogy

King, Grace. Creole families of New Orleans. 1921. C 20317

The delightful atmosphere of old New Orleans is well reproduced in these accounts of distinguished Creole families.

Individual Biography

Eugénie, Empress consort of Napoleon III. FILON, AUGUSTIN. Recollections of the Empress Eugénie. 1921. C 21834

A personal narrative covering a period of nearly fifty years written by her private secretary during the Regency. It is a confidential and intimate description of the life of the Empress during the Empire and exile.

Manwaring, G. E. ed. The life and works of Sir Henry Mainwaring. v. 1: Biography. 1920. A 3389, 54

(Publications of the Navy Records Society.)

Marcus Aurelius. SEDGWICK, HENRY DWIGHT. Marcus Aurelius; a biography told as much as may be by letters, together with some account of the Stoic religion and an exposition of the Roman government's attempt to suppress Christianity during Marcus's reign. 1921. C 20608

Renan, Ernest. MOTT, LEWIS FREEMAN. Ernest Renan. 1921. C 23912

The personality of Renan and the dramatic points of his career are vividly set before us, while liberal excerpts from his writings show the development of this thought, and give, as a whole a coherent philosophy of life.

Roosevelt, Theodore. ROBINSON, CORINNE ROOSEVELT. My brother, Theodore Roosevelt. 1921. C 23974

A most attractive biography covering nearly the entire life of Roosevelt, and dealing largely with its personal and domestic side. For illustrations there are photographs and amusing pen pictures like those of his Letters.

HISTORY

Abbot, Willis J. Blue Jackets of 1918; being the story of the work of the American navy in the world war. 1921. A 7178

Barron, Elwyn A., ed. Deeds of heroism and bravery; the book of heroes and personal daring. 1920. A 7179

Adventures in the European war.

Bell, Walter George. The Tower of London. 1921. A 5394

The only accessible short book on the Tower of London. Its recital of annals and associations of London's most famous historical building forms, in a sense, a brief study of English history.—Book Review Digest.

Donaldson, Alfred Lee. A history of the Adirondacks. 1921. 2 v. B 8085

A complete and accurate narrative of the region, containing much detailed information on the animals, climate, mountains, roads, state routes, clubs, lumber and iron industries, Indians, etc., with descriptive comments.

Stringer, Harry R. The navy book of distinguished service. 1921. *A 7177

An official compendium of the names and citations of the men of the United States navy, marine corps, army and foreign governments, who were decorated by the Navy Department for extraordinary gallantry and conspicuous service above and beyond the call of duty in the world war.

FICTION

Bailey, H. C. Call Mr. Fortune. 1921. F 10809

Contents: The archduke's tea.—The sleeping companion.—The nice girl.—The efficient assassin.—The Hottentot Venus.—The business minister.

A collection of unusually clever and original detective stories in which a young doctor especially interested in curious cases appears and solves the mysteries. The scene is laid in London.

Bartley, Nalbro. Fair to middling. 1921. F 20244

The different experiences of the married life of two couples both of whom have their struggles to contend with, and the varying success with which they meet the problem of bettering conditions.

Benedict, Clare. XII. 1921. F 20377

Contents: A landscape with figures.—How Danvers saved the regiment.—The philosophy of David Keswick.—The Calvert conspiracies.—Mother.—

The resignation of Professor Elsworth.—The white frock.—A rest cure.—Jock's little door.—Thomas Conover.—The sultan.—The shadow of the trees.

Benson, E. F. Dodo wonders. 1921. F 20388

Sequel to Dodo (1893), F 7945; and Dodo's daughter (1914), F 11047.

The third of the series takes the clever and lovable Dodo through the war. Her new life, the change from busy idleness to strenuous relief work tames her gay spirit, but she still retains the ability of being charming and entertaining. May be read independently without loss of interest.

Bindloss, Harold. Kit Musgrave's luck. 1921. F 11130

A young Liverpool clerk secures a job on a Spanish trading vessel, which leads him into a dangerous smuggling game and an affair with a woman. He chooses the game of honor and the right girl.

Brent, John. A man's game. 1921. F 20704

An exciting adventure story with a South American background. A mysterious New York millionaire is financing two Americans whose railroading projects are interfered with and who decide to start a revolution.

Butler, Ellis Parker. In pawn. 1921. F 20810

An entertaining story of life in the author's home town with the variety and thrills of a moving picture comedy. The interest centers about the pros and cons of lying in its different phases.

Chipperfield, Robert Orr, pseud. of Isabel E. Ostrander. The man in the jury box. 1921. F 25815

A half-dozen suspects, a police force, a special detective all on the trail of the murderer, each with a different theory, afford sufficient plot to divert the reader.

Davey, Norman. The pilgrim of a smile. 1921. F 12286

Four London clubmen stop before the Sphinx with a question. The answer to the man who wanted to know "why the Sphinx smiled" is given in a series of human and ironical episodes in life, brilliantly written and entertaining.

Dawson, W. J. The Borrowdale tragedy. 1920. F 21493

An unusual story centering round Cecil Twyfold's revolt against social convention and the development of his character as he seeks the mode of life which gives the fullest expression to his own individuality. The Borrowdale tragedy is but an incident in the story.

Diver, Maud. Far to seek; a romance of England and India. 1921. F 12494

As the story is a story of India, and some of the central characters are the children of an Anglo-Indian marriage, the source of the title (a line of Tagore's) is very appropriate, while the poetic and imaginative equality that it presages is carried out by the novel.—Evening Post.

Dos Passos, John. Three soldiers. 1921. F 12532

An engrossing and brutally realistic narrative of the psychological reactions of a young composer to the war.

Dostoyevski, Fyodor. The friend of the family; or, Stepantchikovo and its inhabitants, and another story. 1920. F 12535

Contents: The friend of the family.—Nyetochka Nyezvanov.—Chronological list of Dostoevsky's works.

Two very contrasting stories. The first is about the members of the household on a country estate; the other relates the tragic life of a drunken violinist and his stepdaughter.

Douglas, Norman. South wind. 1920. F 21694

Fuessler, Newton. Gold shod. 1921. F 22300

The men of three generations are dominated by ambitious women, who in helping to advance them in the world of finance and power, do so at the sacrifice of their dreams.

Galsworthy, John. Awakening. 1920. F 22351

Vol. 4 of the Forsyte saga, following The man of property (1906), F 13086; Indian summer of a Forsyte, from the volume, Five tales (1918), F 13126; In chancery (1920), F 13136; and preceding To let (1921), F 22350.

Hutchinson, A. S. M. If winter comes. 1921. F 23300

A delightfully written tale in an English setting about a lovable idealist married to a snobbish small-souled conventionalist. There is a skillfully constructed plot, some remarkable characterization, and the psychology of two unhappy marriages is convincingly worked out.

Johnson, Owen. The wasted generation. 1921. F 14407

A story of the present generation of descendants from Colonial New England who have become selfish and ease loving and fail to retain the leadership which is rightfully theirs. The war brings about the realization of responsibility for service.

Macaulay, Rose. Dangerous ages. 1921. F 24807

An English story containing charming humor and good sound psychology. The danger points in every phase of a woman's life are skillfully characterized in each of the four generations of women presented. The Spectator assures its men readers that they too will find it delightful.

McCarthy, Justin Huntly. The golden shoe. 1921. F 24815

A light entertaining piece of fiction totally unlike the typical McCarthy romance. The plot centers about an exchange of identity.

McCutcheon, George Barr. Quill's Window. 1921. F 24824

Quill's window is a hill in Indiana on which a large part of the action of the story takes place. There is a smooth-tongued villain who is in love with the heroine, a staunch and steadfast lover of the heroine and a large group of Middle West subordinate characters.

Marshall, Edison. The snowshoe trail. 1921. F 24978

A well told adventure story typical of this author. The plot is based on a lost mine and a lost man. The guide employed to search for the man is at the same time looking for the mine.

Maugham, W. Somerset. The trembling of a leaf; little stories of the South Sea islands. 1921. F 25008

Contents: The Pacific.—Mackintosh.—The fall of Edward Barnard.—Red.—The pool.—Honolulu.—Rain.—Envoi.

Alluring short stories, decidedly individual. One or two are extremely fascinating character sketches, while others possess unusual plot interest.

Montgomery, L. M. Rilla of Ingleside. 1921. F 15471

Sequel to Anne of Green Gables. 1908. H 5121. Anne of Avonlea. 1909. H 5122. Chronicles of Avonlea. 1912. H 5131. Anne of the island. 1915. H 5133. Anne's house of dreams. 1917. F 15466. Further chronicles of Avonlea. 1920. F 15467.

A story of Prince Edward island in war time, centering about Rilla, the daughter of Anne of Green Gables.

Norris, Charles G. Brass; a novel of marriage. 1921. F 25606

The author's intent is clear and evidently sincere—to show the obligations of marriage, the tragedy of divorce, the need of mutual forbearance in man and wife especially in the earlier period of adjustment, and the rewards of sticking together.—Book Review Digest.

Packard, Frank L. Pawned. 1921. F 15886

An exciting story of a gambler and his adventures. The main characters have all pawned their lives away in one way or another. It is colorful but odd and fantastic.

Pendexter, Hugh. Kings of the Missouri. 1921. F 16112

A lively story of adventure among furtrappers and Indians of the Middle West, based on the rivalry of two large fur companies.

Raymond, Clifford. Four corners. 1921. F 16904

The charm that one feels in Mr. Raymond's novels comes out of atmosphere and characters. "Four Corners" enriches our studies of the small town with the fragrance of gardens and the aroma of preserving kettles.... We were reminded of the mosses and manses of Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Rolland, Romain. Clerambault; the story of an independent spirit during the war. 1921. F 17415

At the beginning of the book Clerambault is a writer of some renown, a kindly uncritical person. The author takes him through days and nights of agony during the war until he comes forth a convinced pacifist, realizing that his efforts to reconcile war with morality have failed.

Scott, Leroy. Children of the whirlwind. 1921. F 17868

A crime story of the usual sort. The hero is an ex-criminal who makes a success of going straight. The plot unravels satisfactorily and the wicked are justly punished.

Tagore, Rabindranath. The wreck. 1921. F 27688

A dramatic picture of Hindu life, dealing especially with the custom of arranging the marriages before bride and bridegroom have seen each other. A wedding party is wrecked, causing some curious complications.

Walpole, Hugh. The thirteen travellers. 1921. F 18941

Contents: Absalom Jay.—Fanny Close.—The Hon. Clive Torby.—Miss Morganhurst.—Peter Westcott.—Lucy Moon.—Mrs. Porter and Miss Allen.—Lois Drake.—Mr. Nix.—Lizzie Rand.—Nobody.—Bombastes Furioso.

These short stories depict the reaction of typical London characters to their special post war problems. The thread that connects them is the relation that each person bears to the same West End apartment house.

Williamson, C. N., and A. M. The brightener. 1921. F 19529

A beautiful girl, accustomed to luxury, is left almost penniless, and becomes a "brightener," one who, for a certain sum, will use her tact and position to aid people in their social dilemmas.

No. 1

The Chicago Public Library Preliminary Report, Jan. 1 to Nov. 30, 1921

CIRCULATION OF BOOKS

	1921 11 months	1920 12 months
Main Library	944,779	859,998
Branches	3,616,740	4,411,124
Traveling Libraries	1,006,653	992,053
Schools	1,307,756	606,090
Deposit Stations	301,103	337,642
Delivery Stations	268,837	405,651
Branch Reference	32,019	39,370
	<hr/> 7,477,887	<hr/> 7,651,928

WITH sixteen branches out of forty-five shut down, 147 people dropped from the staff, and $242,000 deducted from the appropriation for the year by reason of a sharp decrease in revenue, the Public Library shows a home circulation for the current eleven months only 180,000 volumes below the figure for the whole year of 1920. These statistics alone tell a story of expansion of use and influence under unexampled difficulties and handicaps that is significant of the place the Library has come to occupy in the life of the citizen. The order for retrenchment passed by the Board last January, when the full measure of our misfortune became evident, contemplated the closing of nineteen branches, but this number was reduced by three when the patrons of Sheridan Branch took it over, guaranteed the rent and paid all expenses of moving into better and larger quarters, and the branches in Stanton Park and Kosciuszko Park were taken over by the respective Park Boards in order to keep them open.

With an increased tax rate granted by the last General Assembly we are preparing to resume all our activities upon the scale of previous years, and to add to our resources and installations as rapidly as possible in order to give proper Library service to every citizen. Systematic expansion, including a carefully developed building program, will occupy the attention of the Board for the next, and for many succeeding years, in pursuit of the goal set several years ago when the Board announced its plans for ultimately providing: "Library service for every citizen within walking distance of his home."

Books Added to the Library

Derieux.—"A source of irritation," by Stacy Aumonier.—"Momma," by Rupert Hughes.—Back pay, by Fannie Hurst.—"Cab, Sir?" by S. H. Adams.—You've got to be selfish, by Edna Ferber.—"Clothes make the man," by Booth Tarkington.—The bell of Saint Gregoire, by Agnes R. White.—The evening rice, by Achmed Abdullah.—The taking of Billy Rand, by Gordon Young.—According to Ruskin, by Harriet Welles.—The crystal flask, by Paul Rosenwey.—Why the editors buy

The magazine stories selected, illustrate the types described by various well-known editors as meeting with their approval.

Poetry

Millay, Edna St. Vincent. Second April. 1921. E 14869

Light, lilting lyrics in the poet's own original manner and themes.

Morgan, Angela. Hail, man! 1919. E 14876

A book of vigorous poems arranged in groups under such headings as Symbols, Man in light, Man in darkness, Enchantment, etc.

Scollard, Clinton. War voices and memories, 1917-1918. 1920. E 11522

Turbyfill, Mark. The living frieze. 1921. E 15075

One thing especially is characteristic of these poems, the love of movement, the rhythm of leaping limbs and leaning branches. For Turbyfill is a dancer by profession. In that perhaps may lie the future of his poetry. So much has been written of dancing from without, but who has written it from within?—Eunice Tietjens in Chicago Daily News.

Drama

Bennett, Arnold. Body and soul; a play in four acts. 1921. E 13500

A lively play of exchanged individualities, with an unexpected climax.

The best plays of 1920-1921. E 13492, 1920-21

Deburau, by S. Guitry.—The first year, by F. Craven.—Enter Madame, by G. Varesi and D. Byrne.—The green goddess, by W. Archer.—Liliom, by F. Molnar.—Mary Rose, by J. M. Barrie.—Nice people, by R. Crothers.—The bad man, by P. E. Brown.—The Emperor Jones, by E. G. O'Neill.—The skin game, by J. Galsworthy.

Gale, Zona. Miss Lulu Bett; an American comedy of manners. 1921. E 13764

The play departs in no way from the spirit of the book and the same realness and subtlety are there.

Galsworthy, John. Six short plays. 1921. E 12208

Contents: The first and the last.—The little man.—Hall-marked.—Defeat.—The sun.—Punch and go.

Ibsen, Henrik. Early plays: Catiline, The warrior's barrow, Olaf Liljekrans. 1921. J 5628, 17

(Scandinavian classics.)

O'Neill, Eugene. The Emperor Jones. 1921. E 14164

(Stewart Kidd modern plays.)

A negro convict escapes to a West Indian island and poses as an emperor. His terror, and flight from the island when the people find him out, is powerfully and dramatically pictured.

Robinson, Lennox. The whiteheaded boy; a comedy in three acts. 1921. E 14217

An Irish comedy which is as well suited for reading as it is for acting.

Russell, Mary M. Dramatized Bible stories for young people. 1921. E 14221

Essays and Miscellany

Ellis, Havelock. Impressions and comments. 1914-1921. 2v. E 2652

In these brief essays, Mr. Ellis ignores the harsh, pessimistic things, and contemplates in a philosophic vein, the beauty of the world.

Holliday, Robert Cortes. Turns about town. 1921. E 3476

His writing is unique—and as American as Indianapolis. It is pungent prose, inimitable in its curious, highrolling, abrupt style and rich humor.—Daily News.

Lardner, Ring W. Symptoms of being 35. 1921. E 4172

Light and amusing trifles in the familiar Lardner style.

Lodge, Henry Cabot. The Senate of the United States, and other essays and addresses historical and literary. 1921. E 4343

Contents: The Senate of the United States.—New lamps for old.—A great library.—Value of the classics.—Familiar quotations.—Theodore Roosevelt.—Prospero's island.—After the victory.—The Pilgrims of Plymouth.

TRAVEL AND DESCRIPTION

Burke, Thomas. The outer circle; rambles in remote London. 1921. I 10378

The outer circle comprises the suburbs of London where Mr. Burke finds the unusual among the usual, and makes romance of the commonplace.

Fedden, Katharine. The Basque country, painted by Romilly Fedden. 1921. I 10482

The Basque country is herein portrayed by both brush and pen. The text is informative and sincere, and the paintings are charming.

Grundy, G. B., ed. Murray's small classical atlas. 1917. R 5103

Lucas, E. V. Roving east and roving west. 1921. I 11388

Contents: India.—Japan.—America. The subjects selected for comment are unhackneyed, and the observations upon them are just the things the arm-chair traveler would like to hear.

Paine, Ralph D. Lost ships and lonely seas. 1921. I 11397

A retelling of old romances and tragedies of the sea, of sailing days when a piece of driftwood told of the mysterious disappearance of a frigate, when clippers left with gay nonchalance and returned no more.—Tribune.

Sveriges Allmänna Exportförening. What Sweden can do. 1919. Civics Dept.

Syndicat Général de l'Industrie Hotelière de Paris. Les hotels de la France, colonies and foreign countries; contains photographs, prices, situations and all particulars respecting the chief hotels in France, colonies and abroad. 1921. I 2672

Shelved in Civics Dept.

BIOGRAPHY

Collections

Isaacson, Charles D. Face to face with great musicians. 1918-1921. 2v. C 19646

Imaginative chats with thirty great masters, aiming to bring the reader into more human and personal acquaintance with them.

Smith, Elva S., ed. Heroines of history and legend; stories and poems. 1921. C 19988

Facts and fiction concerning women heroines in many lands, from many years ago down to the Great War.

Individual Biography

Hugo, Victor. DUCLAUX, MADAME. Victor Hugo. 1921. C 22528

The style is easy and intimate and Hugo's personality is brought out in strong relief against an adequate background of his time.

Manning, Cardinal. LESLIE SHANE. Henry Edward Manning, his life and labours. 1921. C 23234

He has made an industrious and discriminating use of unpublished material, and he has written with the fine sense of romantic issues and the epigrammatic facility that we associate with the author of The End of a chapter.—Times (London).

Strindberg, August. UDDGREN, GUSTAF. Strindberg the man, tr. from the Swedish. 1920. C 24408

Venizelos, Eleutherios. CHESTER, S. B. Life of Venizelos. 1921. C 24669

A very full and sympathetic biography of Greece's man of destiny from the legend of his birth in a cattle shed through the period of revolution to the peace conference.

Ward, Artemas. MARTYN, CHARLES. The life of Artemas Ward, the first commander-in-chief of the American revolution. 1921. C 24766

An accurate, important picture, not only of Ward himself, but of the state of political affairs existing at that time; much of which has been gleaned from previously unpublished data.

HISTORY

Blatchford, M. E. and E. W. Memories of the Chicago fire. 1921. B 7809

Cammaerts, Emile. A history of Belgium from the Roman invasion to the present day. 1921. A 4254

Lamprey, L. Days of the discoverers. 1921. B 5102

(Great days in American history series.)

Paxson, Frederic L. Recent history of the United States. 1921. B 5933

A straightforward presentation of our political and economic history from the inauguration of President Hayes. One point of especial interest is the consideration of the influence of our amusements upon the national character.

FICTION

Adams, Samuel Hopkins. Success. 1921. F 10163

Gives a very intimate picture of the struggles, intrigue and competition of the press. It carries the hero from a thrilling railroad wreck in the west, to a tempestuous newspaper career in the east.

Arnim, M. A. B. Countess von Vera, by the author of "Elizabeth and her German garden." 1921. F 10664

The light handling of the rather melodramatic plot, keeps the book from becoming unpleasant. Vera has died before the story opens, but her personality dominates the lives of the characters.

Aumonier, Stacy. The golden windmill, and other stories. 1921. F 20059

Contents: The golden windmill.—A source of irritation.—The brothers.—"Old iron."—Little white frock.—A good action.—Them others.—The bent tree.—The great unimpressable.

A collection of short stories, well written and artistic and displaying great variety in character and setting.

Benét, Stephen Vincent. The beginning of wisdom. 1921. F 20380

Extraordinary happenings and adventures follow the hero from his schoolboy days, through Yale, and across the continent to San Francisco. Original, dramatic and real with unusual poetic touches.

Benson, E. F. Lovers and friends. 1921. F 20389

Another Benson story in which we become acquainted with the characters chiefly through their sparkling conversations. A woman who is over idealized by her husband finds that his friend understands her much better.

Birmingham, G. A., pseud. of J. O. Hannay. Adventurers of the night. 1921. F 11194

Searching for old relics on an island near Ireland and finding illicit whiskey, forms the theme for this entertaining novel.

Blanco-Fombona, Rufino. The man of gold. 1920. F 11223

(Brentano's Hispano-American series.)

A powerful character study of a man whose lust for gold is the sole motive of existence. By cunning and craft he attains success which only increases his miserliness. He is made Minister of Finance of Venezuela and here we have a picture of the corrupt political machine of that country.

Burnham, Clara Louise. The key note. 1921. F 20791

A young boy is cruelly mistreated by his mercenary uncle, but through the efforts of a Mrs. Lowell assisted by a young musician and the girl he eventually marries, he is rescued and becomes a happy, normal boy, and heir to the fortune his uncle was trying to keep from him.

Burt, Maxwell Struthers. Chance encounters. 1921. F 20805

Contents: The scarlet hunter.—Experiment.—Shining armor.—Devised sweetbreads.—"A dream or two."—The blood-red one.—"Bally old" Knott.—Each in his generation.

Three of these stories have a conjugal love element presented as a problem; two are reminiscent of the war, one of these, "The blood-red one," having a delicate touch and handling of the psychic resembling Blackwood. "Each in his generation" is an excellent character study of a young man and his uncle.

Cooke, Marjorie Benton. Married? 1921.
F 21349

A story of an heiress who to save a certain part of her fortune marries a man by wire whom she has never seen. Numerous situations and adventures result because of this but everything works out satisfactorily in the end.

Dell, Ethel M. The obstacle race. 1921.
F 21547

A snappy yarn, cleverly handled, not too intricate, and bound to give satisfaction to those who like an old fashioned tale of love and misunderstanding and some mystery.—Tribune.

Dell, Floyd. The briary-bush, a novel. 1921.
F 12445

Sequel to Moon-calf, F 12444.
The story continues the life of Felix Fay, the "Moon-calf," and has been said to be the most successful study ever made, of the emotions and reactions of married life.

Farnol, Jeffery. Martin Conisby's vengeance. 1921.
F 12832

Sequel to Black Bartlemy's treasure, F 12831.
A pirate story full of adventure, in which some of the action takes place in Panama.

Ferber, Edna. The girls. 1921.
F 12887

This Chicago novel of three generations of girls is extremely well done. The characters are really human, and the ending, if unexpected in a Ferber story, is exceedingly modern.

Ford, Sewell. Torchy as a pa. 1920.
F 22206

Sequel to Torchy, F 13026; Trying out Torchy, F 12978; On with Torchy, F 12979; Torchy, private sec., F 12928; Wilt thou, Torchy, F 12926; The house of Torchy, F 12867; Torchy and Vee, F 12869.

Geijerstam, Gustav af. The book about little brother; a story of married life. 1921.
F 13162

(Scandinavian classics.)
A story in a story. An author, in order to fulfill a promise to his little son, writes a book for him alone, though the child dies before it is begun.

Gunnarsson, Gunnar. The sworn brothers; a tale of the early days of Iceland. 1921.
F 22656

The life story of two Norse vikings, their travels, adventures and love affairs. The early Norse customs and the worship of Odin and Thor with its sacrificial rites of human and animal life are vividly described.

Hay, James. The unlighted house. 1921.
F 13618

If one wants a detective story with the most intriguing of plots, he will surely revel in this new mystery tale.

Holt, Isabella. The Marriotts and the Powells; a tribal chronicle. 1921.
F 14051

A story where the character drawing predominates and is well done. The poor relations of a wealthy Chicago family move near enough to be constantly under notice. Their reactions upon one another and the effects of the war upon them all make up the story.

Jacobsen, J. Peter. Niels Lyhne. 1921.
F 14319

Tragedy reigns supreme in this Danish novel which is one of character development rather than of plot interest.

King, Basil. The empty sack. 1921.
F 24256

A problem story of the conflict between capital and labor portraying American life as represented by the families of a bank employer and one of his clerks. A secret marriage, a theft and a murder are among the incidents which give interest to the plot.

Kyne, Peter B. The pride of Palomar. 1921.
F 14606

The main theme of this story is the struggle of Don Mike Farrell to save his old California ranch from the Japanese. The love strain is an important element in this wild and woolly tale.

Lardner, Ring W. The big town; how I and the Mrs. go to New York to see life and get Katie a husband. 1921.
F 14636

Mr. Lardner's characters breeze to New York from South Bend, Indiana to see the bright lights. There is a laugh every step of the way.

Mackail, Denis. Romance to the rescue. 1921.
F 24854

This is a pleasant English novel, humorous, but with moments of emotion. It has a theatrical back ground. The hero is a producer of plays—one of them his wife's. Both are very lovable but they fall out and then—after a well arranged plot—fall in again.

—What next? 1921.
F 24853

Adventures of a valet and a has-been heir. The valet has developed a good business head and all their undertakings prove amusing and successful.

McSpadden, J. Walker, ed. Famous dogs in fiction. 1921.
F 24938

Contents: Rab and his friends, by Dr. J. Brown.—A dog of Flanders, adapted from the story by Louise de la Ramée ("Ouida").—Bill Sikes and his dog, adapted from "Oliver Twist," by C. Dickens.—Dora Copperfield's "Jip," adapted from "David Copperfield," by C. Dickens.—Rip Van Winkle and his dog, from "The sketch book," by W. Irving.—Dandie Dinmont and his terriers, adapted from "Guy Mannering," by Sir W. Scott.—Stories of my dog, from "Stories for children," by L. N. Tolstoi.—Bob, son of Battle, adapted from the story by A. Ollivant.—Beautiful Joe, adapted from the story by M. Saunders.

Marshall, Archibald. Peter Binney. 1921.
F 24973

Peter Binney, a successful middle-aged business man envies his son's superior educational advantages and finally, after a severe preparatory grind, succeeds in entering Cambridge and becoming a fellow student with him.

Maugham, W. Somerset. Liza of Lambeth. 1921.
F 25009

A gripping story of lower London, rather sordid, but wonderfully well written. High-spirited Liza, thrusting her faithful suitor aside, becomes infatuated with a married man. Tragedy is the keynote of the whole book.

Miller, Alice Duer. Manslaughter. 1921.
F 15368

An over-indulged society girl while speeding, killed a policeman for which she was imprisoned. Her awakening to what life really means came to her through this experience.

Nathan, Robert. Autumn. 1921. F 15621

It is beautifully written and its insight into the psychology of the village folk and into the soul of age is uncanny—for Mr. Nathan is a young man. But he is a poet, and in a wider sense of the word, this book is a fine pastoral poem.—Llewellyn Jones in the Chicago Evening Post.

Nexö, Martin Andersen. Ditte, daughter of Man. 1921. F 15657

Sequel to Ditte, girl alive! F 15656.

Continues the story of this down trodden little slavey. The excellence of the book lies in the author's gift of expressing the words and thoughts of the outcasts from sheltered happy lives, but in its English form it suffers from inadequate translation of the simple colloquial Danish.

Raine, William MacLeod. Tangled trails; a western detective story. 1921. F 16810

Rinehart, Mary Roberts. More Tish. 1921. F 17256

Sequel to Tish, F 17230.

Ruck, Berta, (Mrs. Oliver Onions). The arrant rover. 1921. F 15782

The story of a handsome young man and four of his many love affairs. A rover at heart he flits from one girl to another, each time thinking he has found the only one, but in each case realizes after two or three weeks that she means nothing to him.

Sadleir, Michael. Privilege; a novel of the transition. 1921. F 17575

The result of inherited privilege on the descendants of an average English family. Mr. Solle in the Daily News describes it as possessing "realism without a clutter of useless details, romance without appeals to sentiment or vain imaginings."

Sampson, Emma Speed. Billy and the major. 1920. F 17612

Sequel to: Miss Minerva and William Green Hill, by F. B. Calhoun, F 11574; continued in Miss Minerva's baby, by E. S. Sampson, F 17613.

—Miss Minerva's baby. 1920. F 17613

Sequel to: Miss Minerva and William Green Hill, by F. B. Calhoun, F 11574; and Billy and the major, by E. S. Sampson, F 17612.

Thorne, Paul and Mabel. The Sheridan Road mystery. 1921. F 27779

An interesting story of murder in connection with counterfeiting staged in a familiar Chicago setting.

The Library in 1921

Summary of the Annual Report of the Board of Directors

DURING the year just closed 423,164 Chicago library patrons withdrew 7,472,768 books for home reading from the Public Library, an average of 24,501 volumes per day. During the same period, 910,784 volumes were read or consulted in the Reference Department. Sixteen of the 45 branches were closed early in the year because of a serious shortage in funds. In the preceding year these 16 branches showed an aggregate circulation of 819,794 volumes. Yet the net loss because of the curtailments of service is but 180,000 volumes for the year, slightly more than one average week's figures. It is therefore entirely safe to say that, with all activities running under full time, the book use for the year would easily have exceeded 8,000,000 volumes.

Direct service by means of deposits of books was given to 1,850 school rooms in 244 schools, in which 91,644 volumes were placed and were read 679,511 times. Business house and factory libraries, traveling libraries and collections in settlements, Sunday schools, community centers, camps and clubs, to the number of 211, show a book use of 1,432,677 volumes. During the summer 1,600 volumes were supplied to fifteen camps maintained by various Chicago organizations, such as Boy and Girl Scouts, Y. M. C. A., &c., in Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois. Library service is now maintained in four hospitals, the largest and most recent installation being in the Cook County Hospital, where the response has been immediate and gratifying. The recognized therapeutic value of good books makes this a most important subdivision of our extension activities, which we hope to increase as rapidly as possible.

In the program for the new year, based upon the assurance of an income sufficient to justify a forward-looking policy, the first step will be resumption of complete and full-time library service in all agencies, including those that were kept closed during the entire past year. Extension by means of new agencies, to be established wherever proper accommodations can be found, will also occupy the attention of the Library. If industrial conditions permit, it is hoped that some building operations, long held in abeyance, may be initiated. Complete rehabilitation of book stocks in all agencies, much-needed repairs and renovations, and the further extension of book distribution in all directions to the limit of our resources will be undertaken, made possible by the new tax rate of eight-tenths of a mill, which is expected to yield an income of approximately $1,300,000.

Branch Service Resumed

Attention is called to the resumption of full service hours in all of the principal branches.

All branches that have been in operation during the past year are now open from 9 A. M. to 9 P. M. every day except Sunday.

See Directory on Inside Front Cover.

Books Added to the Library

Baylor University, Waco, Texas. Library. Browniana in Baylor University, comp. by Aurelia E. Brooks. 1921. *O 2964
(The Baylor bulletin.)

Howe, Harriet E. The catalog. 1921. J 3028, 19
(A. L. A. manual of library economy.)

Poetry Society of America. A list of eighty-seven poets, representing American verse from 1900 to 1919. *O 2965

"The titles and publishers are named; a note of appreciation and a short quotation are given with each author."

PHILOSOPHY

Psychology, Psychoanalysis

La Rue, Daniel Wolford. Psychology for teachers. 1920. L 13970
(American education series.)

Long, Constance E. Collected papers on the psychology of phantasy. 1921. L 13973
Nervous diseases and various illnesses are caused, the author believes, by suppressed tendencies or desires which are indicated by the subconscious mind in the half-waking state.

McDougall, William. The group mind; a sketch of the principles of collective psychology, with some attempt to apply them to the interpretation of national life and character. 1920. L 15324
A sequel to Introduction to social psychology, L 11162.

Platt, Charles. The psychology of thought and feeling; a conservative interpretation of results in modern psychology. 1921. L 13978

A lively popular work which summarizes the best known psychological truths and presents them in logical order.

Snoddy, George S., and Hyde, George E. Mental survey of Utah schools and adaptation of the army Beta tests. 1921. L 13714
(University of Utah bulletin.)

Spiritism

Owen, G. Vale. The life beyond the veil; spirit messages received and written down, with an appreciation by Lord Northcliffe and an introduction by Conan Doyle. 1920-1921. 4 v. L 13590

1. The lowlands of heaven.
2. The highlands of heaven.
3. The ministry of heaven.
4. The battalions of heaven.

A Lancashire vicar describes in detail the method by which the messages (chiefly from his mother) were communicated.

Ethics, Success

Cope, Henry Frederick. The parent and the child; case-studies in the problems of parenthood. 1921. L 14304
Sane, helpful discussions of the misdemeanors with which all parents are confronted.

Hudson, Jay William. The truths we live by. 1921. L 14181

The philosopher speaks to the layman in a simple, direct and lucid fashion. He undertakes to present, and to solve as far as possible, the deepest problems before the modern mind; to give back to it what science seems to have taken away.

RELIGION

Bell, Mary I. M. A short history of the papacy. 1921. M 5881

Braithwaite, William C. The second period of Quakerism. 1919. M 7922

Sequel to The beginnings of Quakerism (M7877), dealing with the period from 1660 to 1725.

Perkins, Jeanette Eloise, and Danielson, Frances Weld. The Mayflower program book; a week-day course in world friendship and training in service for children six, seven and eight years of age. 1920. M 8259

Twenty-six programs for children emphasizing the spirit of international friendship and service. It is intended for use in weekday church schools but has little direct connection with Bible lessons.

Sibley, Josiah. Pathfinders of the soul-country, and other sermons for today. 1918. M 9944

Eloquent and inspiring addresses by the minister of Chicago's Second Presbyterian Church, of whom a colleague says: "He has a keen eye, a constructive mind, a brave and gentle soul."

Smith, Henry Preserved. Essays in Biblical interpretation. 1921. M 6391
(The Amherst books.)

Not so much interpretation itself as a discussion of the correct principles on which it should be based. Professor Smith shows that the older dogmatic methods are anachronisms now and devotes one chapter to current "apocalyptic vagaries."

THE SOCIAL SCIENCES

Economics, Labor

Crane, Thomas Frederick. Italian social customs of the sixteenth century, and their influence on the literatures of Europe. 1920. J 4846, 5
(Cornell studies in English.)

Freeman, R. Austin. Social decay and regeneration; with an introduction by Havelock Ellis. 1921. L 15301

Contents: I. Analytical: Social physiology; The social reactions of mechanism; Social pathology.—II. Synthetic.

Showing how labor saving machines beget more labor, how they substitute machinery for brains, and what an altogether deplorable effect this "machine-age" is having on man, mentally, physically and morally.

Harding, Warren G. Our common country; mutual good will in America. 1921. L 15488

Contents: Re consecration to God.—Business and government.—The inspiration of labor.—American agriculture.—What of our children.—The press and the public.—The theater.—American education.—The immigrant.—Conservation and development.—Social justice.—The value of play.—Fraternity.—The village.—Two wars.—The meaning of the armistice.—The federal constitution.—The national conscience.

Campaign speeches sub-titled to show that they are specially addressed to different sections of the people, as for instance farmers, actors, mothers, etc.

Korzybski, Alfred. Manhood of humanity; the science and art of human engineering. 1921. L 15314

A book dealing with the fundamental philosophical theme, the nature of man. The distinguishing human characteristic is termed "time-binding," since man alone is able to build the present and future on the achievements of the past.

Economics, Labor

Bowley, Arthur L. Prices and wages in the United Kingdom, 1914-1920. 1921. L 16706
(Economic and social history of the world war: British series.)

Erdman, Henry E. The marketing of whole milk. 1921. L 17871

(The citizen's library of economics, politics and sociology.)

Pure milk at reasonable prices is the theme of this volume. The author follows the milk all the way from the time it leaves the cow, and discusses it from the industrial standpoints.

Gilbert, Chester G., and Pogue, Joseph E. America's power resources; the economic significance of coal, oil and water-power. 1921. L 17873

A useful and apparently authentic record of investigations with the intent of interpreting the special importance attached to the energy resources, and of pointing out the shortcomings in the way they are handled.

Greenwood, W. J. American and foreign stock exchange practice, stock and bond trading, and the business corporation laws of all nations, together with local regulations, laws, fees and taxes affecting American firms and corporations carrying on business in any other states of the U. S. A., or establishing branches or agencies in foreign countries. 1921. Civics Dept.

Olds, Marshall. The high cost of strikes. 1921. L 17227

Mr. Olds lays the high cost of living to the prevalence of strike conditions, claiming that the unions are tyrannical labor monopolies, raising prices by reducing the supply to an even greater extent than the great capitalistic trusts of a generation ago.

Tannenbaum, Frank. The labor movement; its conservative functions and social consequences. 1921. L 16782

An effort to make the trade unions realize their tendency to encroach more and more on the freedom of capital, so that they will be able to outline their programs to better purpose. The Nation regards it as an essential approach to an understanding of the labor movement.

Socialism, Communism, Bolshevism

Benedict, Bertram. The larger socialism. 1921. L 17563

Believing that the failure of the Socialist party to gain a wide popular support is due to error in method, the author urges the importance of extending its interests in every line of constructive endeavor.

Gompers, Samuel, and Walling, William English. Out of their own mouths; a revelation and an indictment of sovietism. 1921. L 17585

An indictment of soviet domination in Russia, contrasting its achievements with its promises and claims.

Jones, Henry Arthur. My dear Wells; being a series of letters addressed by Henry Arthur Jones to Mr. H. G. Wells, upon bolshevism, collectivism, internationalism, and the distribution of wealth. 1921. L 17593

Pasvolsky, Leo. The economics of communism, with special reference to Russia's experiment. 1921. L 17614

An account of the Soviet economic system followed by a discussion of the problems involved. The author regards the present upheaval in Russia as inevitable in any attempt to reduce a complicated system of production to communism.

Yarros, Victor S. Our revolution; essays in interpretation. 1920. L 15450

Contents: Introduction: the essence of independent radicalism.—Making ready for the new day.—The coming industrial democracy.—Socialism and individualism in evolution.—What shall we do with the state?—Human progress: the idea and the reality.—Recent assaults on democracy.—Income and the principle of service.—How democracy functions.—Shallow economics of the people.—Socialism recognizing its mistakes.—A neglected opportunity and duty in journalism.—The Russian revolutionary drama.—True democracy and progress.—Bolshevism: its rise, decline, and fall.

These social and economic essays of an independent radical are collected from various recent publications, and reflect broad, clear thinking. Mr. Yarros believes the solution of our problems will be found in "evolution, not revolution or miracle."

Political Science

Government, Administration

Ames, Edgar W., and Eldred, Arvie. Community civics. 1921. L 18368

Treats of community life and development of governmental departments in a simple and entertaining style that makes it comprehensible and attractive to seventh and eighth grades.

Boulnois, H. Percy. Municipal engineering; surveying the scope of municipal engineering and the statutory position, the appointment, the training, and the duties of a municipal engineer. 1921. L 18247

(Pitman's technical primer series.)

Haines, Charles Grove, and Haines, Bertha Moser. Principles and problems of government. 1921. L 18382

Contents: Introduction. Public control of government.—Government organization and administration.—Some special problems in the operation of government.

The author's intention is to give only so much of historical setting and specific analysis of governmental problems as is necessary to present them to the reader for discussion and to train him to form his own opinions and judgment on political issues.

Hall, Arnold Bennett. Popular government; an inquiry into the nature and methods of representative government. 1921. L 15922

(The citizen's library of economics, politics and sociology.)

Professor Hall lays stress on public opinion and the importance of its development. He also discusses the referendum and recall, providing much material for thought.

James, Herman G. Local government in the United States. 1921. L 18258

A comprehensive comparison of organization, functions and subdivisions of local government, their origins and tendencies as well as actual embodiments.—Survey.

Poetry

Farrar, John. Songs for parents. 1921. E 14653

Lyrics by the editor of The Bookman intended to help parents understand the child's point of view. Some of them are such colorful singing little poems that they would hardly be scorned by the children themselves.

Guiterman, Arthur. A ballad-maker's pack. 1921. E 14725

Divided into three parts: "Of many lands," which is probably the best; "Of his own country," and "Of his own time," which is largely war poetry.

Masters, Edgar Lee. The open sea. 1921. E 14865

A book of poems containing a tribute to William Marion Reedy but dealing for the most part with historical themes—the story of Charlotte Corday, the frequenters of the Mermaid, the influence of the Brutus idea on John Wilkes Booth, etc.

Rice, Cale Young. Sea poems. 1921. E 14954

Mr. Rice's poems on the sea in all his published work are here gathered together in one volume.

Rittenhouse, Jessie B. The lifted cup. 1921. E 14959

Delicate lyrics of love and "him," original songs by a poet better known for her anthologies than for her own exquisite poems. The joy of love, and the longing for fulfillment sung in poems that are wistful and beautiful.—Chicago Evening Post.

Sitwell, Edith, ed. Wheels, 1920; fifth cycle. 1920. E 14353

Contents: Osbert Sitwell.—Aldous Huxley.—Alan Porter.—Leah McTavish Cohen.—Geoffrey Cookson.—William Kean Seymour.—Sacheverell Sitwell.—John J. Adams.—Sherard Vines.—Edith Sitwell.

Taylor, Bert Leston. A penny whistle, together with the Babette ballads; with a foreword by Franklin P. Adams. 1921. E 15042

Reading these poems with a pang of loss and a warmth of reminiscent pleasure, the farflung Line o' Type family will renew acquaintance with Old Grimes; they will review the cannery with its jars neatly labeled. Best of all they will find the Babette Ballads, a beautiful bequest of affection for that charming little daughter.—Keith Preston in the Chicago Daily News.

Yeats, William Butler. Selected poems. 1921. E 11718

Contents: Early poems (1885-1892).—The land of heart's desire; a drama.—The Countess Cathleen; a drama.—Lyrics (1892-1899).—The old age of Queen Maeve.—Baile and Ailinn.—Lyrics (1899-1904).—On Baile's strand; a drama.—Deirdre; a drama.—Lyrics, (1904-1919).

Drama

Mantzius, Karl. A history of theatrical art in ancient and modern times by Karl Mantzius; with an introduction by William Archer. 1903-1921. 6v. E 9496

- v.1. The earliest times.
2. The middle ages and the renaissance.
3. Shakespearean period in England.
4. Moliere and his times.—The theatre in France in the 17th century.
5. The great actors of the eighteenth century.
6. Classicism and romanticism.

Brown, Alice. One act plays. 1921. E 13517

Contents: The hero.—Doctor Auntie.—The Crimson Lake.—Milly dear.—The web.—The loving cup.—Joint owners in Spain.—The sugar house.—A March wind.

The first, which is an allegorical tribute to Lord Kitchener, is perhaps the best in the collection.

Chambers, C. Haddon. The saving grace; a comedy in three acts. 1919. E 11902

Clark, Barrett H., ed. Representative one-act plays by British and Irish authors. 1921. E 13607

Companion to Representative one-act plays by American authors, E 14058.

Contents: The widow of Wasdale Head, by Sir A. Pinero.—The goal, by H. A. Jones.—Salome, by O. Wilde.—The man in the stalls, by A. Sutro.—'Op-o'-me-thumb, by F. Fenn and R. Pryce.—The impertinence of the creature, by C. Gordon-Lennox.—The stepmother, by A. Bennett.—Rococo, by G. Barker.—James and John, by G. Cannan.—The snow man, by L. Housman.—Fancy free, by S. Houghton.—Lonesome-like, by H. Brighthouse.—Miss Tassey, by Elizabeth Baker.—Make-shifts, by Gertrude Robins.—The maker of dreams, by O. Downs.—The land of heart's desire, by W. B. Yeats.—Riders to the sea, by J. M. Synge.—Spreading the news, by Lady Gregory.—The magnanimous lover, by St. J. G. Ervine.—The golden doom, by Lord Dunsany.

Gerstenberg, Alice. Ten one-act plays. 1921. E 13774

Contents: He said and she said.—Overtones.—The unseen.—The huffer.—Attuned.—The pot boiler.—Hearts.—Beyond.—Fourteen.—The illuminatti in drama libre.

Plays of character rather than plot, evincing a true psychology and a fatalistic predisposition on the part of the author.

Young, Stark. Three one-act plays: Madretta; At the shrine; Addio. 1921. E 13070

Three little tragedies of which the first is much the best. It is a Creole play contrasting the American and Creole temperaments.

Essays

Bergengren, Ralph. The seven ages of man. 1921. E 1913

Contents: Baby, baby.—To be a boy.—On meeting the beloved.—This is a father.—On being a landlord.—Old flies and old men.—The olde, olde, very olde man.

Here are seven short, rather invertebrate essays presenting the author's inoffensive thoughts upon babyhood, boyhood, adolescence, fatherhood, landlordry, old age and senility. The style is confiding and innocent of literary presumptuousness.—Literary Review.

Brooks, Charles S. Hints to pilgrims. 1921. E 2122

Contents: Hints to pilgrims.—I plan a vacation.

—At a toy-shop window.—Sic transit.—The posture of authors.—After dinner pleasantries.—Little candles.—A visit to a poet.—Autumn days.—On finding a plot.—Circus days.—In praise of a lawnmower.—On dropping off to sleep.—Who was Jeremy?—A chapter for children.—The crowded curb.—A corner for echoes.

Whimsical, charming essays on anything from the ark to Greenwich Village.

Brown, Heywood. Seeing things at night. 1921. E 2047

A pitching together a lot of stray leaves from the writings of the inexhaustible Heywood Brown, being papers on many subjects from baseball to babies. Written in a humorous, whimsical, delightful manner. These fugitive papers foreshadow Brown as an American peer of Chesterton and Barrie.—Bookman.

Gardiner, Alfred G. Windfalls, by Alpha of the Plough. 1920. E 3055

Bees and butterflies and flowers and other things we come across in the garden give the essayist a starting point for his themes in this little volume. He makes many excursions in the direction of the eccentricities of human nature.—Boston Transcript.

McFee, William. Harbours of memory. 1921. E 4427

Admirable chapters on seamen, their tastes in books, life on shore and idiosyncrasies on board. Written in a charming, forceful manner, and having, besides, a subtle sense of humor.

BIOGRAPHY

Tyler's quarterly historical and genealogical magazine. v. I. July, 1919-April, 1920. Ser.

Formerly William and Mary College quarterly.

Who's who among North American authors. 1921. *R 2711

Arrangement by authors, subjects, and geographical location.

Burnham, Daniel H. MOORE, CHARLES. Daniel H. Burnham, architect, planner of cities. 1921. C 21066

This great man gave to his country some of its finest specimens of architecture. The Chicago plan is a living memorial to him and his work.

Cantacuzène, Princess, (Julia Dent Grant). My life here and there. 1921. C 21148

Tells of a life that fires our democratic imaginations—the splendor of the Austrian court, society in New York and Newport, a winter in Rome, and the glory of Russia under the Czar—and affords glimpses of the greatest personalities of the last generation.—Bookman.

Gauguin, Paul. FLETCHER, JOHN GOULD. Paul Gauguin, his life and art. 1921. C 22063

If the growing popular interest in the life and art of Paul Gauguin has been given a hectic impetus by Maugham's "Moon and Sixpence," it is to be hoped that through the instrumentality of Mr. Fletcher this same popular interest will continue to rise to a saner and fairer estimate of Gauguin as he actually was.—Nation.

Rolland, Romain. ZWEIG, STEFAN. Romain Rolland; the man and his work. 1921. C 23976

Mr. Zweig's biography is no ordinary one. The outward events of Romain Rolland's life are merely referred to in passing, and the narrative is kept on the high plane of his intellectual achievement.—New Republic.

Roosevelt, Theodore. GILMAN, BRADLEY.
Roosevelt, the happy warrior. 1921

C 24002

Written by a Harvard classmate, the book is an unprejudiced and impartial biography of this knight whose one aim in life was to right wrong.

Verlaine, Paul. NICOLSON, HAROLD. Paul
Verlaine. 1921.

C 24674

Previous biographers, mostly French, have dotingly depicted Verlaine as a god, but this one portrays a man with very ungodlike failings and weaknesses.

Windischgraetz, Prince Ludwig. My memoirs. 1921.

C 24918

This chronicle, written by a friend and adviser of ex-emperor Charles, takes the reader into the dramatic happenings of the last few years and contributes much to the history of the war.

HISTORY

Includes morning and evening edition.
Current numbers in Newspaper Room.

Gibbs, Philip. More that must be told. 1921.

A 7181

Contents: Leaders of the old tradition.—Ideals of the humanists.—The need of the spirit.—The new Germany.—The price of victory in France.—The social revolution in English life.—The warning of Austria.—The truth about Ireland.—The United States and world peace.—The chance of youth.

No more relentless exposure of the spiritual and mental incapacities of our governing classes to govern has been made anywhere; no franker admission that representative government as worked by modern statesmen represents nothing but selfish and greedy minorities.—Robert Herrick in the Nation.

Graves, Charles L. Mr. Punch's history of modern England. 1921. 2 v. A 5434

v.1. 1841-1857.—2. 1857-1874.

These two volumes cover what might be called a social history of England from 1841 to 1874. Whimsical and satirical, they plead the cause of the down-trodden and caricature the idiosyncrasies of the treads.

FICTION

Anderson, Sherwood. The triumph of the egg; a book of impressions from American life in tales and poems. 1921. F 10532

Contents: The dumb man.—I want to know why.—Seeds.—The other woman.—The egg.—Unlighted lamps.—Senility.—The man in the brown coat.—Brothers.—The door of the trap.—The New Englander.—War.—Motherhood.—Out of nowhere into nothing.—The man with the trumpet.

Fanny Butcher in the Chicago Tribune says these stories are psychic in the "unmarried" sense of the word, while not in the least "spiritualistic." "He has taken the minds out of the bodies of his men, and women and written the stories of their gropings toward expression."

Bailey, Temple. The gay cockade. 1921.
F 20161

Contents: The gay cockade.—The hidden land.—White birches.—The emperor's ghost.—The red candle.—Returned goods.—Burned toast.—Petro-nella.—The canopy bed.—Sandwich Jane.—Lady Crusoe.—A rebellious grandmother.—Wait-for Prince Charming.—Beggars on horseback.

Stories of youth, clean cut, dramatic and vivid. Full of courage, kindness, beauty and laughter and the best sort of romance. Good reading for the whole family.—Helen Cody Baker in the Chicago Evening Post.

Baumont, Gerald. Hearts and the diamond.
1921. F 20333

Contents: With the help of God and a fast outfield.—The Crab.—Leave it to Angel-Face.—Rain-bow.—Tin Can Tommy.—Kerrigan's kid.—The speed pill.—Pebble Pop.—Called on account of darkness.—His Honor, the umps.—Elephants.

A collection of baseball stories for adult readers, presenting an intimate view of the man of the diamond "worshipped yesterday, abused today, forgotten to-morrow."

Bercovici, Konrad. Ghitza and other romances of gypsy blood. 1921. F 20401

Contents: Ghitza.—The law of the lawless.—Vlad's son.—Yahde, the proud one.—Tinka.—Fan-utza.—Hazi, wife of Sender.—Surtuck.—The bear tamer's daughter.—Yancu Lautaru.

A fascinating interpretation of gypsy life; national customs, codes and habits, with the individual's reaction to them, are pictured here with a vividness that makes them linger in the reader's mind.

Beresford, J. D. Signs and wonders. 1921.
F 20405

Contents: Prologue: The appearance of man.—Signs and wonders.—The cage.—Enlargement.—The perfect smile.—The hidden beast.—The barrage.—The introvert.—The barrier.—The convert.—A negligible experiment.—The miracle.—Young Strickland's career.—A difference of temperament.—Reference wanted.—As the crow flies.—The night of creation.

Short stories or studies dealing with the significance of intangible realities. The last and longest is a genuine ghost story on psychical research lines. Others deal with the development and analysis of typical characters.

Byrne, Donn. Messer Marco Polo. 1921. F 20829

The story of Marco Polo's Chinese love and life told by an old Irish weaver of tales. It is rich with Celtic color and beauty, quaint with the phraseology which made Synge's plays so lifting as they were spoken by the Irish Players.—Chicago Tribune.

Chamberlain, George Agnew. Cobweb. 1921. F 11808

A humorous story of entanglements to be unraveled in solving the problem of a lady of mystery.

Chapman, Arthur. Mystery ranch. 1921. F 11817

A regular western mystery story involving good and bad Indians, cowmen, and a beautiful girl from the city. The background this time is the Indian reservation with the Indian agent as the hero. The interest is held and the end something of a surprise.

Clarke, Isabel C. Children of Eve. 1918. F 11987

—The Elstones. 1919. F 11988

—The potter's house. 1921. F 11984

—Ursula Finch. 1920. F 11985

—Whose name is legion. 1919. F 11986

Connor, Ralph, pseud. of C. W. Gordon. To him that hath; a novel of the West of today. 1921. F 22523

A story of love and labor, jealousy and strikes, in Canada after the war.

Couperus, Louis. The hidden force; a story of modern Java. 1921. F 12173

A story of Java, showing the strength of the psychological force which—whether it be the voodooism of superstitious natives or the calculating self-love of a sophisticated woman—may successfully oppose the law-and-order regime of the rationalist.

Delafield, E. M., pseud. of E. E. M. De La Pasture. The heel of Achilles. 1921. F 12443

The story of a supreme egoist whose vulnerable spot in the armor of her self-interest is her devotion (though still a selfish one) to her daughter. The character is not an attractive one but its delineation is excellent.

Evarts, Hal G. The yellow horde. 1921. F 12789

A good animal story centered about the life of the coyote on the plains and the attempts of man to destroy him. A vigorous tale with plenty of action.

Fergusson, Harvey. The blood of the conquerors. 1921. F 12897

At long last our Zane Greys and Randall Parishes are silenced by a tale of New Mexico which has not a dull page, nor stupid paragraph, nor badly turned sentence, but which has breadth, sophistication, dignity—something new for this land of vaqueros, mesquite, mezcals and tarantulas.—Chicago Evening Post.

Fletcher, J. S. The Herapath property. 1921. F 22128

Typical of Fletcher at his "mean," a brisk logical, agreeable tale with a pleasantly mystifying mystery that remains a mystery almost to the last page.—Vincent Starrett in the Chicago Evening Post.

Fleurbaey, Svend. Grim, the story of a pike; tr. from the Danish. 1921. F 12850

A vividly written story with a fish for a heroine, whose avowed object in life is "to devour others and to avoid being devoured oneself."

Footner, Hulbert. The woman from "outside" (on Swan River). 1921. F 22183

A combination mystery and western story, with the Northwest Mounted Police as hero and a half-breed Indian as the mystery.

French, Joseph Lewis, ed. Great sea stories. 1921. F 22268

Contents: Spanish bloodhounds and English mastiffs, by C. Kingsley.—The club-hauling of the Diomedes, by Captain F. Marryat.—The cruise of the Torch, by M. Scott.—The merchantman and the pirate, by C. Reade.—The mutiny of the Bounty, anonymous.—The wreck of the Royal Caroline, by J. F. Cooper.—The capture of the great white whale, by H. Melville.—The corvette Claymore, by V. Hugo.—The Merchants' cup, by D. W. Bone.—A storm and a rescue, by W. C. Russell.—The sailor's wife, by P. Loti.—The salving of the Yan Shan, by H. de V. Stacpoole.—The derelict Neptune, by M. Robertson.—The terrible Solomons, by J. London.—El Dorado, by J. Masefield.

The next best thing to having the works from which these stories were selected is having this particular volume. These thrillers would be ideal reading by the fireside on a cold winter evening.

Golding, Louis. Forward from Babylon. 1921. F 13217

The life story of a Jewish boy in London. The theme is the changing viewpoint of the young in conflict with the old standards, and the presentation is artistic.

Hopkins, Gerard. A city in the foreground; a novel of youth. 1921. F 14096

A very good picture of undergraduate life at Oxford. A book of student discussions, ideals, hopes and existence just before war. Very stimulating for those to whom the subject appeals.

Ingram, Eleanor M. The thing from the lake. 1921. F 14253

An indefinite horror which comes to Roger Locke in the night, the ghost of a Puritan maiden, a braid of beautiful hair,—all enter into this absorbing psychic tale.

Jones, E. B. C. Quiet interior. 1921. F 14418

The picture of an English family, with its conservative and easy-going parents, its up-to-date daughters with their enthusiasms for Rupert Brooks, modern music and what not, is beautifully done.—Llewellyn Jones in the Chicago Evening Post.

Linnankoski, Johannes, pseud. of Wiktori Peltonen. The song of the blood-red flower. 1921. F 16114

After intemperately picking the flowers of life along the way, Olaf suddenly awakes to find them crushed and withered.

Lucas, E. V. Rose and Rose; a story. 1921. F 24707

Rose Allison made an unhappy marriage against the wishes of her guardian, a young physician.

She finally goes away with the man she loves, leaving little Rose to the paternal care of the doctor, who tells the story of mother and daughter.

Mackay, Isabel Ecclestone. The window-gazer. 1921. F 24850

A slight, entertaining story of a lonely girl who merely looks on at life as one who must be satisfied to gaze at shopwindows and pass by without making a purchase. Of course she finds eventually the meaning of life in terms of love.

Martin, George Madden. March on. 1921. F 24988

A story of Kentucky told against a background of the old southern aristocracy.

Murdock, Victor. "Folks." 1921. F 15595

A romantic story of the building of the city of Wichita, Kansas, told in a series of portrait sketches of the "folks" who helped in one way or another, to put the town on the map.—New Republic.

Oemler, Marie Conway. Where the young Child was; and also The spirit of the house, The youngest officer, Linden goes home, The little brown house, That makes the world go round. 1921. F 15745

There is a Christmas-y, homey, child-loving flavor to most of the stories.—Evening Post.

Poole, Ernest. Beggars' gold. 1921. F 16501

Jews, acquisitive but laying acquisition upon the high altar of a new culture; Americans, groping their way toward the light and stumbling; Chinese, catching swiftly the slowly defined visions of the occident and leaping to a goal—such the men, the types, the races, Mr. Poole has crowded into his book.—Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Pryde, Anthony, pseud. Nightfall. 1921. F 16659

An English tale of the love of a cultured wealthy man of thirty-six for a vicar's daughter of nineteen. It is a post-bellum story containing characters that suffer from the effects of the war.

Roche, Arthur Somers. The day of faith. 1921. F 17423

A skillfully made, well sustained fantasia on the theme that the actual and universal application of the Christian doctrine of love for one's neighbor would immediately bring about a millennium.—Literary Review.

Rutledge, Archibald. Old plantation days. 1921. F 17548

The glamour of the typical South cannot but be felt by the reader of these plantation sketches of negro and animal life.

Seltzer, Charles Alden. "Beau" Rand. 1921. F 17921

Beau Rand is the son of an outlaw, with an inherited temper and a way with a gun quite his own. After many adventures he wins the girl of his choice, though he has great trouble in convincing her father of his worthiness.

Smith, Juliette Gordon. The Wednesday wife. 1921. F 18247

An oriental story of harem life full of color and adventure. In the end the Wednesday wife becomes the wife of every day, according to approved western standards.

Snaith, J. C. The council of seven. 1921. F 18271

The conflict between a great newspaper syndicate favoring war, and the council of seven working for peace and determined to get it at any price. The love element closely follows the main theme in interest.

Stringer, Arthur. Twin tales: Are all men alike, and The lost Titian. 1921. F 18414

Two novellettes by the author of The prairie wife (F 18429) and The prairie mother (F 18432). The first is a story of Bohemian life, and the second tells of two Puritan spinsters who destroyed a valuable Titian because of the nude figure it contained.

Symonds, Margaret. A child of the Alps. 1921. F 18503

A novel by the daughter of the eminent English critic, John Addington Symonds. The heroine is the child of an English mother and a sturdy Swiss peasant father. Considerations of heredity enter into the story, but it is most noteworthy for its vivid pictures of Swiss scenery and Italian life.

Vachell, Horace Annesley. Blinkers; a romance of the preconceived idea. 1921. F 18815

The story of a humble English maid, her noble lover and his loyal friend. But the noble lover proves faint-hearted and the girl's affections are finally transferred to the friend.

White, Edward Lucas. Andivius Hedulio; adventures of a Roman nobelman in the days of the empire. 1921. F 19304

The hero falls under suspicion of treason and is forced to disappear. For ten years he roams in disguise over the entire Roman empire, having many adventures and narrow escapes until finally he regains the favor of Emperor Commodus.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S BOOKS

Miscellaneous

Beard, Dan. American boys' book of wild animals. 1921. K 21724

(Woodcraft series.)

Cornyn, John Hubert. Around the wigwam fire. 1921. L 21153

Fabre, Jean-Henri. Animal life in field and garden. 1921. K 21771

A book of animals and insects written for children. The author, according to Maeterlinck, is the insects' Homer and he succeeds in communicating to his readers something of the passionate interest with which he studies the intimate lives of the animals.

Johnson, Burges. Youngsters; collected poems of childhood. 1921. E 11102

Poems for children and about them, including two particularly charming ones on Christmas themes.

Judson, Clara Ingram. The junior cook book. 1920. K 24763

Morgan, Alfred P. Boys' home book of science and construction. 1921. K 18572

Simple explanations of the sciences with experiments for beginners. Charts and diagrams on almost every page elucidate the text and bring the experiments within the scope of the amateur.

Van Rensselaer, Mrs. Schuyler. Many children. 1921. E 15093

Charming verses, as fresh and unconscious of themselves as the children for whom they were written, they follow the boys and girls from the first wondering thoughts of babyhood into the eager, sensitive and tremendously important adolescent years.—Chicago Daily News.

Stories

Ames, Joseph B. Torrance from Texas. 1921. H 7208

It was not quite so easy for Torrance, straight from the freedom of a Texas ranch, to enter into the life of an eastern school, as it had been to rope a steer or stop a stampede. But in time he proved his mettle to the satisfaction of his school-mates and himself, and just how that came about is most interesting reading.

Barbour, Ralph Henry. Kick formation. 1921. H 7395

Another football story in which the hero devotes himself to the achievement of a gridiron career.

Blanchard, Amy E. From tenderfoot to golden eaglet; a Girl Scout story. 1921. H 7424

Lange, D. The raid of the Ottawa. 1921. H 8983

Levinger, Elma Ehrlich. Playmates in Egypt, and other stories. 1920. H 4771

Contents: Playmates in Egypt.—In the tents of Israel.—The dawn of freedom.—The borrowed garment.—The lad who brought no offering.—The silent harp.—The sprig of myrtle.—Friends.—The great hope.—The golden ring.

A collection of stories to tell for the different Jewish holidays, given in historical order of holidays celebrated. A unique collection and one which will be of the utmost value to those interested in the subject of story-telling.

Miller, Leo E. In the tiger's lair. 1921. H 5061

"In the tiger's lair" continues the adventures of Stanley Livingston and Ted Boyle of "Hidden people," who return to the Hidden valley to complete their quest for the buried treasure of the Incas.

Miller, Warren H. The castaways of Banda Sea. 1921. H 5062

A tale of pearl searchers in the Malay Archipelago, of shipwreck and of cunning natives who steal a fortune in pearls from Captain Sloan and his son George. It is brimful of adventure and the climax is withheld until almost the last page.

Newberry, Perry. Black Boulder claim. 1921. H 5274

Experiences of two boys prospecting for gold in the mountains of California. Just the story for the boy who has a secret longing to "rough it" in the great out-of-doors.

Perkins, Lucy Fitch. The Puritan twins. 1921. H 5658

In the latest twin book the author has maintained her usual standard of excellence.

Pratt-Chadwick, Mara L., and Lamprey, L. The Alo man; stories from the Congo. 1921. H 3427

(Children of the world.)
Mypoko and Nkunda are two little African children who live in the jungle of Central Africa. This is the entertaining story of their life and the wonderful tales of the Alo man, who wanders about the country telling stories and making songs.

(The world of to-day.)

The author discusses social reform, state socialism, syndicalism, guild socialism, etc., in a dispassionate, simple way, easy to understand, and likely to enlighten many people who are confused by the variety of industrial programs now offered to the world.—Literary Review.

Hyndman, H. M. The economics of socialism. 1921. L 17591

The principal aim of the book is to explain the theories of Marx, with whom the author was personally acquainted, to those who misinterpret or condemn Marxism.

International Relations China and Japan

Kawakami, K. K., ed. What Japan thinks. 1921. L 16357

Contents: A world unsafe for democracy, by Isoh Yamagata.—The Monroe doctrine and the League of nations, by Rikitaro Fujisawa.—Mikadoism, by R. Oda.—Japan's defective constitutional government, by Yukio Ozaki.—Liberalism in Japan, by Sakuzo Yoshino.—Japan's navalism, by Tetsutaro Sato.—Militarism and navalism in America, by Henry Satoh.—Harmony between East and West, by Takashi Hara.—The war's effect upon the Japanese mind, by Masaharu Anesaki.—Illusions of the white race, by Marquis Okuma.—The "white" problem in Asia, by an anonymous writer.—The Japanese question in America, by Shimpei Goto.—Can Japan be Christianized? by M. Zumoto.—Appendix: The Yap controversy.

The opinions on political, national and international questions, of thirteen prominent Japanese thinkers addressed exclusively to the Japanese. The editor himself is a writer of repute, and is regarded as especially clear in his views on Japan's relations to the rest of the world.

Kuno, Yoshi S. What Japan wants. 1921. L 16360

The author, professor at the University of California, endeavors to show in a simple and straightforward manner, what the aim of Japan is in America and in the Far East. In trying to be frank and fair Frederick Starr thinks he unnecessarily exposes his country's weak points.

Reid, Gilbert. China, captive or free? A study of China's entanglements. 1921. L 16359

The author is decidedly pro-Chinese and believes that China has been wronged, all the Powers being equally responsible. Having been a resident of China for four decades he has a thorough knowledge of its literature and the spirit of its people.

Treat, Payson J. Japan and the United States, 1853-1921. 1921. L 16358

Manufacture, Trades

Baxter, Leon H. Elementary concrete construction. 1921. K 26322

Valuable material gathered together in the form of a condensed textbook in manual training, containing a series of problems in concrete construction work for boys from ten to fourteen. The projects are practical, and directions and illustrations simple and clear enough to be easily followed.—Booklist.

Roehl, Louis M. Harness repairing. 1921. K 25791

Solar, Frank I. Hand craft projects for school and home shops. 1921. K 25949

Very attractive in its straightforward discussions with boys of the purpose of shopwork, equipment, tools and drawings, and its complete picturing and description of toys and other small projects of value about the home and of interest to a young worker.—Booklist.

Building

Emerson, David B. Modern building superintendence and the writing of specifications. 1921. K 26182

Painting

Marriott, Charles. Modern movements in painting. 1921. K 29009

(Universal art series.)

An English critic's sympathetic explanation of the various schools from the pre-Raphaelites and impressionists, through the "post-impressionism" of cubists, futurists, neo-realists, etc., and such French "wild men" as Gauguin and his fellows, down to the artists now painting.

Turner, Percy Moore. The appreciation of painting. 1921. K 29031

What Mr. Turner has here attempted is no less than a student's guide to European painting from Giotto to the futurists, with chapters on the meaning of art, and on emotional development.—International Studio.

Architecture

Ladies' Home Journal. Journal bungalows. 1921. K 27724

Magonigle, H. Van Buren. Architectural rendering in wash. 1921. K 28652

A well illustrated book on the academic rendering of architects' plans for the uninstructed beginner.

Gardening

King, Mrs. Francis. The little garden. 1921. K 27233

A small book full of good advice and practical suggestions for the amateur.

Interior Decoration, Furniture

Northend, Mary Harrod. The art of home decoration; illustrated from the author's photographs. 1921. K 28878

A practical book to aid home makers, especially with respect to color combination. It takes up in detail the treatment of each room from entrance hall to attic, and its suggestions are applicable to all sizes and grades of homes and apartments.

Nutting, Wallace. Furniture of the Pilgrim century, 1620-1720, including colonial utensils and hardware; illustrated with one thousand photographs by the author hitherto unpublished. 1921. *P 3232

We find him not only whetting our appetite for further study of colonial originals, but presenting an entertaining and colorful study of colonial times. The book reconstructs for us the early days of the Massachusetts settlers as perhaps no book of recent times has done.—Chicago Daily News.

Music

Cutter, Benjamin. How to study Kreutzer; a handbook for the daily use of violin teachers and violin students, containing explanations of the left hand difficulties and of their solution, and directions as to the systematic acquirement of the various bowings, both firm and bounding. 1903. K 29973

(The music students library.)

Musical Fund Society of Philadelphia. Centenary, 1820-1920. 1920. K 29651

Rivarde, Achille. The violin and its technique as a means to the interpretation of music. 1921. K 29981

(The musician's library.)

Emphasizes the importance of the imaginative and poetical side of violin playing and discourages performance merely as a display of skill in overcoming difficult scores.

Tremaine, C. M. New York's first music week. 1920. K 29623

An experiment in community music.

Recreation

Outdoor Sports, Indoor Games

Graves, Ernest. The line man's bible; a foot-ball text book of detailed instruction. 1921. K 30680

Lunn, Arnold. Cross-country ski-ing. 1921. K 30581

The author, who has a thorough knowledge of this sport, not only offers valuable suggestions for beginners, but to those acquainted with its technique and equipment he likewise presents information of importance.

Strouse, Arthur H., ed. Ideas for children's parties. 1921. K 30233

Whitehead, Wilbur C. Auction bridge standards; with a complete explanation of the art of bidding, containing the authorized laws of duplicate play. 1921. K 30449

Gives definite directions and is worth careful study, especially for the experienced player.

LITERATURE

Manly, John Matthews, and Rickert, Edith. Contemporary British literature; bibliographies and study outlines. 1921. J 6373

A very valuable little book containing biographies and bibliographies of 223 modern British men of letters. Its wide inclusion of authors and titles, its suggestions for reading, lists of criticisms, and the fact that it is up to date (1921) make it useful to students and the literary reader.

Poetry

Mordell, Albert. The literature of ecstasy. 1921. J 7660

The author believes that any literature whose characteristic feature is ecstasy is poetry, whether in prose form or verse. He grows ecstatic in his enthusiasm for poetry which he regards as the essential life of the soul.

Omond, T. S. English metrists, being a sketch of English prosodical criticism from Elizabethan times to the present day. 1921. J 3383

Walters, L. D'O., comp. Irish poets of today; an anthology. 1921. E 14354

A collection of poems by A. E., Padraic Colum, James H. Cousins, Darrell Figgis, Padric Gregory, Douglas Hyde, Lionel Johnson, Francis Ledwidge, Shane Leslie, W. M. Letts, Patrick MacGill, James Stephens, Herbert Trench, Katherine Tynan, and W. B. Yeats.

Ayscough, Florence, tr. Fir-flower tablets; poems translated from the Chinese. 1921. E 14344 Translations put into poetic form by Amy Lowell, rendering with great delicacy the subtle color tones of the Oriental poets.

Freeman, John. Poems, new and old. 1920. E 14673

Quiet but subtle verses of great beauty. At least one reviewer considers the book one of the most important of current poetical publications.

Hedrick, T. K. Orientations of Ho-Hen, tr. from Yan-Kee; with introduction by Keith Preston. 1921. E 14742

These meditations on life and times, full of humor and irony, are done not only in the Japanese verse form but in the spirit of the Japanese epigram. They have been running in the "Hit or Miss" column of the Daily News since before the present vogue for Oriental literature and unrhymed verse.

Hoyt, Henry Martyn. Dry points, studies in black and white; with biographical sketch by William Rose Benét. 1921. E 11067

A memorial volume consisting of fragmentary gleanings from a young poet who died before the world knew of his genius. The book is a tribute of love from his friend.

Kilmer, Aline. Vigils. 1921. E 11143

Not so joyous as Candles that burn (E 11139) nor so devoted to the bounties of children, it has a deeper note of suffering—and of triumph over it. Aline Kilmer doesn't write much, but what she writes is always poetry.—Chicago Tribune.

Kriloff, Ivan Andreyevich. Kriloff's fables; tr. from the Russian in the original metres. 1921. E 11155

Contains more than one-third of the work of this Russian, who is regarded as a fabulist second only to LaFontaine and whom the reviewer in the Nation calls an "indolent and picturesque poet."

Marquis, Don. Noah an' Jonah an' Cap'n John Smith; a book of humorous verse. 1921. E 14854

Perhaps the best of these deliciously comic verses are the "Reverie of a Gentleman of Sensibility at an Italian Table d'Hôte," and "A Scientific Note."

Preston, Keith. Splinters. 1921. E 11413

One of the pleasantest and most enjoyable volumes of verse which have appeared in many months. He possesses the art of always getting the smile he sets out to get.—Boston Transcript.

Drama

Lewis, B. Roland. The one-act play in colleges and high schools; with bibliographies and a list of one-act plays for study and production. 1920. E 12534

Actable one-act plays (Chicago Public Library, 1916), p. 23. (Extension series.)

McIsaac, F. J. The Tony Sarg marionette book, illustrated by Tony Sarg; with two plays for home-made marionettes, by Anne Stoddard. 1921. E 14074

A practical manual on the making of marionettes of which the New York Times says, "It holds as much magic in it as the wonderful lamp of Aladdin, and can create a whole world in the twinkling of an eye."

Stratton, Clarence. Producing in little theaters. 1921. E 12853

The little theater is no longer merely a fact in the life of the American theater—it is a factor... Mr. Stratton's book is both a fine concise textbook for the student of the movement and a guide for the active member of it.—Survey.

Taft, Linwood. The technique of pageantry. 1921. E 12901

Practical suggestions for pageant production illustrated by two examples of different types, a Thanksgiving pageant and a historical one.

Drinkwater, John. Oliver Cromwell. 1921. E 13672

A drama giving a consistent portrait of Cromwell in episodes of his life extending from the time of his village leadership until he became Lord Protector. His domestic side is represented through the introduction of his mother, wife and daughter.

Emig, Evelyn. The old order; a play in one act. 1921. E 13174
(Poet Lore plays.)

Kaufman, George S., and Connelly, Marc. Dulcy, a comedy in three acts (with a bow to Franklin P. Adams); introduction by Booth Tarkington. 1921. E 12449
Very amusing is Dulcy, the innocent meddler who, though annoying, is convincingly real.

Maugham, W. Somerset. The circle; a comedy in three acts. 1921. E 14088
The story of a bored wife and her elopement, repeating the experience of her husband's mother thirty years before. An exceedingly actable play in which Mrs. Leslie Carter and John Drew took the parts of the elderly elopers in the original production.

Pelé, Lillian Sutton. Ties of blood; a drama in one act. 1921. E 13174
(Poet Lore plays.)

Rostand, Edmond. The romancers. 1921. E 13174
(Poet Lore plays.)

Schiller, Friedrich von. William Tell; tr., with an introduction and notes, by Patrick Maxwell. E 14225
(The Scott library.)

Vildrac, Charles. The steamer Tenacity; a comedy in three acts. 1921. E 13174
(Poet Lore plays.)

Essays and Miscellanies

Boas, Ralph Philip, ed. Youth and the new world; essays from the Atlantic Monthly. 1921. E 1793

As a whole, the book sets forth reasonably, from divers angles but without undue prejudice, the more important tendencies and problems of current living—social, material, esthetic, political, and even religious.—Literary Review.

Colby, Frank Moore. The margin of hesitation. 1921. E 15413

Contents: Trolley cars and democratic raptures.—Thinking it through in haste.—The language of feminist debate.—Pleasures of anxiety.—Hating backwards.—After the war in Thompsonstown.—International cancellation.—The lesson of literary war losses.—On behalf of Harold McChamber.—Subsidizing authors.—Incorporated taste.—Barbarians and the critic.—Reviewer's cramp.—How to hate Shakespeare.—Confessions of a Gallomaniac.—The classic debate.—The choice of bad manners.—Tailor blood and the aristocracy of fiction.—Our refinement.

Gourmont, Remy de. Decadence, and other essays on the culture of ideas. 1921. E 3113

(The European library.)
Contents: The disassociation of ideas.—Glory and the idea of immortality.—Success and the idea of beauty.—The value of education.—Women and language.—Stéphane Mallarmé and the idea of decadence.—Of style or writing.—Subconscious creation.—The roots of idealism.

The volume contains speculations as to the idea of beauty, the origin of language, and other subjects. All are based upon a purely materialistic interpretation of the mind and soul, and are ingenious if not always convincing.—New York Times.

Hudson, W. H. A traveller in little things. 1921. E 3542

It is characteristic of his delightful modesty and whimsy that he should have called the book what he did...The ideas he vends are all about what he considers little things, birds and wasps and tiny everyday adventures.—Chicago Tribune.

Huneker, James. Variations. 1921. E 3514

Contents: Various.—How not to be a genius.—The recantations of George Moore.—Crushed violets.—Baudelaire's letters to his mother.—The two temptations.—The Flaubert anniversary.—Roosevelt and Brandes.—Pennell talks about etching.—In praise of prints.—New Russia for old.—Cezanne.—Eili, Eili, lomo asovtoni?—Socialism and mediocrity.—Chopin, or The circus?—Art and alcohol.—The tragic Chopin.—Phases of the greater Chopin.—The twilight of Cosima I.—Idle speculations.—The master builder.—Verdi's Otello.—Faust and Mephisto.—Bohemian music.—The music of yesterday?—Liszt's only piano sonata.—Dreaming of Liszt.—A Brahma of the keyboard.—Contemporary bran.—A mood reactionary.—Musical Potterism.—My Child Roland.—"Oscar" and Dvorák.—Enrico Caruso.

A collection of essays with characteristic titles, full of gifted conversational criticism in the spirit of the master interpreter.

Milne, A. A. If I may. 1921. E 4598

Brief essays on many subjects, on which it is a pleasure to browse. They are written in a quietly humorous and altogether charming style.

Morley, Christopher. Plum pudding, of divers ingredients, discreetly blended and seasoned; merrily embellished by Walter Jack Duncan. 1921. E 15930

As humorous essayist and poetical humanist, the author is here at his best.

Nicholson, Meredith. The man in the street; papers on American topics. 1921. E 4699

Contents: Let Main Street alone!—James Whitcomb Riley.—The cheerful breakfast table.—The Boulevard of rogues.—The open season for American novelists.—The church for honest sinners.—The second-rate man in politics.—The lady of Lander lane.—How, then, should Smith vote?—The poor old English language.

A number of cheerful papers on topics of present-day interest. The most charming are the essays on James Whitcomb Riley, and "The lady of Lander Lane." The latter is a story-essay, and in this style of composition the author is most adept.

Ruskin, John. The crown of wild olive, and lectures on art. E 5506

A new edition with a different inclusion from former ones.

Smith, Logan Pearsall. More trivia. 1921. E 16205

It is essentially the book of an American gentleman who likes living in England. He has the keen sight of the man who can poke fun with real effect at himself and his feeling of self-importance. He fills a page or two under each title with gracefully and perhaps slightly mannered prose.—Chicago Evening Post.

Stewart, Donald Ogden. A parody outline of history; wherein may be found a curiously irreverent treatment of American historical events, imagining them as they would be narrated by America's most characteristic contemporary authors, together with divers delightful, droll drawings, penciled by Herb Roth, the whole forming an amusing and satirical picture of American letters of today. 1921.

E 16224

The authors parodied are W. L. Phelps, Cabell, Sinclair Lewis, Fitzgerald, Lardner, Thornton Burgess, Harold Bell Wright, Edith Wharton, M. R. S. Andrews, and Eugene O'Neill.

Humor, Miscellanies

Breuning Margaret. You know Charles. 1921. E 2044

Very slight comments on the American man.

Cobb, Irvin S. One third off. 1921.

E 2147

The "great loss" of one-third of his weight and the succeeding events are humorously related in this little volume.

Parker, Mary Moncure. Jolly monologues. 1921. J 7506

They ring a few welcome changes on some of the old themes and suggest several new ones.—Helen Cody Baker in The Chicago Daily News.

Strunsky, Simeon. Sinbad and his friends. 1921. E 5669

A comic oriental backdrop takes the place of Mr. Dooley's West Side inn. Through caliphs and viziers and houri, an American newspaper reporter hits slyly at censorship, Hooverizing, Hearst and what not.—Chicago Evening Post.

Traprock, Walter E., pseud of George S. Chappell. The cruise of the Kawa; wanderings in the South Seas. 1921.

E 2145

A very funny take-off on the O'Brien-Maugham school of South Sea literature, whose satire is enhanced by most amazing illustrations.

TRAVEL AND DESCRIPTION

Atlases

Bartholomew, J. G. The advanced atlas of physical and political geography; a new series of maps specially designed for schools, colleges and private students. 1917. *R 5104

Cram's modern reference atlas of the world. Chronological story of the world war. 1922. *R 5105

Europe

London, Paris

Henderson, Helen W. A loiterer in Paris. 1921. I 11909

A travel book with a distinctly literary quality, presenting Paris with its historic setting, its famous old cathedrals and treasure houses of art and sculpture in an atmosphere combining the past and present to an unusual extent.

Tomlinson, H. M. London river. 1921.

I 10381

Contents: The foreshore.—A midnight voyage.—A shipping parish.—The "Heart's desire."—The master.—The ship-runners.—Not in the almanac.—

The illusion.—In a coffee-shop.—Off-shore.—An old Lloyd's register.

Sympathetic sketches of the lower Thames, with a great deal of mood and atmosphere.

Germany

Markham, Violet R. Watching on the Rhine. 1921. I 7518

Written as an outcome of a year's residence among the Germans. The author has studied their lives in all phases, and the resulting work is as interesting as a novel and much more instructive.

Asia

India, China and Japan

Bland, J. O. P. China, Japan and Korea. 1921. I 10664

No doubt published primarily in order to inform British and American public opinion as to the failure of the republican régime to maintain the elements of decent government in China.—New York Evening Post.

Chauvelot, Robert. Mysterious India; its rajahs—its Brahmins—its fakirs. 1921.

I 10729

A series of sketches by a Frenchman on that most interesting country, charmingly and amusingly describing its ancient customs, temples, cities, rajahs, fakirs,—dwelling more on the past and barely touching upon the India of to-day.

Greenbie, Marjorie Barstow. In the eyes of the East. 1921. I 10614

Marjorie Barstow and Sydney Greenbie traveled separately to the other side of the world. They became engaged on the top of Fuji and wended their way back, he by the Pacific and she by way of the Atlantic (and a shipwreck). She tells of her journey and its romance in this book.

Street, Julian. Mysterious Japan. 1921.

I 10704

A travel book of unusual beauty and charm. The older material is presented in such a way that it seems new and there is much that is really new. The author makes no attempt to solve the Eastern problem but it is evident that he is in sympathy with the Japanese.

North America

Colby, Charles C., comp. Source book for the economic geography of North America. 1921. I 11441

Professor Colby of the University of Chicago has gathered here selections from widely scattered material in technical journals and government publications to the great convenience of college classes and the interested layman.

Faris, John T. Seeing the sunny south. 1921. I 11609

The balmyness and charms of the South are set forth pictorially as well as in writing. Its industrial value to the United States is also touched upon.

Heming, Arthur. The drama of the forests; romance and adventure. 1921. I 4213

The author is an artist, who here combines the experiences of his thirty-three years of travel in the Canadian northwest into one continuous narrative.

Sauer, Carl O. The geography of the Ozark highland of Missouri. 1920. *B 3053, 7
(Geographic Society of Chicago bulletin.)

Pacific Ocean, Polynesia

Greenbie, Sydney. The Pacific triangle. 1921. I 19185

Contents: 1. Historical and travel material.—2. Discussion of native problems, personal and social.—3. Discussion of the political problems involving Australasia, Asia and America.

A book that gives you the background to the disarmament Pacific problem in a readable, interesting manner, from the human standpoint.—Chicago Daily News.

Hall, James Norman, and Nordhoff, Charles Bernard. Faery lands of the South Seas. 1921. I 12083

After the war these two aviators took up their abode on some of the islands in the South seas and they have portrayed in a delightful fashion the spirit and romantic beauty of these lands.

Stock, Ralph. The cruise of the dream ship. 1921. I 12085

How two men and a girl bought a boat and cruised from England by way of Spain (where they dropped their pilot) to the South Seas. It is a veracious record, but sounds too good to be true.

Polar Regions

Scott, G. Firth. Daring deeds of polar explorers; true stories of the bravery, resource, endurance and adventures of explorers at the poles. 1922. I 11330

Drawn from The romance of polar exploration, I 9529.

Stefansson, Vilhjalmur. The friendly Arctic; the story of five years in Polar regions. 1921. I 11332

Stefansson's trip, apart from its scientific value, is a milestone in Arctic exploration. He demonstrated that since the Polar regions have sufficient resources to sustain life, it is not necessary for travelers to carry all their supplies with them if they will profit by the example he has set.

BIOGRAPHY

Collections

Lowry, Edward G. Washington close-ups; intimate views of some public figures. 1921. C 19757

A readable group of sketches in the prevailing "mirror" mode of biography. There is some irony, more or less gentle, and much genuine humor. The prevailing figure of speech is the automobile metaphor.

Raymond, E. T. Portraits of the nineties. 1921. C 19901

Contents: The nineties.—The Earl of Rosebery.—Cecil Rhodes.—Mr. Gladstone.—George Meredith.—Lord Salisbury.—Lord Kitchener.—The Duke of Devonshire.—Archbishop Temple.—Lord Randolph Churchill.—Herbert Spencer.—Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Balfour.—Oscar Wilde.—Sir William Harcourt.—Bishop Creighton.—John Morley.—W. T. Stead.—Sir Henry Fowler.—Aubrey Beardsley.—Lord Courtney of Penwith.—Thomas Hardy.—Earl Spencer.—Sir H. M. Stanley.—Justin McCarthy.—Lord Leighton and G. F. Watts.—Charles Haddon Spurgeon.—William Booth.—Some lawyers.—Old and new journalists.—Some actors.—Bibliography.

A collection of brief critical and analytical character studies of the diplomats, scholars, writers, actors, lawyers, leaders of men and pioneers in the world movements of this great transition period.

Individual Biography

Blunt, Wilfrid Scawen. My diaries; being a personal narrative of events, 1888–1914. 1921. 2v. C 20903

(The secret history series.)

v. 1. 1888–1900; the scramble for Africa.

2. 1900–1914; the coalition against Germany.

Treats of the artistic, social and political phases of English life from 1888 to the Great War. The author has always been a champion of oppressed nationalities and is one of the most vivid personalities of the last generation.

Fabre, Jean Henri. FABRE, AUGUSTIN. The life of Jean Henri Fabre, the entomologist, 1823–1910. 1921. C 21857

The author describes the child, schoolboy, student and professor, and has made extensive use of extracts from Fabre's own well-known works. Though filled with enthusiasm and admiration the book adds little that is new.

Ford, James L. Forty-odd years in the literary shop. 1921. C 21952

Rambles among men and women, famous and otherwise, in all walks of life and literature. The author knew them all, and holds the reader's undiminished interest to the last word.

Garland, Hamlin. A daughter of the middle border. 1921. C 22047

Autobiographical chapters continuing A son of the middle border (C 22046) and telling more about Chicago and the middle west, about Garland's mother and father, and about his romantic wooing and wedding of Laroche Taft's sister Zulime than about himself.

Hamilton, Anthony. CLARK, RUTH. Anthony Hamilton (author of Memoirs of Count Grammont) his life and works and his family. 1921. C 22282

Higginson, Henry Lee. PERRY, BLISS. Life and letters of Henry Lee Higginson. 1921. C 22443

Hindenburg, Marshal von. Out of my life. 1921. 2v. C 22444

Hindenburg relates his military career from early training in the art of war through the stirring events of the World War. Mr. Yharra of the New York Times says, "He writes as one would expect an old soldier to write whose sword is mightier than his pen."

London, Jack. LONDON, CHARMIAN. The book of Jack London. 1921. 2v. C 23036

A life-sized portrait of the man... As his wife she has held herself up to him as the mirror for his personality; and in her love, her devotion, her understanding, we see Jack London as it would have been impossible for us to see him through any other medium.—Bookman.

Moltke, Count von. WHITTON, F. E. Moltke. 1921. C 23443

(Makers of the nineteenth century.)

A life of Moltke which is likely to become at once a biographical and a military classic. The author's strong sense of human interest and a firm grasp of the principles underlying the art of war, make the book exceedingly readable.—Spectator.

Morrow, Edwin P. JILLSON, WILLARD ROUSE. Edwin P. Morrow—Kentuckian; a contemporaneous biographical sketch. 1921. C 23492

Panunzio, Constantine M. The soul of an immigrant. 1921. C 23674

Perhaps the most important sketch of the immigrant's relations with and adjustment to America since the days of Mary Antin... As a narrative it is of great interest and as an essay it bristles with matter of great pith and moment.—Boston Transcript.

Roosevelt, Quentin. ROOSEVELT, KERMIT, ed Quentin Roosevelt; a sketch with letters. 1921. C 24007

Letters written during the war, interspersed with biographical data by his brother. It is more of a character sketch than biography.

Roosevelt, Theodore. HAGEDORN, HERMANN. Roosevelt in the Bad Lands. 1921. C 24003

(Roosevelt memorial association publications.)

A delightful story of Roosevelt's three years in Dakota, 1883-1886, vivid, clear cut and with a sense of humor. It does not try to be at all analytical of Roosevelt's character, but merely pictures his response to the wild life of the rough frontier and his effect on the inhabitants.

Stone, Melville E. Fifty years a journalist. 1921. C 24393

Mr. Stone has written a most entertaining chronicle of his journalistic life, which includes personal sketches of many prominent men of the last half century.

Wilson, Woodrow. TUMULTY, JOSEPH P. Woodrow Wilson as I know him. 1921. C 24915

This story of Woodrow Wilson may be taken as authentic stuff of inside White-House problems during a trying administration.—Literary Digest.

HISTORY

Conway, C. B., and Shuford, George A., comp. History, 119th infantry, 60th brigade, 30th division, U. S. A.; operations in Belgium and France, 1917-1919. 1921. A 7184

Haworth, Paul Leland. Trailmakers of the Northwest. 1921. B 9013

A history of exploration written in a popular and entertaining style.

Hodgson, John Crawford, ed. Percy bailiff's rolls of the fifteenth century. 1921. A 1065, 134

(The publications of the Surtees Society.) Latin text.

Hutchins, Frank and Cortelle. Sword or liberty; the story of two revolutions. 1921. B 5467

A historical narrative about the French and American revolutions, based upon a sword presented to Lafayette.

Kallen, Horace Meyer. Zionism and world politics; a study in history and social psychology. 1921. A 2693

The author stands midway between the world of pure thought and the world of action and brings to bear upon the practical problems of his people and his generation a rare combination of psychological insight and concrete knowledge and interests.—Literary Review.

Lamar, Mirabeau Bonaparte. The papers of Mirabeau Bonaparte Lamar; ed. from the original papers in the Texas State Library. 1920. B 1720

Neumann, Georg Paul, comp. The German air force in the great war. 1921. A 7183

"From the records and with the assistance of twenty-nine officers and officials of the naval and military air services."

Turner, Edward Raymond. Europe since 1870. 1921. A 5970

A history of the last half-century centering about the World War—its indirect causes in the rivalries prompting the various alliances, its direct causes, the war itself, its settlement, and the Russian revolution.

Van Loon, Hendrik Willem. The story of mankind. 1921. A 2235

A fascinating history of the world by a competent historian purporting to be told for children but not in the least less interesting for that. Llewellyn Jones recommends it particularly to the reader of Wells's Outline.

Williams, Albert Rhys. Through the Russian revolution. 1921. A 7926

Intensely interesting story of the Soviet revolution from 1917 on, told by a socialist war correspondent whose every atom of sympathy is with the Soviet government.

Wright, Peter E. At the supreme war council. 1921. A 7180

An attempt to prove that Haig and Petain were responsible for the disaster at St. Quentin by assertions which may be right or wrong, but are certainly impressive.

FICTION

Bates, Sylvia Chatfield. The golden answer. 1921. F 20285

A good character sketch of Amos, the poet clerk, and a better one of Christina, the girl he married.

Bojer, Johan. God and woman (Dyrendal). 1921. F 11274

The woman's life is embittered because she is childless, and the estate of Dyrendal goes as a wedding gift to the young man whom she and her husband have adopted, but between whom and them there has been distrust instead of affection. Perhaps the best of Bojer's books yet translated.

Castle, Agnes and Egerton. Pamela Pounce; a tale of tempestuous petticoats. 1921. F 11684

The story of a little milliner in the circle of "the incomparable Bellairs." In the opinion of the London Times, "the union in this maiden of a superfine sense of the modish elegances with a healthy rusticity of speech and soul gives her a quite irresistible piquancy."

Chambers, Robert W. The little red foot. 1921. F 11807

The horrors of the Indian and Tory raids are described with historical accuracy and dramatic intensity. The love story included stands out delightfully before this historic background.—Outlook.

Chekhov, Anton. The horse-stealers, and other stories. 1921. F 11930

Contents: The horse-stealers.—Ward no. 6.—The Petchenyeg.—A dead body.—A happy ending.—The looking-glass.—Old age.—Darkness.—The beggar.—A story without a title.—In trouble.—Frost.—A slander.—Minds in ferment.—Gone astray.—An avenger.—The jeune premier.—A defenceless creature.—An enigmatic nature.—A happy man.—A troublesome visitor.—An actor's end.

Clarke, Isabel C. Tressider's sister. 1921.
F 11989

Andrey Tressider's loyalty to her brother is only surpassed by her love for his enemy, Adam Kemp. The story is a moral one, Catholic in its teachings, and interestingly told with a surprising climax.

Cohen, Octavus Roy. Highly colored. 1921.
F 21305

Contents: Auto-intoxication.—All's swell that ends swell.—The survival of the fittest.—The ultima fool.—Mistuh Macbeth.—Here comes the bride.

Six short episodes in the lives of some Alabama darkies. The characters are highly amusing if somewhat exaggerated.

Corthis, André, pseud of Mme. Andrée Husson Lécuyer. For me alone (Pour moi seule). 1921.
F 24449

An autobiographical novel of a French woman, who with her mother and sister lived in poverty in a small gossipy provincial town in France. Her romantic revolts against the dull monotony of her life and the limitations of her social environment finally end in a mediocre marriage with a moderately prosperous husband.

France, Anatole. Monsieur Bergeret in Paris. 1921.
J 154, 26

A political novel concerning the Dreyfus case, beautifully written and very absorbing.

Grey, Zane. To the last man. 1922.
F 13243

Story of a feud between the cattle men and rustlers, who masquerade as sheepmen. The feud is fought to the last man, who is Jean Isbel, son of the leader of the cattlemen, and who is deeply in love with the daughter of the leader of the sheep men.

Hamsun, Knut. Dreamers. 1921. F 13440

A light comedy of love and pride, the first of Hamsun's stories to have a happy ending. An English edition was published under the title "Moth-wise," which is a more literal translation of the original title and better represents the character of the story.

Hawthorne Julian, ed. Library of the world's best mystery and detective stories; one hundred and one tales of mystery by famous authors of east and west. 1907-1908. 6v.

Hay, Ian, pseud. of John Hay Bieth. The willing horse. 1921.
F 20351

An entertaining, romantic novel of war time days, retaining both the pathos and humor of war while eliminating its horrors.

Hergesheimer, Joseph. Cytherea. 1922.
F 13702

An unusual story from the author, of whom the unusual is always expected. It is a satire on the super-sophisticated society of today, the goddess Cytherea being symbolized to Lee Random by an exquisite doll he bought for his daughter.

Lee, Jennette. The other Susan. 1921.
F 24456

Story with a New England background about Susan who has been married over twenty years to a small spirited man and has known nothing but work. She suddenly finds herself in love with another man and the theme of the book is her solution of the problem.

MacGrath, Harold. The ragged edge. 1922.
F 24846

A story of a lone girl in China who marries a mysterious man whom she has nursed back to health. The mystery is satisfactorily solved in the end.

Russell, John. Where the pavement ends. 1921.
F 17537

Contents: The fourth man.—The lost god.—The passion vine.—The price of the head.—The slanted beam.—The red mark.—East of eastward.—Jet-sam.—The adversary.—Meaning chase yourself.—The wicks of Macassar.—Doubloon gold.—The practicing of Christopher.—Amok.

Some of the most vivid and dramatic stories ever written of the islands of the South Seas. They contain much literary value as well as plot interest.

Richardson, Dorothy M. Pilgrimage. v.6: Deadlock. 1921.
F 17151, 6

The sixth book in the series telling of the mental life of Miriam Henderson, a young dental secretary.

Shore, Viola Brothers. The heritage, and other stories. 1921.
F 18069

Contents: The heritage.—Mary Mary.—Dimi and the double life.—If you want a thing.—A mess of pottage.—We can't afford it.—Matzoths cast upon the waters.—O temporal O mawruss!

Jewish stories combining the humor of Montague Glass with Edna Ferber's pathos. The first one caused considerable discussion when published in the Saturday Evening Post because of its intelligent treatment of the inter-marriage problem.

Sinclair, Bertrand W. The hidden places. 1922. F 18159

The story is laid in the beautiful northwest wilderness and is filled with the spirit of adventure. It has thrilling and surprising incidents with an ending as unexpected as it is satisfactory.

Stern, G. B. The china shop. 1921. F 27534

A character novel brilliantly done, that deals especially with the passion of jealousy. The hero is thwarted in every relation by the step-brother who acts the bull in the china shop of life.

Tarkington, Booth. Harlequin and Columbine. 1921. F 27703

A story of the theater, picturing a temperamental young star in the midst of rehearsing a new play and determined upon changing it to suit his own ideas regardless of the author's protestations. Romance appears in the form of the young ingénue who smooths out the difficulties.

Train, Arthur. The hermit of Turkey Hollow, the story of an alibi; being an exploit of Ephraim Tutt, attorney and counselor at law. 1921. F 27862

A good mystery story about a tramp accused of murder with circumstantial evidence strongly against him. When the trial opens his lawyer has not the slightest means with which to save him, but curiously enough luck turns and the mystery is solved.

Vance, Louis Joseph. Alias the Lone Wolf. 1921. F 18809

Sequel to The Lone Wolf, F 18734; The false faces, F 18789; and Red masquerade, F 18825.

Michael Lanyard having been dropped from the English secret service journeys to France where he becomes involved in the theft of some famous jewels. He recovers them after accompanying the thieves to the United States.

Wallace, Edgar. Jack o' Judgment. 1921. F 18919

A mystery story dealing with a criminal gang and the motive of revenge.

Walpole, Hugh. The young enchanted; a romantic story. 1921. F 18942

Sequel to The green mirror, F 18946, and Peter Westcott, in Thirteen travellers, F 18941.

A lively tale of love and youth in the "strange year 1920," set in London with its idealism and its realism, its artists and its critics, its capitalism and bolshevism.

White, William Patterson. The rider of Golden Bar. 1922. F 19299

A western story with an unusual number of happenings, especially of the exciting and thrilling sort.

Poems.

Van Loon, Hendrik Willem. The story of mankind. 1921. A 2235

The history of the world told in a conversational and graphic way. It is written primarily for children, but a book to be read and enjoyed by old and young. The illustrations are unusual in their originality.

Wade, Mary H. Twin travelers in India. 1920. H 6963

A charming book of travel in India. Will be useful as a reference or story book for children about ten.

Stories

Adams, Katharine. Midsummer; a story for boys and girls. 1921. H 2964

An American boy and girl spend the summer in Sweden with their grandfather who lives in a castle on the seacoast. A mystery, which is finally solved, adds interest to the story. For boys and girls about twelve.

Anthony, Lotta Rowe. The Yellow Quill girl. 1921. H 3009

An out-of-door story built around the Woodcraft League Camp. The manual of the Woodcrafters has furnished most of the material for this book.

Bailey, Margery. The little man with one shoe. This book concerns him, the six tales he told me and the six songs of simple pattern with which I had to bargain for the same. 1921. H 7284

A group of modern fairy tales with short musical accompaniment. The Little Man tells a story for each nail he puts in the shoe.

Brown, Abbie Farwell. Round Robin. 1921. H 7549

A story which tells of the doings of a group of American boys and girls at the summer camp of the Round Robin club. Its aim is to instil a spirit of tolerance and true Americanism.

Brown, Edna A. The silver bear. 1921. H 7554

A pleasing story of two little girls, Lucy and Dora, who lived in the brown house. They find six little silver charms and these later lead to the discovery of Dora's real name. For girls from six to nine.

Chisholm, Louey. The enchanted land; tales told again. 1906. H 7695

Dodge, Louis. Everychild; a story which the old may interpret to the young and which the young may interpret to the old. 1921. H 7864

An allegorical tale of the adventures of Every-child. Rather advanced for very young children.

Dowd, Emma C. When Polly was eighteen. 1921. H 7913

A type of love story for the younger girls.

PHILOSOPHY

Psychology, Ethics

Edman, Irwin. Human traits and their social significance. 1920. L 13885

A careful and comprehensive study of human nature intended as an introduction for freshmen to the civilization of today. The Literary Review says it would be a handy manual "for a man with interests as universal as Leonardo da Vinci."

Ellis, Mrs. Havelock. The new horizon in love and life. 1921. L 14311

A collection of essays relating to woman in public life and more particularly in the home as wife and mother. The style is clear and poetic, and the ideas though rather startling reflect a sensitive, intelligent mind.

Hobhouse, L. T. The rational good. 1921. L 14180

The author conceives of reason not as divorced from feeling but closely intertwined with it and from this point of view he applies the lessons of modern psychology to the principle of harmony in the conduct of life.

King, Basil. The conquest of fear. 1921. L 13968

In a sense this book is a compendium of the traditional Christian thought which supports the author's thesis, supplemented by recent philosophy which can be made to fit the case.—Literary Review.

Spiritism

Culpin, Millais. Spiritualism and the new psychology; an explanation of spiritualist phenomena and beliefs in terms of modern knowledge. 1920. L 13565

The book is brightly written, is flavoured with the spice of satire and contains much criticism that is not only clever but also pertinent and acute.—Nature.

Paton, Lewis Bayles. Spiritism and the cult of the dead in antiquity. 1921. L 13601

Dr. Paton, who is professor of Old Testament exegesis and criticism at Hartford Theological Seminary, has done careful research work in tracing psychic phenomena through ancient customs and religions.

Fortune-Telling

Tea-cup reading and the art of fortune-telling by tea-leaves, by a Highland seer. 1921. L 13469

RELIGION

Hayne, Coc. By-paths to forgotten folks; stories of real life in Baptist home mission fields. 1921. M 11207

Very interesting and appealing snatches of Indian history.

Higginbottom, Sam. The gospel and the plow; or, The old gospel and modern farming in ancient India. 1921. M 11206

A plea for impoverished illiterate India by one who has done much to improve conditions there by teaching the rudiments of agriculture. He proves that the backward nationalities need other help besides missionaries.

McClure, Haven. The contents of the New Testament; an introductory course. 1921. M 6795

Quimby, Phineas Parkhurst. The Quimby manuscripts, showing the discovery of spiritual healing and the origin of Christian science; ed. by Horatio W. Dresser. 1921. L 15091

Shannon, Frederick F. The economic Eden, and other sermons. 1921. M 4960
—The infinite artist, and other sermons. 1921. M 4917

This book of sermons by the minister of Central Church, Chicago, is dedicated to the memory of Dr. Gunsaulus, and the trustees of the church.

Smith, Wade C. "Say, fellows—"; fifty practical talks with boys on life's big issues. 1921. M 9964

These little discussions are to be worked in with Sunday School lessons, and will appeal to boys because of the vernacular in which they are written.

Stevens, James S. The English Bible. 1921. M 6392

"About half of the work . . . is devoted to a direct study of the narratives in order to supply a foundation for the literary study with which the other half is concerned."

Stoddard, Lothrop. The new world of Islam. 1921. M 8113

A book by the author of The rising tide of color (L 16333), dealing with the menace of Mohammedanism. According to the Chicago Evening Post, "it is a veritable gold mine of knowledge."

THE SOCIAL SCIENCES

Hobson, J. A. Problems of a new world. 1921. L 15468

Contents: Collapse of the old order.—The civilian mind.—The tragi-comedy of war-idealism.—The new industrialism.—A new world.

Muir, Ramsay. Liberalism and industry; towards a better social order. 1921. L 16714

"The outcome of discussions carried on by a group of Manchester men, mostly engaged in industry, who were asked by the Manchester Liberal Federation to consider what ought to be the main lines of a liberal industrial policy."

Ryan, John A. Social reconstruction. 1920. L 16715

The general subject of these lectures is the Bishops' program of social reconstruction issued by the National Catholic war council in 1919.

Vanderlip, Frank A. What next in Europe? 1922. L 16716

Contents: The background.—Economic chaos.—Reconstruction.

The author deals with the European countries separately, and feels that the main reason for the upheaval is the distrust each has for the others. He outlines a plan of a United States of Europe gold reserve Bank to repair the currency systems.

Labor

Browne, Waldo R., comp. What's what in the labor movement; a dictionary of labor affairs and labor terminology. 1921.

*R 3245

Feis, Herbert. The settlement of wage disputes. 1921. L 16851

Immigration, Americanization

Breckinridge, S. P. New homes for old. 1921. L 16114

(Americanization studies.)

Emphasizes the importance of making the immigrant home an intrinsic part of our national development, suggesting ways to overcome obstacles and urging a hospitable attitude on the part of the community.

Kawakami, K. K. The real Japanese question. 1921. L 16065

An optimistic book in tone, whose object is to prove that the Japanese are not a menace to the United States. The author feels that the East and the West should follow a sensible course of mutual concession and tolerance.

Kellor, Frances. The federal administration and the alien. 1921. L 16066

This supplement (to Immigration and the future, L 16068) deals primarily with the immediate problems confronting the administration. . . . It deals with the individual alien, the problems he endures as well as those he creates, apart from the regulation of the amount of immigration. It separates the man from the mass.—Foreword.

International Relations

Bau, Mingchien Joshua. The foreign relations of China; a history and a survey. 1921. L 16362

The book is a remarkable one, not only in the wealth of its contents, its scientific arrangement, its crystalline style, its copious bibliography, but also in the temperate and restrained tone of the author.—New York Times.

Martin, Charles E. The policy of the United States as regards intervention. 1921.

L 6589, 93^{II}

(Columbia University studies in history, economics and public law.)

Sergeant, Philip W. Charousek's games of chess, with annotations and a biographical introduction. 1919. K 30378

Work, Milton C. Auction for two or three, with a new code of laws for these games; including an appendix giving improved methods for two-handed rum, two-handed Canfield, and Russian bank. 1921. K 30454

—Par auction, analysis of play. 1921. K 30455

Fishing, Hunting

Griswold, Frank Gray. Some fish and some fishing. 1921. K 30822

A pleasing informal book which will interest even those who have only a slight knowledge of this most fascinating pastime.

Mayer, Charles. Trapping wild animals in Malay jungles. 1921. K 30876

Mr. Mayer has lived in the jungle for many years capturing wild animals for zoological gardens all over the world. His story is more fascinating than any mere tale of adventure.

Miller, Warren H. The sportsman's workshop. 1921. K 30495

Contents: Equipping the shop.—Tent making.—Making pack and trail gear.—Homemade tent stoves and cook kits.—Leather working.—Decoy making.—The gun shop.—Rod repairing and lure making.—Making rod and gun cabinets.

A description of a complete outfit for camping and out-door life of all kinds. It is simply told and well illustrated.

Ripley, Ozark, pseud of John Baptiste de Macklot Thompson. Jist huntin'; tales of the forest, field and stream. 1921. K 30894

A simple well written narrative of hunting and out-door life in short story form, a special treat to the lover of dogs.

LITERATURE

Canby, Henry Seidel, and others. Saturday papers; essays on literature from the Literary Review. 1921. J 7645

Splendid criticisms of modern American writers and an appealing petition on behalf of the "plain person" that American authors refrain from commercializing their art, and make quality, not quantity, their goal.

Hearn, Lafcadio. Books and habits; selected and ed. with an introduction by John Erskine. 1921. J 7655

A collection of lectures on English literature by Hearn to Japanese students. The Chicago Evening Post considers them "unique in that they are the first extended attempt by a western critic to explain the west to the east, a task for which Hearn was ideally fitted."

Johnson, Lionel. Reviews and critical papers. 1921. J 6393

Contents: Kipling: The light that failed; Life's handicap; Barrack-room ballads.—Stevenson and Osbourne: The wrecker.—Davidson: Ballads and songs.—Morris: News from nowhere.—Mrs. Humphry Ward: Marcella.—Meredith: One of our conquerors.—Dobson: Eighteenth century vignettes.—Caussin: The Holy Court.—Cardinal Manning: Pastime papers.—Le Gallienne: The religion of a literary man.

His essays are those of a brilliant scholar and a cultivated Englishman whose "learned good sense" was informed by prolonged contact with the greatest and best in classical and modern literature.—Ernest Boyd in Literary Review.

Turquet-Milnes, G. Some modern French writers; a study in Bergsonism. 1921. J 5367

Contents: The trend of French contemporary thought.—Henri Bergson.—Maurice Barrès.—Paul Bourget.—Anatole France.—Paul Claudel.—Jules Romains.—Jean Moréas.—Charles Péguy.—Emile Clermont.

Critical studies of contemporary French writers which endeavor to show the influence of the philosophy of Bergson on modern French poets and novelists as well as scientific writers.

Authorship

Brewer, R. F. Orthometry; the art of versification and the technicalities of poetry, with a new and complete rhyming dictionary. 1918. J 1759

Library has also the edition of 1901.

Dowst, Robert Saunders. The technique of fiction writing. 1921. J 7238

Pence, Raymond Woodbury. A manual of the mechanics of writing. 1921. J 7186

His manual is based on the usages of the best writers and publishers. For those who are not wholly certain of themselves his book should be of extreme value.—Literary Review.

Poetry

Collections

Alden, Raymond Macdonald, ed. Poems of the English race. 1921. E 14357

An anthology of English and American poetry arranged chronologically under the two heads, narrative, and lyrical and reflective poems. They range in date from Chaucer to the present.

Braithwaite, William Stanley. Anthology of magazine verse for 1921. E 10446, 1921

Deutsch, Babette, and Yarmolinsky, Avraham, ed. and tr. Modern Russian poetry; an anthology. 1921. E 14356

(The European library.)

An interesting anthology from thirty-seven Russian poets beginning with Pushkin. Miss Deutsch is a well known poet and her collaborator is in charge of the Slavonic department in the New York library.

Morris, Joseph, and Adams, St. Clair, comp. It can be done; poems of inspiration. 1921. E 14355

An anthology with a wide appeal. Poems of Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Walt Mason, Kipling, Milton, Edgar A. Guest, Shakespeare and William Rose Benet find their place in this collection of inspirational poetry.

Selver, P., tr. Anthology of modern Slavonic literature in prose and verse. 1919. J 5715

Complete selections of prose and poetry, which are typical of the race. Introduction discusses the language relationships of the groups represented.—Booklist.

Thorp, N. Howard, (Jack Thorp), comp. Songs of the cowboys; with an introduction by Alice Corbin Henderson. 1921. E 14358

Jack Thorp's collection of ballads when first sold in paper back copies had a wide circulation at round-ups and cattle fairs. Mrs. Henderson's sympathetic introduction tells about the authors and their editor.

Poetry by Individual Authors

Aber, Loureine. We, the musk chasers. 1921. E 14442

The reader unfamiliar with this poet's work will be struck by the versatility of the pen that is as happy in daring satire as in exquisite fantasy.—Publisher's announcement.

Beers, Henry A. Poems. 1921. E 14486
(Yale University. Curtis Seaman Read Memorial Publication Fund.)

A book of simple charming verse, quiet and pleasant in tone, mildly humorous in spots, always lyrical and graceful.—Springfield Republic.

Carter, William. The gates of Janus; an epic story of the world war. 1919. E 14524

Davies, William Henry. The captive lion, and other poems. 1921. E 14581

Scarcely a page of his is barren of some indestructible kernel of poetry, some perfect inflection, some bold unobtrusive conceit that is art. . . . This Davies is one of the few contemporary classics whom we can be sure about.—Mark Van Doren in The Nation.

Fort, Paul. Selected poems and ballads of Paul Fort, tr. from the French; with an introduction by Ludwig Lewisohn, and an appreciation by Carl Sandburg. 1921. E 14668

Paul Fort is one of the leading contemporary poets of France, Rolland claiming that he is assuredly a classic.

Fritchey, Alfred James. The blue-dragon ballads. 1922. E 14675

Guest, Edgar A. When day is done. 1921. E 11000

A group of optimistic poems on the order of Riley. As the Bookman says, it is guaranteed to "remove mental dyspepsia, pains in the head and that bitter taste in the mouth."

Long, Haniel. Poems. 1920. E 14823
Lyrics of great delicacy and charm.

Morley, Christopher. Chimneysmoke. 1921. E 14878

A collection of light verse attractively illustrated. The New York Times says: "He shows always facility, a genial temperament, a sense of humor and cleverness in his manipulation of the English language."

Tagore, Rabindranath. The fugitive. 1921. E 5902

A volume of plays and poems, of big thoughts and high ideals. They are full of color and exquisite in the delicate handling of phrases.

Wickham, Anna. The contemplative quarry, and The man with a hammer. 1921. E 15109

When you read a poem of hers you feel, not that you are getting a successful literary product prompted by an emotion and executed according to the best models, but that you are getting the emotion itself almost disturbingly warm and alive, with no veils of literature between you and it.—New Republic.

Widdemer, Margaret. Cross-currents. 1921. E 15110

Margaret Widdemer has written with her peculiar whimsical charm, of the things we call reality. Of sleep, love and laughter. Of such slight things as a "Gown With printed roses up and down, And rosy ribbons made to tie In wide bows like a butterfly," and of such great things as living and dying.—Daily News.

Drama

Macgowan, Kenneth. The theatre of tomorrow. 1921. E 14075

Contents: I. The new stagecraft.—II. The new playhouse.—III. The new play.

Written in the three tenets of research, observation, and speculation. Nothing is likely soon to take its place on reference shelves for appraisal of the past. Anyone who desires sound and not too technical analysis of the present will be compelled to turn to it.—O. M. Saylor in The Bookman.

Nathan, George Jean. The critic and the drama. 1922. E 12664

Contents: Aesthetic jurisprudence.—Drama as an art.—The place of the theatre.—The place of acting.—Dramatic criticism.—Dramatic criticism in America.

A severe critique of criticism. The author believes that the real critic "should be inwardly warm, outwardly cool and judicial. He may be cruel only to be kind."

Beach, Lewis. Four one-act plays: The clod—A guest for dinner—Love among the lions—Brothers. 1921. E 13505

The first play is the best. It is described in the Literary Review as the "study of a dull, visionless, terribly overworked woman who is goaded by a succession of admirably handled incidents into murdering two Confederate soldiers."

Cabell, James Branch. The jewel merchants; a comedy in one act. 1921. E 11896

A dramatization of "Balthazar's daughter," one of the episodes in The certain hour, F 11530.

Howard, Sir Robert. Sir Robert Howard's comedy "The committee"; ed. with introduction and notes, by Caryl Nelson Thurber. 1921. J 4854, 7¹

(University of Illinois studies in language and literature.)

Howard, Sidney. Swords. 1921. E 13831

A poetic drama with its setting in medieval Italy somewhere between the period of the Crusades and the Renaissance.

Ibsen, Henrik. The league of youth; comedy in five acts. 1900. E 12377

—Pillars of society; play in four acts. 1900. E 12378

Millay, Edna St. Vincent. The lamp and the bell; a drama in five acts. 1921. E 14099

Miss Millay has succeeded where so many writers have failed. She has written a Shakespearean play that is fresh and vigorous, with a humor that is her own and lines that are memorable in her own fashion.—Literary Review.

Shakespeare, William. The tempest; edited by Sir A. Quiller-Couch and J. D. Wilson. 1921. E 10332

A new edition of Shakespeare which has been carefully revised, and of which this is the first volume, is now appearing.

—The two gentlemen of Verona; edited by Sir A. Quiller-Couch and J. D. Wilson. 1921. E 10331

Šrámek, Frána. June; a play in one act. 1919. J 5715

In Selver's Anthology of modern Slavonic literature, p. 150-173.

Walker, Stuart. Portmanteau adaptations. 1921. E 12975

Contents: Introduction.—Gammer Gurton's needle.—The birthday of the infanta (founded on Oscar Wilde's story).—Sir David wears a crown.—Nelljumbo.—Appendix: Repertory of the Stuart Walker company.

The first of these splendid plays is the only actual adaptation in the collection. Stewart Walker's works speak for themselves and they are truly enjoyed, as the author intended, by children from seven to seventy.

Zangwill, Israel. The cockpit; romantic drama in three acts. 1921. E 13079

A literary drama in which the theme is Europe as the cockpit of the world, with its peoples constantly set against each other.

TRAVEL AND DESCRIPTION

Bowman, Isaiah. The new world; problems in political geography. 1921. I 11371

All in all, there is no volume in English now available which contains so much information on post war geography.—Review of Reviews.

Dixon, Winifred Hawkrige. Westward hoboes; ups and downs of frontier motoring. 1921. I 11724

In a delightfully gay and humorous style Winifred Dixon describes the remarkable trip through New Mexico and Arizona which she and another Boston girl made in a Cadillac eight.

Forbes, Rosita. The secret of the Sahara: Kufara; with an introduction, by Sir Harry Johnston. 1921. I 8954

An interesting travel book by the second European to reach this distant oasis in the Sahara desert. Her guide was an educated Egyptian with a prominent streak of vanity. Their difficulties were numerous and sometimes very dangerous.

Hamilton, Lord Frederic. Here, there and everywhere. 1921. I 11386

The author has drawn his material at first hand and these reminiscences of his travels are intensely interesting.

O'Neil, Owen Rowe. Adventures in Swaziland; the story of a South African Boer. 1921. I 8946

The author's interest, even as a child, has always been centered in the romantic land of the Swazis. The work contains many exciting incidents and is written in an enthusiastic style.

Slocum, Joshua. Around the world in the sloop Spray; describing Captain Slocum's voyage alone around the world. 1903. I 11387

Abridged edition of Sailing alone around the world, I 9853.

Verrill, A. Hyatt. Panama, past and present. 1921. I 11168

Written by a man who has penetrated unexplored territory in Panama and was the first white man to pass through forbidden districts of savage tribes. Contains less of the history of Panama than most books and more description. It is well illustrated with photographs by the author.

Europe

Bell, Walter George. More about unknown London. 1921. I 10114

Picturesque essays written in the same style as Unknown London (I 10115) and forming a companion volume to the earlier collection.

Casey, Robert J. The land of haunted castles. 1921. I 6619

After a journey through Luxemburg, the author wrote what might be called a travel book of psychic tales. Many of them came from the lips of the peasants, and all have been handed down from generation to generation.

Corning, Frederick Gleason. A student reverie; an album of Saxony days (Freiberg near Dresden). 1920. I 7519

Contents: Freiberg the city.—Freiberg mines.—Freiberg royal mining academy.—Freiberg life.

Harrison, Marguerite E. Marooned in Moscow; the story of an American woman imprisoned in Russia. 1921. I 10528

Mrs. Harrison spent eighteen months in Russia, from February 1920 to the summer of 1921. Her story, a most dramatic and interesting one, gives a vivid picture of present day Russian life and conditions.

Lawrence, D. H. Sea and Sardinia. 1921. I 10448

A remarkable travel book. Enchanting scenic descriptions, and brilliant, satirical and humorous talks on inhabitants. Bookman says, "Color, charm and an amazing array of emotions flood this beautifully illustrated volume."

Williams, Talcott. Turkey, a world problem of to-day. 1921. I 11010

(Lowell lectures, 1920.)

Mr. Williams claims that Turkey's failure is due to misrule from outside.

China

Gamble, Sidney D., and Burgess, John Stewart. Peking; a social survey conducted under the auspices of the Princeton University center in China and the Peking Y. M. C. A. 1921. I 10665

For those who want to get a background of facts upon which to project their surmises about China and its future, it fills an indispensable place. For one who is contemplating anything more than a globe-trotter's visit to China it is invaluable.—Literary Review.

My Chinese marriage, by M. T. F. 1921. I 10662

An American co-ed marries a handsome young Chinese student and returns with him to China where she adopts Oriental ways and dress. She gives a pleasant sympathetic picture of her life, in contrast to the tragic cast of most stories written on the subject of intermarriage.

BIOGRAPHY

Beethoven, Ludwig van. THAYER, ALEXANDER WHEELOCK. The life of Ludwig van Beethoven; edited from the original English manuscript and the German editions of Deiters and Riemann, by H. E. Krehbiel. 1921. C 20810

Bismarck Prince Otto v. The Kaiser vs. Bismarck; suppressed letters by the Kaiser and new chapters from the autobiography of the Iron Chancellor; with a historical introduction by Charles Downer Hazen. 1921. C 17135, 3

Vol. 3 of Bismarck the man and the statesman, C 17135.

Burroughs, John. SHARP, DALLAS LORE. The seer of Slabsides. 1921. C 21070

One of Burroughs' long-time friends is Dallas Lore Sharp. . . he has told of Burroughs as "the seer" and the writer in this slender volume of appreciation. A bulky volume could not have told more about the man and his character—the two things that lovers of Burroughs are seeking.—Chicago Evening Post.

Chambers, Julius. News hunting on three continents. 1921. C 21193

A record of great events, great personalities, great mysteries, crimes and detective work. As interesting as any story of adventure.

Guiney, Louise Imogen. BROWN, ALICE. Louise Imogen Guiney. 1921. C 22238

A well-written biography of an interesting literary personality. A further attraction to the buyer is the fact that each copy contains a signed wood-cut by Timothy Cole.

Hamilton, Alexander. VANDENBERG, ARTHUR HENDRICK. The greatest American, Alexander Hamilton; an historical analysis of his life and works together with a symposium of opinions by distinguished Americans. 1922. C 22283

This book is dedicated to the Hamilton Club of Chicago, which the author believes "has done more than any other American group to perpetuate the memory and doctrines of the greatest American."

Hutten, Ulrich von. JORDAN, DAVID STARR. Ulrich von Hutten, "knight of the order of poets." 1910. C 22540

Melville, Herman. WEAVER, RAYMOND M. Herman Melville, mariner and mystic. 1921. C 23359

With great enthusiasm for his subject, Mr. Weaver has gleaned much interesting material about the man who discovered valuable literary material in the South Seas, long before Maugham, O'Brien or even Conrad.

Metchnikoff, Elie. METCHNIKOFF, OLGA. Life of Elie Metchnikoff, 1845-1916. 1921. C 23344

A narrative of the life and marvelous accomplishments of a great scientist. His discoveries and their development in the face of great opposition mark an epoch in modern science.

Nichols, George. A Salem shipmaster and merchant; the autobiography of George Nichols, with introduction and notes and concluding chapters by his granddaughter. 1921. C 23594

An autobiography rich in incidents of the author's seafaring experiences. We see Salem as it was, and catch a glimpse now and then of the far east.

Nietzsche, Friedrich. Selected letters of Friedrich Nietzsche; ed., with a preface, by Dr. Oscar Levy. 1921. C 23601

Robertson, Sir William. From private to field-marshal. 1921. C 23968

A candid autobiography purporting to be the first to describe the "climbing of a soldier from the bottom to the top of the military ladder" in the British army and including an intimate view of England's part in the war.

Stinnes, Hugo. BRINCKMEYER, HERMANN. Hugo Stinnes. 1921. C 24391

The life and work of the "German Rockefeller." The book gives a good description of the development of the "vertical" trust in Germany, as contrasted with the "horizontal" development of the trust in America.

Tree, Herbert Beerbohm. BEERBOHM, MAX, comp. Herbert Beerbohm Tree; some memories of him and of his art. 1920. C 24590

A collection of affectionate tributes by such literary men as Shaw, Gosse and Parker—friends and admirers of the great actor. That part of the biography which will endear him to the reader is the "fond, trivial record" of "Herbert and I" by his wife.

FICTION

Anthony, Joseph. The gang. 1921. F 10605

It is a story about rivalries of boys in the New York Ghetto, but it is also a careful depiction of Jewish family life by a witty and sympathetic hand.—Burton Rascoe in The Bookman.

Arlen, Michael, pseud. of Dikran Kouyoumdjian. The romantic lady. 1921. F 24304

Contents: The romantic lady.—Fay Richmond.—Consuelo.—The romance of Iris Poole.

A collection of very individual short stories with fascinating character sketches of the modern woman. The episodes are humorous, human and ironical—brilliantly written, and entertaining.

Ashmun, Margaret. Topless towers; a romance of Morningside Heights. 1921. F 10686

The author has depicted in a very clever way the cool aloofness and unfamiliarity which exists among most apartment-house dwellers. Throughout the story there is a great deal of talk on the modern woman, her freedom and her rights.—Chicago Evening Post.

Atherton, Gertrude. Sleeping fires; a novel. 1922. F 10710

A Boston girl is transferred to the San Francisco of the '60s by a husband who does not sympathize with her fondness for books. She meets and loves a congenial young journalist, and the tale becomes sensational when the husband compels him to leave town and both lovers try to drink themselves to death—though the process is stopped in time.

Atkey, Bertram. Winnie O'Wynn and the wolves. 1922. F 10701

Mr. O'Wynn's dying advice to his daughter was to treat all men as wolves and trust no women. She proves to be fully capable of protecting herself, and her experiences in so doing are improbable but amusing.

Berend, Alice. Babette Bomberling's bridegrooms. 1921. F 11114

A little farce translated from the German, in which Mamma Bomberling is doing her best to marry off her flapper daughter "wisely."

Bindloss, Harold. The man from the wilds. 1922. F 11131

A determined young man is made guardian of the estate of a beautiful but wilful English girl. One, you see, is determined and the other wilful. A lot has to happen before the final fadeout and a lot does happen.—Chicago Evening Post.

Bunner, H. C. Short sixes; stories to be read while the candle burns.—The suburban sage; stray notes and comments on his simple life. 1919. F 20784

Burnett, Frances Hodgson. The head of the house of Coombe. 1922. F 20786

An entertaining story of a lonely and pathetic character. The child life of Robin has features resembling both Sara Crewe and Lord Fauntleroy.

Carpenter, Grant. Long sweetening; a romance of the red woods. 1921. F 11667

A poor boy is robbed of his property in the California redwoods by a banker who falls in love with the spot and wants it for a summer home. The boy swears vengeance and the story tells of his long struggle, his final victory, and his love for the daughter of his enemy.

Casserly, Gordon. The elephant god. 1921. F 11692

An exciting story of the jungle by a man who has spent many years of his life as an English officer in India. It is unusual in the fact that, aside from the conventional and wonderful hero, there is an elephant who performs some startling and superhuman feats.

Cervantes, Miguel de. The adventures of Don Quixote; adapted by Edwin Gile Rich. 1921. F 11737

Chester, Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph. The son of Wallingford. 1921. F 11904

Sequel to Get-rich-quick Wallingford, F 11871; Young Wallingford, F 11858; Wallingford in his prime, F 11880.

A cheerful account of the breaking into business of Jimmie, son of Get-rich-quick Wallingford. It is quickly moving, sprightly and up to date in the slang of the day.

Comfort, Will Levington. This man's world. 1921. F 21321

The hero, Tom Steepe, has been a waif on the streets of Chicago but falls in with a soldier deserter who takes him to the Philippines. His adventures are numerous and blood-curdling, but he finally wins the girl and happiness for life.

Coppard, A. E. Adam & Eve & pinch me; tales. 1921. F 21364

Contents: Marching to Zion.—Dusky Ruth.—Weep not my wanton.—Piffingcap.—The king of the world.—Adam & Eve & pinch me.—The princess of kingdom gone.—Communion.—The quiet woman.—The trumpeters.—The angel and the sweep.—Arabesque: the mouse.

Of Mr. Coppard the Nation says "He is that rare thing—an almost quite pure, quite disinterested artist to whom the deep forms of beauty have a mystical finality of value."

Duffus, Robert L. Roads going south. 1921. F 21805

A first novel possessing atmosphere and humor, and dealing with the conflict between the hero's New England heritage and his Southern temperament.

Dunn, J. Allan. The girl of Ghost Mountain. 1921. F 12616

Clashes between the cowboys and the Mexicans make this a true western story of thrills and adventure. The love element is not neglected, for an eastern girl led by a pioneer spirit settles with her maid on Ghost Mountain in the very midst of the turmoil.

Evarts, Hal G. The bald face, and other animal stories. 1921. F 12793

The author is a trapper, ranchman, and lover of out-door life. The Chicago Daily News says: "Evarts has the gift of snappy descriptions; his tales are propelled forward with speed and carry the reader with them."

—The passing of the old West. 1921. F 12790

In a story that pleads for the conservation of natural resources . . . Hal Evarts, trapper, guide, lover of nature, unfolds the great drama in which the beaver, the buffalo, the wild pigeon and the elk have one by one been exterminated by senseless slaughter.—Chicago Evening Post.

—The settling of the sage. 1922. F 12792

A good western story. Old Mr. Warren has willed Three Bar Ranch jointly to his daughter and Cal Harris, son of an old friend. After many experiences, the two young people decide to make it a life partnership.

Fletcher, J. S. Scarhaven Keep. 1922. F 22129

The most perplexing and involved of mystery stories, very well written, and one which holds the reader at feverish attention throughout.

Gartland, Hannah. The house of cards. 1922. F 13137

A mystery story suggested by the Elwell murder case leaving the main incidents unchanged. In the original case the killing of the great bridge-whist expert was never explained but the book offers a surprising solution.

Gerould, Katharine Fullerton. Lost Valley. 1922. F 13198

A beautiful little half-witted girl wanders away from Lost Valley, following an organ grinder's monkey, and the main thread of the story is the search for her by her sister Madge, the most successfully drawn character in the book.

Gorky, Maxim, pseud. of Pyeshkov. Three of them; tr. from the Russian. 1922. F 16709

The story is of two boys and a girl and their lives, or rather existences, in horrible surroundings. A sombre gripping representation of Russian slum life.

Graça Aranha, J. P. Canaan; tr. from the Portuguese. 1920. F 22607

A young German flees to Brazil hoping to find among the simple natives in the new country real human happiness and absence of all hypocrisy. Disillusion comes when he discovers malice and cruelty in the land of his dreams.

Grimshaw, Beatrice. Conn of the coral seas. 1922. F 22625

In this movie thriller with a South Sea Island setting the heroine is taken to a voracious cannibal village. She enters the sacred temple where "skulls, some new, some sienna brown with age were set in rows," but being accustomed to adventures she survives them all.

Hémon, Louis. Maria Chapdelaine; a tale of the Lake St. John country. 1921. F 13672

The idyllic love of Maria and François for one another, the tragedy of his death and her life without him. It is an extremely simple yet powerful tale of French Canadian life.

Holland, Rupert Sargent. The panelled room. 1921. F 14049

A good mystery story. When Maurice Vibert and the blackmailer quarrel in the panelled room, the blackmailer is killed by shots from an unknown source.

Hulit, Leonard. Fishing with a boy; the tale of a rejuvenation. 1921. F 14240

A delightful story of young Matt Buckley whose great knowledge of fish and fishing fills the book with real fishing lore and the life of the great out-of-doors. Matt and his Aunt Mary are real country characters.

Jenkins, Burris. Princess Salome; a tale of the days of camel-bells. 1921. F 14339

A novel of the time of Christ. Stephen and Paul journey to Jerusalem to await the coming of the Messiah. On the way Stephen meets the notorious Salome and falls madly in love with her but they are separated. Salome thereafter becomes a "soulless dancer" and Stephen dies a martyr to the faith.

Jesse, F. Tennyson. The white riband; or, A young female's folly. 1921. F 24084

A tragic story of a little country girl who though poor and untaught has an exquisitely fine nature and through her great passion for beauty stakes her happiness on gaining the possession of a white ribbon. Anita Kepler in the Daily News writes, "As evanescent as a bit of thistledown, as fleeting and as lovely, is this brief tale."

Keable, Robert. Simon called Peter. 1921. F 14456

A war story whose chief character is a self-righteous English clergyman. His gospel of life was turned to chaos by his experiences in France. It is unpleasant reading but strong and realistic.

Kipling, Rudyard. Selected stories from Kipling, ed. by William Lyon Phelps. 1921. F 24262

Contents: The man who would be king.—The drums of the fore and aft.—The phantom rickshaw.—Wee Willie Winkie.—The courting of Dinah Shadd.—The man who was.—Without benefit of clergy.—The incarnation of Krishna Mulvaney.—"Rikki-tikki-tavi."—The brushwood boy.—William the "conqueror."—"They."—An habitation enforced.

A new collection of some of Kipling's best short stories, with an introduction by William Lyon Phelps.

Knibbs, Henry Herbert. Partners of chance. 1921. F 24291

A western tale which gives a picturesque idea of life in the Arizona country.

London, Jack. The call of the wild.—The scarlet plague. 1920. F 24631

Marroquin, Lorenzo. Pax (Peace); tr. by Isaac Goldberg, and W. V. Schierbrand. 1920. F 24964

(Brentano's Hispano-American series.) Full of action, love interest, revolutions and "big business."

Maxwell, W. B. A little more. 1922. F 25025

A charming, cleverly-handled tale based on an old moral. The discontented Welby family would be happy with just a little more. When it suddenly comes, bringing financial indigestion, the result is not joyous, but the war solves their problems leaving them happy at last.

Norris, Charles G. Salt; or, The education of Griffith Adams. 1918. F 25607

The younger brother of Frank Norris here tells the story of an ordinary American who is prevented from a normal character development by the inadequacies of our educational system.

Norton, Brayton. El Diablo. 1921. F 15704

El Diablo is an island off southern California where a gang of smugglers are working to ruin Gregory's fish canning business. Things start moving when they meet the combined resistance of Gregory's son, a veritable live wire, and the intrepid Dickey who takes charge of her father's fishing fleet.

Oppenheim, E. Phillips. The wicked marquis. 1919. F 25761

The story of a character more entertaining than convincing told in a more leisurely tempo than many Oppenheim novels.

Punshon, E. R. Old fighting days. 1921. F 16690

In Napoleonic days a little English waif, the protégé of a former prize fighter, becomes himself a famous pugilist. His fighting victory over the villain leads to the discovery of his noble parentage, he saves Britain from a conspiracy and wins a patrician bride.

Quick, Herbert. Vandemark's folly. 1922. F 16759

A truly American tale of mid-western pioneer days, refreshing, wholesome and absorbing.

Rohmer, Sax, pseud. of Arthur Sarsfield Ward. Fire-Tongue. 1922. F 18993

Heroic hero rescues beautiful heroine from villainous villain. Hero slays villain, after which hero and heroine live happily ever after.

Sackville-West, V., (Mrs. Victoria Nicolson). The dragon in shallow waters. 1922. F 15681

An unpleasant story but a strong one of two brothers, one of whom is blind, the other deaf and dumb, and their reaction to their environment. The theme is an aged Chinese proverb: "The dragon in shallow waters became the butt of shrimps."

Savi, E. W. The devil drives. 1922. F 17670

The love affair of a young soldier in France is the main theme of this tale. There are a few minor romances, one of which takes place in an Indian mission.

Smith, Constance I. Ten hours. 1921. F 18214

Often thrilling and again and again convincing is this story of one extraordinary day in the life of a middle class English woman. There is one stunning dramatic situation.

Tobenkin, Elias. The road. 1922. F 27801

The "road" is the life journey of Hilda, the daughter of Danish immigrants. It takes her from a small Wisconsin town to Russia through strenuous experiences as a waitress, a factory worker, a convert to socialism, a participant in safety campaigns in New York and strikers' relief in Arizona.

Tremaine, Herbert. The tribal god. 1922. F 27871

This is a somewhat unpleasant but well-written story of a family whose tribal god is money, worshipped in the guise of filial affection.

Turgenev, Ivan. The two friends, and other stories. 1921. F 27913

Contents: The two friends.—Father Alexey's story.—Three meetings.—A quiet backwater.

Wiley, Hugh. Jade, and other stories. 1921. F 19486

Contents: Jade.—Joss.—Hop.—Junk.—Tong.—Yellow dawn.—The release.

Short stories of San Francisco's Chinatown. "Junk" is perhaps the most artistic but all are colorful and exotic.

—Lady Luck. 1921. F 19485

Sequel to The Wildcat, F 19484.

A series of humorous episodes in which Wildcat and his mascot goat "Lily" continue their adventures. As a Pullman porter adept in the art of "rolling bones" Wildcat is truly mirth-provoking.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S BOOKS

Miscellaneous

De Mille and C. Barnard.—The seven old ladies of Lavender Town, by H. C. Bunner.

Here in one comfortably portly volume are fourteen plays that not only have incident and action sufficient to render them delightful to young people but literary merit of an order high enough to entitle them to a permanent place in their affections.—Literary Review.

Patch, Edith M. Bird stories. 1921. H 5659

(Little gateways to science.)

Twelve stories that show a happy combination of accurate information with the ability to state things so interestingly that any child will read. Not only the birds but their setting in the country life are delightfully revealed in the stories and the pictures.—Booklist.

Stories

- Bassett, Sara Ware. Steve and the steam engine. 1921. H 7322
(The invention series.)
Steve enjoys some adventures and learns all about the inventing and perfecting of the steam engine from his father who can tell the most interesting stories of railroading in the early days.
- Colum, Padraic. The golden fleece and the heroes who lived before Achilles; illustrations by Willy Pogany. 1921. H 7713
Mr. Colum has woven together all the old Greek tales into one beautiful story without in the least destroying the clarity and simplicity of the original myths. Llewellyn Jones of the Chicago Evening Post considers the book "a work that deserves to become a classic."

(Library of philosophy.)

Contents: German philosophy.—French philosophy.—Anglo-American philosophy.—Italian philosophy.

Psychology

- Eastman, Max. The sense of humor. 1921.
L 13967

A psychological discourse on humor which attempts to explain this mysterious "sense" by analysis of various experiences which cause laughter. Although the primary purpose of the book is scientific it is likewise interesting for its literary quality.

- Porter, Mary F. Applied psychology for nurses. 1921. L 13976

Psychoanalysis, Child Study

- Freud, Sigmund. The history of the psychoanalytic movement. 1917. L 13884
(Nervous and mental disease monograph series.)

- Hug-Hellmuth, H. von. A study of the mental life of the child. 1919. L 13701
(Nervous and mental disease monograph series.)

- Jones, Ernest. Papers on psycho-analysis. 1920. L 13969

Contents: General papers.—Papers on dreams.—Papers on treatment.—Clinical papers.—Papers on education and child-study.

- Kolnai, Aurel. Psychoanalysis and sociology. 1922. L 15315

Contents: Sociological results of psychoanalysis.—Sociological tasks of psychoanalysis.

Discusses the "intimate mutual determinism between the individual and society," the expansion which the original idea of psychoanalysis has undergone, the service it may render to social aims, and its bearing upon the history of civilization.

- O'Shea, M. V. Mental development and education. 1921. L 13707

Attempts to show from the standpoint of present-day biological psychology how the normal individual reacts at different periods in his development to typical situations, physical, intellectual, esthetic, and social.—Booklist.

Mental Hygiene, New Thought

- Hoyt, Ethel Phelps Stokes. Spirit, by E. P. S. H. 1921. L 13246

A little book with a religious turn, on the value of right thinking, faith and prayer for an efficient life. Its diagrams show "vicious circles" engendered by negative thoughts, and its quotations from the Bible offer antidotes.—Booklist.

- Trine, Ralph Waldo. My philosophy and my religion. 1921. L 13264
(The life books.)

Ethics, Conduct of Life

- Babson, Roger W. Enduring investments. 1921. L 14371

Beginning with an economic discussion of the sources, uses, abuses and dangers of wealth and of the different forms of stock and bond investments, Mr. Babson makes his appeal for more enduring investments in the shape of human souls and happiness.—Book Review Digest.

- Sinclair, Upton. The book of life; mind and body. 1921. L 14142

A new Upton Sinclair pleads with some of his old time intolerance for tolerance in others, realizing that "life is a series of compromises among many different needs, many different desires, many different duties."

RELIGION

- Abdul Baha on divine philosophy. 1918.
M 7969

"At the suggestion of Abdul Baha, these notes on divine philosophy, together with a short introductory history, have been comp. and pub. by Isabel Fraser Chamberlain."

- Hutton, John A. The proposal of Jesus. 1921. M 9224

(The Alexander Robertson lectures delivered at the University of Glasgow in 1919.)

- Jastrow, Morris. The Song of Songs, being a collection of love lyrics of ancient Palestine; a new translation based on a revised text, together with the origin, growth and interpretation of the songs. 1921. M 6640

The lyrics are expressions of folk emotion, for they are folk songs or folk poetry. . . . The author takes the reader into his confidence and tries to guide him to an appreciation of this precious little collection of old Palestinian love lyrics.—Literary Review.

- Jones, Sir Henry. A faith that enquires. 1922. M 4741, 1920/21

The Gifford lectures.

- Mackintosh, H. R. The divine initiative. 1921. M 9517

Originally formed the basis of lectures given in London at a School for Missionaries on furlough, and points out "the conspicuous features of the Christian faith."

- Moon, Parker Thomas. The labor problem and the social Catholic movement in France; a study in the history of social politics. 1921. M 5882

A work which unites the most pains-taking scholarship with an easy and lucid style and an imaginative grasp of the spirit of French Catholicism. Within its chosen field it is so complete, accurate and sympathetic as to leave nothing to be desired.—Independent and Weekly Review.

- Peabody, Frederick W. The religio-medical masquerade; a complete exposure of Christian Science. 1915. L 15086

- Shannon, Frederick F. God's faith in man, and other sermons. 1919. M 4915

- Snowden, James H. The coming of the Lord: will it be premillennial? 1919. M 10011

Dr. Snowden contends that the kingdom of God is now being established and will be followed by the final advent of Christ and vigorously opposes the views which would reverse this order.

- Sperry, Willard L. The disciplines of liberty; the faith and conduct of the Christian freeman. 1921. M 10014

The essays are enlightening and refreshing. They charm with their beauty and stimulate with their fervor. . . . A delicious humor, all too rare in books that handle religious subjects, plays about several of the chapters, notably that on "The liberty of the parish minister."—Literary Review.

- Sprague, Franklin M. The creed and need of the new Congregationalism; with an introduction by Theodore Roosevelt. 1920. M 7923

A protest against the liberalizing tendency among leaders of the Congregational denomination.

THE SOCIAL SCIENCES

Statistics

Anglo-South American handbook for 1921, incorporating Mexico and Central America; ed. by W. H. Koebel. 1921. L 15601
Shelved in Civics Dept.

Concise, conveniently arranged information on the resources, geography, commerce, institutions, agriculture, legislation and railways of Latin America.—Booklist.

Economics, Industry

Keynes, John Maynard. A revision of the Treaty; being a sequel to The economic consequences of the peace (L 16626). 1922. L 16718

It is a pleasure to read, lucid and concise in its economic arguments, dashing in its political satires and its judgment of persons. . . . Contains matter that is of real importance.—New Statesman.

Parker, Cornelia Stratton. Working with the working woman. 1922. L 16913

Clad in old clothes of brilliant hues, and well supplied with chewing gum, Mrs. Parker finds work in a candy factory, brass works, laundry, dressmaking shop and a large hotel. She has no ax to grind, but hopes her experiences (which are graphically told) will help labor, capital, and the consumer to a better understanding.

Roe, Frederick William. The social philosophy of Carlyle and Ruskin. 1921. L 16717

Mr. Roe, associate professor of English in the University of Wisconsin, here reveals himself as a student of literature with a social consciousness. To him the pages of Carlyle and Ruskin have meant more than a literary style for study and analysis.—Daily News.

Socialism

Eucken, Rudolf. Socialism; an analysis. 1922. L 17574

It is with socialism as a philosophy of life that the author takes issue. Too much emphasis, he thinks, is placed on the material prosperity of man and not enough hope is held out of a spiritual content without which there can be no inner life and therefore no real happiness.

Finance, Insurance

Gutttag Bros., New York. Gutttag's foreign currency and exchange guide. 1921. L 17292

Robb, Thomas Bruce. The guaranty of bank deposits. 1921. L 17378
(Hart, Schaffner & Marx prize essays.)

Morton, Paul. Life insurance as a business asset. 1921. L 19257

Simpson, John. The law relating to automobile insurance. 1921. L 19265

Political Science

Hamilton, Alexander, Madison, James, and Jay, John. Selections from the Federalist, ed., with an introduction, by John Spencer Bassett. 1921. L 18027

(The modern student's library, American division.)

Illinois. General Assembly. The revised statutes of the state of Illinois, 1921; comprising all the statutory law of a general character in force January 1, 1922. 1922. Doc.

Known as Smith's Illinois revised statutes; authorized edition, 1921.

Reinsch, Paul S. Secret diplomacy, how far can it be eliminated? 1922. L 16363

Mr. Reinsch, a former professor of political economy and an ex-ambassador to China, believes that secret diplomacy can and should be abolished. He considers the question historically, beginning with the eighteenth century.

Rowe, L. S. The federal system of the Argentine Republic. 1921. K 15961, 258
(Carnegie Institution of Washington publication.)

Ogawa, Gotaro. Conscription system in Japan. 1921. K 31098

Written by Y. Takata, under the direction of Gotaro Ogawa.
(Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Division of Economics and history.)

Immigration, Americanization

Speek, Peter A. A stake in the land. 1921. L 17505

(Americanization studies.)

The first part discusses government land policy and private colonization schemes, and the second treats of the various agencies for rural advancement—schools, libraries, community service, and churches for immigrant groups.

Weiss, Feri Felix. The sieve; or, Revelations of the man mill, being the truth about American immigration. 1921. L 16108

An interesting exposition of the work of an immigration officer, enlivened to an absorbing degree by the narration of various experiences falling to the lot of the author personally while he was in the service.—Boston Transcript.

National Characteristics

Couchoud, Paul-Louis. Japanese impressions, with a note on Confucius; with a preface by Anatole France. 1921. I 10638

Contents: Introductory chapter.—The Japanese quality.—The lyric epigrams of Japan.—Japanese patriotism.—Confucius.

M. Couchoud's sympathetic appreciation of the Japanese makes these four charming essays of genuine value.

Dowd, Jerome. Democracy in America. 1921. I 4332

An analysis and criticism of the American people, pointing out the essential elements of strength and weakness in their industrial, domestic, and political life, and in their religion, education, science, art, and philosophy.

Stearns, Harold E., ed. Civilization in the United States; an inquiry by thirty Americans. 1922. I 4331

Contents: The city, by L. Mumford.—Politics, by H. L. Mencken.—Journalism, by J. Macy.—The law, by Z. Chafee.—Education, by R. M. Lovett.—Scholarship and criticism, by J. E. Spingarn.—School and college life, by C. Britten.—The intellectual life, by H. E. Stearns.—Science, by R. H. Lowie.—Philosophy, by H. C. Brown.—The literary life, by V. W. Brooks.—Music, by D. Taylor.—Poetry, by C. Aiken.—Art, by W.

Pach.—The theatre, by G. J. Nathan.—Economic opinion, by W. H. Hamilton.—Radicalism, by G. Soule.—The small town, by L. R. Reid.—History, by H. W. Van Loon.—Sex, by E. C. Parsons.—The family, by K. Anthony.—The alien, by F. C. Howe.—Racial minorities, by G. T. Robinson.—Advertising, by J. T. Smith.—Business, by G. Garrett.—Engineering, by O. S. Beyer.—Nerves, by A. B. Kuttner.—Medicine, anonymous.—Sport and play, by R. W. Lardner.—Humor, by F. M. Colby.—American civilization from the foreign point of view: (1) As an Englishman sees it, by H. L. Stuart; (2) As an Irishman sees it, by E. Boyd; (3) As an Italian sees it, by R. Piccoli.

Law

Pound, Roscoe. The spirit of the common law. 1921. N 5500

(Dartmouth alumni lectureships.)

Traces the "Anglo-American legal tradition which we call the common law" from feudal times to the present, showing how it has gradually triumphed over rival codes. Technical in phrasing but not beyond the comprehension of the average intelligent reader.—Booklist.

—comp. Readings on the history and system of the common law. 1921. N 5502

International Law

Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Division of international law. Pamphlet series. 1921. 7v. L 17958, 36,41-46

36. Documents relating to the program of the first Hague peace conference, laid before the conference by the Netherland government. Translation.

41. Outer Mongolia, treaties and agreements.

42. Shantung, treaties and agreements.

43. Korea, treaties and agreements.

44. Manchuria, treaties and agreements.

45. The Sino-Japanese negotiations of 1915; Japanese and Chinese documents and Chinese official statement.

46. Wehberg, Hans. The limitation of armaments; a collection of the projects proposed for the solution of the problem, preceded by an historical introduction.

Desvernine, Raoul E. Claims against Mexico; a brief study of the international law applicable to claims of citizens of the United States and other countries for losses sustained in Mexico during the revolutions of the last decade. 1921.

LITERATURE

Burlingame, Anne Elizabeth. The battle of the books in its historical setting. 1920. J 7642

Contents. Introduction, by J. H. Robinson.—Introductory chapter: The attitude toward the classical authors during the mediæval period; Italian humanism; Humanism beyond the Alps; Montaigne.—The scientific phase: Francis Bacon; Galileo; Descartes; Thomas Hobbes.—The literary phase: Contrast between the thought environment of the seventeenth century and our own; Sir William Temple's Essay upon ancient and modern learning; William Wotton's Reflections; Richard Bentley's Dissertation; Jonathan Swift's Tale of a tub and The battle of the books; The French point of view as compared with the English; Charles Perrault; Fontenelle.—Conclusion.

An inquiry into the battle between the upholders of the classics as authorities and the modernists in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

Hergesheimer, Joseph. CABELL, JAMES BRANCH. Joseph Hergesheimer, an essay in interpretation. 1921. J 7237

This diagnosis of Mr. Cabell's dearest rival is as generous as it is favorable. The critic is jealous only at the thought that Mr. Hergesheimer may be philandering with that dangerous baggage Popularity thus endangering his true vocation, "to write perfectly of beautiful happenings."—Nation.

Hosic, James Fleming. Empirical studies in school reading with special reference to the evaluation of literary reading books. 1921. L 10284, 114

(Columbia University. Teachers College contributions to education.)

Contents: Callimachus: Hymns; Epigrams; Fragments.—Aratus: Phenomena.—Lycophron: Alexandra.

Menander of Athens. The principal fragments, with an English translation. 1921. L 12269

Greek and English text.

Partial contents: The arbitants.—The girl from Samos.—The girl who gets her hair cut short.—The hero.

Paulinus of Pella. The eucharisticus. 1921. L 12257, 2

In Ausonius, with an English translation, by Hugh G. Evelyn White.

Journalism

Harrington, H. F. Writing for print; a handbook in journalistic composition, with suggestions on the organization and conduct of the high school newspaper. 1922. J 7254

A book for students of journalism by the director of the Medill School of Journalism of Northwestern University. It contains helpful suggestions for teachers of composition, undergraduate newspaper men and young reporters.

Smith, Henry J. "It's the way it's written;" notes on the literary equipment of a newspaper man; the great opportunity in the profession for excellent writing; a few suggestions. 1921. J 7264

(The Chicago Daily News reprints.)

Poetry

Brett-Smith, H. F. B., ed. Peacock's Four ages of poetry, Shelley's Defence of poetry, Browning's Essay on Shelley. 1921. J 7582, 3

(The Percy reprints.)

Shelley's essay was meant to appear in the same magazine in which Peacock's article had appeared, but the magazine did not survive, and Shelley was drowned soon afterward. . . The third is one of the best of Browning's very few prose pieces and has lately been hard to procure.—Chicago Evening Post.

Bruns, Friedrich. Modern thought in the German lyric poets from Goethe to Dehmel. 1921. J 4855, 13

(University of Wisconsin studies in language and literature.)

Allen, Hervey. Wampum and old gold. 1921. E 14454

(Yale series of younger poets.)

Contents: Poems written since 1918.—Poems written in France at the front.

Sincere and spontaneous. Some show beauty of thought and form, and though not startlingly original in idea, there are not a few that are powerful and rich in imagery.—Springfield Republican.

Carspecken, Phil. Fishin' poems, and others. 1921. E 14523

Dickson, Edward R., ed. Poems of the dance, an anthology 1500 B.C.—1920 A.D. with pictorial photographs; introduction by Louis Untermeyer. 1921. E 14360

One hundred and seventy five poems ranging from ancient Hindu and Chinese classics to modern free verse, which breathe the spirit and fire of the dance. Anna Pavlova is the inspiration of one poem written by Murdock Pemberton.

Hall, Hazel. Curtains. 1921. E 14736

Contents: Pt. 1. Curtains.—2. Needlework.—3. Spring from a window.

Poems that describe the varying moods of one who watches in solitude and meditation the flow of life past her window.

Marquis, Don. Poems and portraits. 1922. E 14853

No such vital volume of verse has been published for a long time. There is not a dead spot in it. Every poem is animated by striking thought and deep feeling, expressed in terms of beauty, strength and wit.—Richard Le Gallienne in New York Times.

Rollins, Hyder E., ed., Old English ballads, 1553-1625; chiefly from manuscripts. 1920. E 14359

Seventy-five religious ballads grouped according to subjects: Ballads Relating to Queen Mary; Ballads on Protestant Martyrs; Catholic Ballads; Protestant and Moralizing Ballads; Miscellaneous Ballads.

Untermeyer, Jean Starr. Dreams out of darkness. 1921. E 15083

The lyrics surpass those in Mrs. Untermeyer's first book, "Growing Pains" (E 8769). She has grown. The growth is made evident in the sincere subjectivity of her new work, in the intensity of the new moods.—Bookman.

Ward, Lydia Avery Coonley. The melody of childhood. 1921. E 15100

—The melody of life. 1921. E 15104

—The melody of love. 1921. E 15103

Three volumes by a woman whose house on the Lake Shore was long a center for people interested in the betterment of social conditions. The Tribune calls them "pleasant lines from one who has found life lovely and who has tried to make it so for others."

Wylie, Elinor. Nets to catch the wind. 1921. E 15130

The thirty-three short poems present a world of fancy that is faultless in construction and taste. A world full of fragile beauty.—Chicago Evening Post.

Drama

Charlemagne (The distracted emperor), drame élisabéthain anonyme; édition critique avec introduction et notes, par Franck L. Schoell. 1920. E 11915

Herondas. The mines of Herondas, rendered in English by M. S. Buck. 1921. L 12276

Contents: The go-between.—The whoremonger.—The Schoolmaster.—The women sacrificing to Asclepios.—The jealous woman.—The gossiping friends.—The cobbler.—The dream.

Leonard, Sterling Andrus, ed. The Atlantic book of modern plays. 1921. E 12533

A collection of one-act plays.
Contents: The philosopher of Butterbiggens, by H. Chapin.—Spreading the news, by Lady Gregory.—The beggar and the king, by W. Parkhurst.—Tides, by G. Middleton.—Ile, by E. O'Neill.—Campbell of Kilmhor, by J. A. Ferguson.—The sun, by J. Galsworthy.—The Knave of hearts, by Louise Saunders.—Fame and the poet, by Lord Dunsany.—The captain of the gate, by Beulah M. Dix.—Gettysburg, by P. Mackaye.—Lonesome-like, by H. Brighouse.—Riders to the sea, by J. M. Synge.—The land of heart's desire, by W. B. Yeats.—The riding to Lithend, by G. Bottomley.

Masefield, John. Esther and Berenice; two plays. 1922. E 14076

These verse plays from Racine—the first an adaptation, the second a translation—can both be produced by amateurs, with simple stage setting.

Mencken, H. L. The artist; a drama without words. 1912. E 14077
One-act play.

Rubinstein, Harold F., and Bax, Clifford. Shakespeare; a play in five episodes. 1921. E 14220

An excellent characterization of Shakespeare in which we meet the Dark Lady of his sonnets and Mr. W. H., the successful rival for her love. Christopher Marlowe, Ben Jonson, Richard Burbage, Anne Hathaway, and other well-known people of Elizabethan times appear.

Smith, Evelyn, comp. Form-room plays; senior book, comp. from English literature. 1921. E 14224

(The kings treasuries of literature.)
Contents: The mill on the Floss, from George Eliot's novel.—Quentin Durward, from Scott's novel.—Nicholas Nickleby, from Dickens's novel.—The vicar of Wakefield, from Goldsmith's novel.—Northanger Abbey, from Jane Austen's novel.—Comus, from Milton's masque.—A tragedy rehearsed, from Sheridan's play, The critic.—The alchemist, from the comedy by Ben Jonson.

Thurston, E. Temple. The wandering Jew; a play in four phases. 1921. E 12906

Essays and Miscellanies

Benchley, Robert C. Of all things. 1921. E 1912

Mr. Benchley finds himself staggered by such grave problems of conduct as when to tell the elevator man that you want to get off at the sixteenth floor or how to attract attention at a crowded soda fountain.—Daily News.

Chekhov, Anton. Note-book of Anton Chekhov. 1921. E 15386

These fragmentary jottings reveal the working methods of a great artist. The qualities which distinguish his short stories are evident, the keen scrutiny of life, the sardonic humor, the graphic touch.

Day, Clarence, jr. The crow's nest. 1921. E 2390

Sparkling, original, at times gay, at times serious, these observations about men and human nature, cows, legs, Fabre, Noah, marriage, authors, Snaw, Prometheus, Humpty-Dumpty, and a host of others, are made in an unusually natural, informal style.

Dobson, Austin. Later essays, 1917-1920. 1921. E 2447

Contents: Edwards's 'Canons of criticism'.—An eighteenth-century Hippocrates, William Heberden.—'Hermes' Harris.—The journeys of John Howard.—'The learned Mrs. Carter'.—The Abbé Edgeworth.—A casual causerie.

Seven essays of dainty erudition.—Nation.

Furst, Clyde. The observations of Professor Maturin. 1916. E 3003

Contents: The staff of life.—The Sindbad society.—Foreign travel at home.—Country life.—Food for thought.—Beside the sea.—Christmas.—The sovereign herb.—Men's faces.—Mental hygiene.—The mystery of dress.—Questions at issue.—The fountain of youth.—The contemporary fiction company.—The old doctor.—Breakfasting with Portia.—Summer science.—Measuring the mind.—The Club of the bachelor maids.—A small college.—Old town revisited.—The county fair.

Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von. Goethe's literary essays; a selection in English, arranged by J. E. Spingarn. 1921. E 3112

Contents: The theory of art.—The theory of literature.—On Shakespeare.—On other writers.—Extracts from the Conversations with Eckermann.—Appendix.

Grandgent, C. H. Old and new; sundry papers. 1920. E 3181

Contents: Nor yet the new.—Fashion and the broad a.—The dog's letter.—Numeric reform in Nescioubia.—Is modern language teaching a failure?—The dark ages.—New England pronunciation.—School.

Witty essays on the vicissitudes of the English language by the conservative president of the Simplified Spelling Board.

Hare, Walter Ben. Readings and monologues à la mode. 1921. J 7495

Herbert, A. P. Little rays of moonshine. 1921. E 3498

Contents: Wrong numbers.—The genius of Mr. Bradshaw.—Five inches.—Reading without tears.—On with the dance.—The autobiography.—The white spat.—The art of drawing.—About bathrooms.—A criminal type.—The art of poetry.—The book of Jonah.—The mystery of the apple-pie beds.—The grasshopper.—Little bits of London.—The little Guignols.

A series of short humorous essays each one of which, as the Bookman says, "has enough kicks in it to be pleasantly stimulating."

Lynd, Robert. The pleasures of ignorance. 1921. E 4368

Contents: The pleasures of ignorance.—The hering fleet.—The betting man.—The hum of insects.—Cats.—May.—New year prophecies.—On knowing the difference.—The intellectual side of horse-racing.—Why we hate insects.—Virtue.—June.—On feeling gay.—In the train.—The most curious animal.—The old indifference.—Eggs; an Easter homily.—Enter the spring.—The daredevil barber.—Weeds; an appreciation.—A juror in waiting.—The three-halfpenny bit.—The morals of beans.—On seeing a joke.—Going to the Derby.—This blasted world.

A mixture of keen observations, sprightly humor and an occasional burst into sheer didacticism.

Such quips are food for both entertainment and thought.—Bookman.

Morley, Christopher, comp. Modern essays. 1921. E 15929

Contents: American literature, by J. Macy.—Mary White, by W. A. White.—Niagara Falls, by R. Brooke.—The almost perfect state, by D. Marquis.—"The man o' war's 'er 'usbund," by D. W. Bone.—The market, by W. McFee.—Holy Ireland, by J. Kilmer.—A familiar preface, by J. Conrad.—On drawing, by A. P. Herbert.—O. Henry, by O. W. Firkins.—The mowing of a field, by H. Belloc.—The student life, by W. Osler.—The decline of the drama, by S. Leacock.—America and the English tradition, by H. M. Ayres.—The Russian quarter, by T. Burke.—A word for autumn, by A. A. Milne.—"A clergyman," by M. Beerbohm.—Samuel Butler, by S. P. Sherman.—Bed-books and night-lights, by H. M. Tomlinson.—The precept of peace, by L. I. Guiney.—On lying awake at night, by S. E. White.—A woodland valentine, by M. Storm.—The elements of poetry, by G. Santayana.—Nocturne, by S. Strunsky.—Beer and cider, by G. Saintsbury.—A free man's worship, by B. Russell.—Some historians, by P. Guedalla.—Winter mist, by R. P. Utter.—Trivia, by L. P. Smith.—Beyond life, by J. B. Cabell.—The fish reporter, by R. C. Holliday.—Some nonsense about a dog, by H. E. Dounce.—The fifty-first dragon, by H. Broun.

An anthology in many moods, sparkling, sad, critical, etc. It contains writings from thirty-three of our foremost writers and Mr. Morley has written a few words about each.

Raymond, Clifford, and McCutcheon, John T. Clifford and John's almanack; circulated for the year 1922, but good for any year; containing a great variety of useful and entertaining pieces pertaining to hut happiness. 1921. E 5368

A jolly book full of Clifford's inimitable paragraphs and John's drawings that make you long again for the simple life on the farm and in the small town.—Daily News.

Taylor, Bert Leston. The so-called human race. 1922. E 5895

A sort of scrapbook of the Line which we would all have kept if we hadn't been so busy with our race for so-called fame and fortune, a distillation of the quips, a brew with a mental kick after a formula possessed by B. L. T.—Fanny Butcher in the Chicago Tribune.

Warner, Frances and Gertrude. Life's minor collisions. 1921. E 6259

Contents: Love's minor frictions.—Boston streets.—To horse.—Wheels and how they go round.—The will to boss.—More to it than you'd think.—Trio impetuoso.—The return of A, B, C.—Understanding the healthy.—Carving at table.—The feeling of irritation.

BIOGRAPHY

Collective

Abbott, Lyman. Silhouettes of my contemporaries. 1921. C 19169

Contents: P. T. Barnum.—Edwin Booth.—The Smiley brothers.—John B. Gough.—Alice Freeman Palmer.—John Fiske.—Edward Everett Hale.—John G. Whittier.—General Samuel Chapman Armstrong.—General William Booth.—Daniel Bliss.—Dwight Lyman Moody.—Henry Ward Beecher.—Phillips Brooks.—Booker T. Washington.—Rutherford B. Hayes.—Abraham Lincoln.—Theodore Roosevelt.—Jacob Abbott.

Character sketches by the venerable editor of The Outlook.

Bramhall, Frank J., comp. Genealogy of the Bramhall family, with some account of the history of the family and of Bramhall Hall in East Cheshire, England. 1903. C 20191

Actually published in 1922.

Colvin, Sir Sidney. Memories and notes of persons and places, 1852-1912. 1921. C 19395

Contents: An East-Suffolk boyhood and some poets.—John Ruskin.—Edward Burne-Jones.—Dante Gabriel Rossetti.—Robert Browning.—The priory and George Eliot.—Little Holland House and G. F. Watts.—Robert Louis Stevenson.—Fleeming and Anne Jenkin.—Box Hill and George Meredith.—William Ewart Gladstone.—The British Museum and Sir Charles Newton.—On some aspects of Athens.—Edward John Trelawny.—Victor Hugo.—Léon Gambetta.—At the land's end of France.

Sir Sidney's point of view is delightfully affected by his interest in literature and art. His chapter on Gladstone tells of the statesman's fondness for Greek literature, not of political problems. Ruskin was an intimate friend of his family and Stevenson, whose letters he edited, was a close personal friend.

Lansing, Robert. The big four and others of the Peace conference. 1921. C 19707

Contents: Portraits of the big four.—Impressions of others: Venizelos; Emir Feisul; General Botha; Paderewski.

These sketches of the four leading figures of the Peace Conference undertake to analyze their personalities and compare their characteristics as they appeared to the writer, former Secretary of State and himself a member of the so-called Council of Ten.—Book Review Digest.

Sidebotham, Herbert. Political profiles from British public life. 1921. C 19967

Contents: The press gallery.—Lord Grey.—The Cecilians.—Sir Robert Horne.—Lord Reading.—Mr. Lloyd George.—Lord Curzon.—Mr. Asquith.—Mr. Bonar Law.—Mr. Winston Churchill.—Mr. Chamberlain.—Sir Gordon Hewart.—Lady Astor.—Mr. J. H. Thomas.—Lord Birkenhead.—Lord Derby.—Mr. Brace and others.—Lord Carson.—Captain Elliot.—Postscript: The future of parliamentary government.

The meat of the book lies in the impression one gets of the sort of Englishman who goes in for politics—or statesmanship, if you please. Mr. Sidebotham gives rather vivid pictures of the individuals, analyzes their characters with refreshing and seemingly courageous frankness.—Chicago Evening Post.

Terhune, Albert Payson. Wonder women in history. 1918. C 20050

Enlarged edition of Superwomen, C 20049.

Contents: Marie de Chevreuse.—Ninon de l'Enclos.—Marie de Brinvilliers.—Anna Brudenell.—Betty Castlemaine.—Nell Gwyn.—Adrienne Lecouvreur.—Peg Woffington.—Madame de Pompadour.—Madame du Barry.—"Perdita" Robinson.—Jeanne de Lamotte.—Josephine Beauharnais.—Madame Récamier.—Marguerite Power.—George Sand.—Fanny Elssler.—Lola Montez.—Rachel.

Tilden, Sir William A. Famous chemists, the men and their work. 1921. C 20054

A book that instructs the reader in the most fascinating of sciences without his knowing it, so entertainingly is it written. Not a study but rather a history of chemistry and the men who developed it.

Who's who in the nation's capital. 1922. v. 1. *R 2688

Individual Biography

Chekhov, Anton. GORKY, MAXIM, (pseud.) and others. Reminiscences of Anton Chekhov. 1921. C 21214

Characterizations of Chekhov by three of his friends varying widely with the personality of the writers. "Together they present a very sympathetic picture of a great artist and of a man greater than his art" (Bookman).

Lane, Hugh. GREGORY, Lady. Hugh Lane's life and achievement, with some account of the Dublin galleries. 1921. C 22856

A beautiful portrayal of a life useful and artistic, but one that has been misunderstood by many.

Leschetizky, Theodor. NEWCOMB, ETHEL. Leschetizky as I knew him. 1921. C 22949

An intimate portrait of the greatest of piano teachers by a pupil who later became his assistant. Miss Newcomb makes the reader feel an affection for this gay, versatile, sometimes terrible man.

Lincoln, Abraham. CONWELL, RUSSELL H. Why Lincoln laughed. 1922. C 23015

This book contrives to make the great figure of our national epic even a little more human and homely than it was before, closer, that is, to the understanding of men, and is therefore a welcome addition to Lincoln literature.—Literary Review.

Nietzsche, Friedrich Wilhelm. The Nietzsche-Wagner correspondence; ed. by Elizabeth Foerster-Nietzsche and tr. by Caroline V. Kerr with introduction by H. L. Mencken. 1921. C 23604

(Intimate letters series.)

Soskice, Juliet M. Chapters from childhood; reminiscences of an artist's granddaughter. 1922. C 24310

Not a diary, but a record of impressions charmingly presented from the child point of view by the granddaughter of Ford Madox Brown. It includes an account of one winter when Juliet (aged 8) and her Rossetti cousins published and sold a socialist paper; of her life in her grandfather's home, and in English and German convents.

Swift, Jonathan. Vanessa and her correspondence with Jonathan Swift; ed. with an introduction by A. Martin Freeman. 1921. C 24454

They have finally come to light after a long disappearance and are now published for the first time. The letters are dated from November 18, 1711 to August 7, 1722.

Vail, Theodore N. PAINE, ALBERT BIGELOW. In one man's life; being chapters from the personal and business career of Theodore N. Vail. 1921. C 24645

An interesting biography of the man who "made neighbors of one hundred million people," and incidentally a complete and authoritative history of the telephone.

HISTORY

Croce, Benedetto. History, its theory and practice. 1921. A 2367

(The European library.)

Traces the development of the philosophical aspects of history from the Greco-Roman period to the present. Rather for the student of history and philosophy than for the general reader.—Booklist.

Contents: Finland.—Estonia.—Latvia.—Lithuania.

A concise work in which the results and effects of the war on these Baltic republics have been carefully traced and explained.

Smith, Preserved. The age of the Reformation. 1920.

A 5972

(American historical series.)

Packed with concrete facts drawn from a great variety of sources well arranged, presented in a style always clear, that never lags, that is often brilliant, the work should be as popular as a thoroughly scholarly and judicious book on the Reformation could be.—New Republic.

Snyder, Alice Ziska, and Snyder, Milton Valentine. Paris days and London nights. 1921.

A 7187

Letters written during 1918 between an American newspaper man in London, and his wife in Paris, giving an intimate view of life in Paris and London, during the stress of war days.—Booklist.

Vopicka, Charles J. Secrets of the Balkans; seven years of a diplomatist's life in the storm centre of Europe. 1921.

A 7189

Mr. Vopicka was United States minister in Rumania, Serbia, and Bulgaria throughout the entire war, and for part of that time protected the interests of as many as eight nations at once.

Young, Filson. With Beatty in the North Sea. 1921.

A 7185

The intelligence officer on Admiral Beatty's flagship gives vivid glimpses of life on a British cruiser during the German raids on the coast of England. He censures British naval policy and the Admiralty Board severely but heartily commends the officers and men of the squadron.

FICTION

Beer, Thomas. The fair rewards. 1922.

F 20338

A theater manager and owner is divorced from his wife, a variety actress, much older than himself. He adopts an orphaned niece and nephew. The boy turns out well, the girl badly, and to protect her name against a threat of slander, he opens his own theater with an inferior play and inferior actors, which is the "fair reward of his great love."

Bennett, Arnold. Mr. Prohack. 1922.

F 20383

Mr. Prohack unexpectedly inherits 100,000 pounds and with the help of his affectionate family learns how to make an occupation of idleness. Written with the deliciously subtle humor of Denry, the audacious (F 11037).

Beresford, J. D. The prisoners of Hartling. 1922.

F 20406

The chronicle of an English family group held veritable prisoners at Hartling by old Garvice Kenyon, the head of the house, whose fortune they hope to inherit. The New York Times says "the novel shows an artistry, a restraint, and sense of values which are exceptional."

Bernstein, Herman. In the gates of Israel; stories of the Jews. 1902. F 20410

Contents: Soreh Rivke's vigil.—The messenger of the community.—The awakening.—Alone.—The sinners.—The straight hunchback.—The marriage-broker.—The artist.—A jealousy cure.—The disarmed reformer.—A Ghetto romance.

Binns, Ottwell. The lady of North Star. 1922. F 20483

A thrilling story of love and peril in the land of the Northwest Mounted Police. It is easy to read, full of adventure, and very interesting.

Björkman, Edwin. The soul of a child. 1922. F 11198

Every outside and inside force that contributes to the growth of the child from infancy to the age of fifteen is given in detail and with such simplicity, understanding and power that the reader feels the author's mastery of his subject.

Blackwood, Algernon, and Wilson, Wilfred. The wolves of God, and other fey stories. 1921. F 20525

Contents: The wolves of God.—Chinese magic.—Running Wolf.—First hate.—The tarn of sacrifice.—The valley of the beasts.—The call.—Egyptian sorcery.—The decoy.—The man who found out.—The empty sleeve.—Wireless confusion.—Confession.—The lane that ran east and west.—"Vengeance is mine."

Stories in which the natural frequently merges into the supernatural, and so simply that the extraordinary results seem inevitable, stories which need a prose poet, such a prose poet as Mr. Blackwood himself, to describe them adequately.—New York Times.

Blasco Ibáñez, Vicente. The torrent (Entre naranjos). 1921. F 11239

Rafael, a political leader of Alcira who is at heart a romantic dreamer, is passionately in love with a beautiful, brilliant, sophisticated prima donna. Sunny Spain is the significant and colorful background for many tense torrential moments.

Bruun, Laurids. Van Zanten's happy days; a love story from Pelli Island. 1922. F 20754

The paper jacket of the London edition calls it, "a charming love story of the South Sea Islands," but it is more than that, for it is highly successful in picturing the fascination of native life before missionaries, traders, and writers made all the native races of faraway lands self-conscious.—Literary Review.

Byng, Lucy, tr. Roumanian stories. 1921. F 20822

Contents: The fairy of the lake, by Sadoveanu.—The Easter torch; At Manjoala's inn, by Caragiale.—Alexandru Lapushneanu, 1564-1569, by Negruzzi.—Zidra; Gardana; The dead pool, by Beza.—Old Nichifor, the impostor, by Creanga.—Cozma Racoare; The wanderers, by Sadoveanu.—The fledge-ling, by Bratescu-Voinesti.—Popa Tanda, by Slavici.—Out in the world, by Popovici-Banatzeanu.—The bird of ill omen, by Bratescu-Voinesti.—Iri-nel, by Delavrancea.

These short stories by some of the best writers of Rumania deal mainly with peasant life. Some are sketches of moods, touched lightly and with delicate tenderness. The Boston Transcript thinks that "the work of Beza possesses a mystical touch, a thrill of fatalism and horror combined, which few writers can achieve."

Cabell, James Branch. The cords of vanity; a comedy of shirking. 1920. F 11533

The story of the gradual degeneration of a Virginian whose rule of life is never to do anything disagreeable. The book is consistent throughout and the style exquisite. The theme is not pleasant but it is adequately treated.

Cohen, Octavus Roy. Midnight. 1922. F 21306

In spite of the complete absence of style and character portrayal, Mr. Cohen has satisfied his public—he has written a book with a mystery that is unsolvable until the last chapter.—New York Times.

Cooper, Courtney Ryley. The white desert. 1922. F 21350

A picturesque tale of the continental divide, and the desert of snow. Mr. Cooper knows this sinister country very well and writes of it with considerable power.—Chicago Evening Post.

Cooper, Henry St. John. The garden of memories. 1921. F 21353

A modern love story with background and setting of an old English garden which is haunted by memories and loves of long ago.

De la Mare, Walter. Memoirs of a midget. 1922. F 21531

The memoirs of a tiny little woman, the record, especially, of one year of her life when, with protecting father and mother both dead, she faces regular sized life alone, and finds it—what every spiritual changeling knows it is. There is a mystery about the Midget, a mental mysticism which leaves one with a sense of having looked into the heart of a fairy.—Chicago Tribune.

De la Roche, Mazo. Explorers of the dawn; with a foreword by Christopher Morley. 1922. F 21541

A delightful story about three healthy, active boys left in the care of a governess who was "the spirit incarnate of law and order." The humorous incidents are told by 8-year-old John—Angel is 9 and Seraph 5.—In the spirit of the book lies its charm for both young and old.

Ewart, Wilfrid. Way of revelation; a novel of five years. 1921. F 12796

An English novel in which the interest centers around four young people and the effect of the war on their lives.

Fitzgerald, F. Scott. The beautiful and damned. 1922. F 22105

This original and curious book depicts the married life of two charming idlers, Anthony Patch and beautiful Gloria Gilbert. They indulge in their passion for "living the moment," and alcohol becomes the dominant note. Through the breaking of a will they secure thirty millions and leave for Europe.

Fleuron, Svend. Kittens: a family chronicle; foreword by Carl Van Vechten. 1922. F 22135

An enterprising and resourceful cat mother withdraws her kittens to a remote field and brings them up without human aid or molestation. Each of the six kittens has a distinct personality, and when Grey Puss sees each one filling a place in society she returns to the old home.

Gibbs, Philip. Beauty and Nick; a novel of the stage and the home. 1921. F 22412

A story with good character delineation, showing the strong influence of an idolized and idealized mother upon a fine sensitive young man.

Goldberg, Isaac, ed. and tr. Brazilian tales. 1921. F 22496

Contents: The attendant's confession, by J. M. Machado de Assis.—The fortune-teller, by J. M. Machado de Assis.—Life, by J. M. Machado de Assis.—The vengeance of Felix, by J. Medeiros e Albuquerque.—The pigeons, by C. Netto.—Aunt Zeze's tears, by Carmen Dolores.

Gowing, Sidney. The joy of living. 1922. F 22539

Aimee, the daughter of an arch-deacon is about to be sent away to a maiden aunt, at which she rebels and substitutes her cousin. She has a number of thrilling escapades with an American motorcyclist. It is clean, amusing, and improbable.

Graham, R. B. Cunninghame. Scottish stories. 1914. F 22611

Contents: The colonel.—Aunt Eleanor.—My uncle.—The grey kirk.—At Dalmary.—A retainer.—Beattock for Moffat.—Fate.—Ha til mi tuliadh.—Miss Christian Jean.—A princess.—A brow day.—Caistral-na-Sithan.—M'Kechnie v. Scaramanga.—Pollybaglan.—A convert.

Gregory, Jackson. The everlasting whisper; a tale of the California wilderness. 1922. F 13222

The everlasting whisper of the wind in the pine trees, casts its magic spell over a beautiful eastern girl and a big, fine man of the west, drawing them together, leading them on to seek for gold in the very heart of the wilderness where they find the most precious of all treasures, a great and enduring love.

Gunnarsson, Gunnar. Guest the One-eyed. 1922. F 22657

Contents: Örmarr Örylgsson.—The Danish lady at Hof.—Guest the One-eyed.—The young eagle.

A beautiful tale of peasant life in Iceland, giving also a very vivid picture of the landscape. The story centers about three generations of the Borg family, of which two brothers (one, Guest, the one-eyed) are the outstanding characters.

Hall, Jarvis. Through Mocking Bird Gap. 1921. F 13449

This is a new and pleasing handling of Mexican border life, full of swift action and unexpectedness, told with an interesting straightforwardness of style.—Literary Review.

Hendryx, James B. Snowdrift; a story of the land of the strong cold. 1922. F 13661

A story of a search for gold in the great Northwest, in which a fortune is made and lost but a great love won.

O. Henry memorial award; prize stories of 1921. F 18283

Contents: The heart of Little Shikara, by E. Marshall.—The man who cursed the lilies, by C. T. Jackson.—The urge, by M. Allen.—Mummery, by T. Beer.—The victim of his vision, by G. Chittenden.—Martin Gerrity gets even, by C. R. Cooper and L. F. Creagan.—Stranger things, by M. Cram.—Comet, by S. A. Derieux.—Fifty-two weeks for Florette, by E. A. Heermann.—Wild earth, by S. Kerr.—The tribute, by H. A. Kniffin.—The get-away, by O. F. Lewis.—"Aurore," by E. W. Mumford.—Mr. Downey sits down, by L. H. Robbins.—The marriage in Kairwan, by W. D. Steele.—Grit, by T. Tupper.

Hervey, Harry. Caravans by night; a romance of India. 1922. F 13723

A colorful tale, full of mystery, intrigue and romance, which centers around the theft of jewels. The hero, a young American detective, has many an exciting chase over India in pursuit of the thief. The recovery of the jewels and the culmination of a very pretty love story make a delightful ending.

Hine, Muriel, (Mrs. Sidney Coxon). Torquill's success. 1922. F 21390

An excellent character study of a struggling English novelist who is brilliant, but a thorough egotist. He ultimately finds the road to real success by "putting behind him the greed for fame and writing only for the love of his work."

Hurst, Fannie. The vertical city. 1922. F 23284

Contents: She walks in beauty.—Back pay.—The vertical city.—The smudge.—Guilty.—Roulette. The setting of these short stories is New York, the vertical city of slim sky scrapers, "that shoot upward with the rush of a Roman candle." The stories are well done, interesting but somewhat depressing as each one has its tragedy.

Huxley, Aldous. Crome yellow. 1922. F 23308

A novel that is not a novel, by a youthful scion of the Huxley and Arnold families. Literature, astrology, cubism, Victorian artificiality, physical vs. intellectual vigor, birth control, relativity, and psychoanalysis are touched upon with subtle irony and delicacy.

Jewell, Edward Alden. The charmed circle; a comedy. 1921. F 24089

The charmed circle surrounds Kenneth, an American boy who has been expelled from numerous schools in the U. S. and now lives in Paris with his guardian. The buoyancy and whimsical humor of the characters is refreshing. "They are alive to the point of giddiness" says the Literary Review.

Johnston, Mary. Silver cross. 1922. F 14412

A historical romance of sixteenth-century England. The New York Times compares it to a "rich and glowing tapestry. . . on which is pictured in colors, sometimes, subdued, sometimes brilliant, the life of the time."

Kaye-Smith, Sheila. Joanna Godden. 1922. F 24141

The story of a remarkably dominating personality impelled by primitive instincts, but influenced also by the traditions of her family and class—the prosperous farmer class of provincial England. Excellent characterization throughout with appropriate subordination of minor characters.

Levison, Eric. Hidden eyes. 1920. F 24517

An exciting detective story in which the mystery is solved by a doctor who is fond of experimenting in auto-suggestion and psychoanalysis.

McCutcheon, George Barr. Yollop. 1922. F 24825

A satirical little book on the modern hold-up man and the kind philanthropist. The New York Times says, "His novelette as a whole is entertaining, it has frequent flashes of wit, and its hits at the faults and foibles of our system of penology are well aimed."

Mackenzie, Compton. Rich relatives. 1921. F 15229

"Rich relatives" is even more amusing than "Poor relations" (F 14940) was. It is the story of a young girl left alone by the death of her father, who is handed about among her rich relatives—a simple enough plot, but one from which Mr. Mackenzie extracts an essence of fun.—Chicago Tribune.

McNeile, Cyril, (Sapper). The man in ratcatcher, and other stories. 1921. F 24901

Contents: The man in ratcatcher.—"An arrow at a venture."—The house by the headland.—The man who would not play cards.—A question of personality.—The unbroken line.—The real test.—“Good hunting, old chap.”—The man with his hand in his pocket.—A matter of routine.—A payment on account.—The poser.

Marshall, Archibald. Big Peter. 1922. F 24974

The hero, a young man who has grown up in Australia in the bush, suddenly finds to his astonishment that he is the rightful heir to a large estate in England. There follow complications and surprises, in the course of which Peter discovers the girl of his dreams and finally comes into his own.

Marshall, Edison. Shepherds of the wild. 1922. F 24979

This is a story of life in the open, of wild animals, and of adventure. A young eastern society man goes west to try some big game hunting. The development of his character and his love for a western girl form the human interest of the story.

Milne, A. A. Mr. Pim. 1922. F 15385
A novelized form of the author's play, Mr. Pim passes by.

Mitchell, Ruth Comfort. Jane journeys on. 1922. F 15407

Jane journeys out of a quaint New England village into the whirlpool of New York and on to the career of a successful playwright. In Chicago, Maine and Mexico she has some lively adventures but at length returns to New York and the man she loves.

Nicolson, Harold. Sweet waters. 1922. F 15683

A story of the love-life of a young girl in the Orient during the Balkan wars. It combines the impressionistic method of characterization with excellent descriptions. To quote the New York Times, “It is a very curious book but it is well done.”

Norris, Kathleen. Lucretia Lombard. 1922. F 25612

A triangle theme involving Stephen Winship, district attorney, and two lovely women. Mimi, the younger of the two, is the sweet light-hearted girl to whom he is engaged. Dignified Lucretia Lombard is the other woman.

Oppenheim, E. Phillips. The great Prince Shan. 1922. F 25762

The scene is laid in England in 1934, and concerns the breaking up of a plot against England, whereby a secret treaty was to be signed by Germany, China and Russia.

Owen, John. The cotton broker. 1921. F 25828

“Prosperity Crossford,” wins his success by a ruthless disregard of the rights of others. The time comes when he must pay the price of his intolerance. The New York Times says, “There is some excellent psychological analysis, often a clear understanding and delineation of character and motive.”

Pryde, Anthony, and Weekes, R. K. The purple pearl. 1922. F 16657

The purple pearl, a gem of great value, has been lost for three generations, and has been the occasion of a bitter feud between three branches of a noble family. When the three branches dwindle to two remarkably attractive young men and two adorable girls, there are reasons for a romantic end to the family quarrel.

Robinson, Edwin Meade. Enter Jerry. 1921. F 17382

An intimate detailed story of the life of an Indiana schoolboy, told by the boy himself, from his earliest recollections until at seventeen he is ready to enter college. Delightfully written and often amusing, a very successful first novel.

Sangster, Margaret E. The island of faith. 1921. F 17618

A poignant tale of New York's tenement district, an island of hundreds of poor, written by the granddaughter of Margaret Sangster with the same sweet sincerity and faith which characterized the work of that celebrated writer.

Scrymsour, Ella. The perfect world; a romance of strange people and strange places. 1922. F 17875

Highly imaginative and somewhat imitative of Rider Haggard.

Sears, Clara Endicott. The romance of Fiddler's green. 1922. F 17883

The story is told simply, but with power and distinction of style, and truthfully depicts one of those strangely quaint romantic episodes, touched with superstition and mysticism, such as sometimes happened on New England farms two or three generations ago.

Shanks, Edward. The people of the ruins; a story of the English revolution and after. 1920. F 17954

The revolution breaks out in 1649 and Jeremy Tuft is shocked by a bomb, from which, one hundred and fifty years after, he awakens into a ruined and uncivilized world. The ruler desires to undertake reconstruction and Jeremy Tuft is pressed into service. During the ensuing war disasters all the main characters are destroyed.

Sinclair, Bertrand W. Poor Man's Rock. 1920. F 18160

The interest of the story lies in the description of the salmon fisheries of British Columbia and a struggle against big interests. The strong character is a returned soldier who carries on a grudge of his father. The love interest is slight.

Sinclair, May. Life and death of Harriett Frean. 1922. F 18164

In content and significance it is a long novel, although in the number of words, it is very short. It contains more feeling, thought and utterance than may be found in many another novel of four or five times its length, and the richness and fullness of humanity pervades every page.—E. F. Edgett in Boston Transcript.

Terhune, Albert Payson. Black gold. 1922. F 27744

In a very frank preface Mr. Terhune declares that his new mystery romance is just “a yarn with lots of action.” Its hero is a hero. Its villain is a villain. The heroine is just a heroine; not a human.” But, he adds, “it moves.”

—His dog. 1922. F 27745

Story of a lonely young farmer who finds a broken-legged collie, takes it home and cares for it. A mutual devotion springs up between the two and they become inseparable companions. A slender love story, brought to a happy conclusion by a heroic act of the dog, adds interest.

Tozzi, Federigo. Three crosses. 1921. F 27847

The story of three brothers who have a bookshop but seem unable to make a success of it. One becomes a forger and is successful for a time but the demoralizing effect upon the three is deadly. Powerfully drawn by a master hand.

Young, Francis Brett. The black diamond. 1921. F 19940

The story opens with the leading character a boy of fourteen and takes him through the period of adolescence to manhood. The novel is very strikingly individual, firm of outline, rich in description and characterization—"one of the very best novels of the past year" in the opinion of the New York Times.

Books for Vacation

TO undertake the compilation of lists of Vacation Books to meet the needs of a great variety of people is neither an easy nor a very useful task. Any book may be a vacation book if it gets into the hands of the right person, and the librarian is far better employed in making that happy conjunction possible than in trying to compile book lists and reading courses designed to fit all sorts and conditions of men. We should much rather prescribe for individual cases than deal in patent medicines and we believe that we are reasonably well equipped to do this.

To begin with, there are any number of printed catalogs, lists and books about books which are useful in stimulating appetites or establishing reactions. Such are, for example, the delightful series called: Viewpoints in Biography, Viewpoints in Travel, and Viewpoints in Essays, all to be had at the Information Desk and all presenting a wide variety of choice in these fascinating fields. Our own recent catalogs, the Books of 1916-20 and its continuations, are especially rich in modern poetry and drama, to say nothing of all the other subjects covered. And there are plenty of other bibliographical aids to facilitate our efforts to serve patrons with the right books for all occasions and for all tastes. Behind all these is the vast storehouse of the books themselves, each waiting its turn to serve, and to be served to, exactly the reader best fitted to use it as a Vacation Book and to read it "for fun."

Let us prescribe for you.

VACATION loans are made on and after June first to any registered card-holder. As many as ten books may be taken out at one time, to be returned on or before October first. Five of the ten may be fiction, but not more than two seven-day books; the rest may be drawn at will from any or all classes of literature, except the most recent books, or all ten may be non-fiction if preferred.

Vacation loans are made to juvenile borrowers upon the written request of parent or guardian.

The loan must be made in one transaction either at the Central Library or at a branch. The books will be issued at one time for the whole vacation period and may be returned in installments. The borrower's regular library card must be surrendered when the vacation loan is made, and will be returned to him when all obligations have been canceled.

Borrowers may arrange to have their vacation books shipped out of town to a summer address by leaving the amount of postage plus a fee to cover wrapping and shipping, at the rate of three cents per volume or twenty-five cents for ten. All shipping, both ways, will be at the borrower's risk.

Borrowers may obtain help in making their selections by inquiring at any Branch or at the Information Desk of the Central Library.

When books urgently desired for vacation use are not available on the day when the borrower calls, arrangements may be made to have them sent later by leaving a deposit to cover postage and shipping charges. Any balance of such deposit remaining at the end of the vacation period will be refunded.

Parcel-Post Cards

We would call attention, also, to the parcel-post card issued by the Library. This enables the borrower to pay for a dollar's worth of postage at a time, so that he may receive and send back books by mail when out of the city. This arrangement, however, covers only the regular loan period of two weeks (with the privilege of renewal for two more weeks) and does not have reference to vacation loans.

Books Added to the Library

Books marked * do not circulate. Those with the letter P are in the Art Room; other collections are shelved in the Civics Department, Music Room and Thomas Hughes Room and are marked accordingly. *Ser. denotes serials which do not circulate.

3. Modern psychology.

Brill, A. A. Fundamental conceptions of psychoanalysis. 1921. L 13965
Addressed to the intelligent layman who is seeking some knowledge of the ideas which have revolutionized modern psychology. It develops the Freudian theories in regard to dreams, mythology, and fairy tales.

Dewey, John. Human nature and conduct; an introduction to social psychology. 1922. L 13964

An emphatic protest against subjective psychology. There are chapters on war, custom, education, freedom, the psychology of thinking—all carrying out the principal theme, the interaction of human nature and environment.

Russell, Bertrand. The analysis of mind. 1921. L 13951

(Library of philosophy.)

Russell deals with his problem in the light of some works of William James and his American disciples, but he handles the problem afresh in a way that is quite his own, bringing to the task a native and acquired equipment—logical, mathematical, philosophical.—Literary Review.

Varendonck, J. The psychology of day-dreams, with an introduction by Prof. Dr. S. Freud. 1921. L 13986

A genuine well-documented first-hand study of an important psychological phenomenon . . . Dr. Varendonck's thorough and ingenious treatment of his material will be found chiefly interesting for the further problems to which it leads.—Times (London.).

Woodworth, Robert S. Psychology; a study of mental life. 1921. L 13960

A well written elementary treatment in textbook form. It is the result of criticisms of students and teachers of Columbia University where a preliminary edition in mimeographed sheets was in use for two years.

(Lyman Beecher lectures.)

THE SOCIAL SCIENCES

- Rathenau, Walther. In days to come. 1921. L 15345

Rathenau is in revolt against the age of which he is a typical product, and this lends his philosophy a peculiar significance. He calls it the age of "mechanization" . . . His charge against this mechanization is that it is wholly materialistic and anti-spiritual.—Times (London).

Economics

Economic History and Conditions

- Carver, Thomas Nixon. Principles of national economy. 1921. L 16719

The factors of national economy, the economics of the productive industries and of exchange, the problems of distribution and consumption, public finance, and reformistic schemes are subjected to searching inquiry.—Literary Review.

- Harris, Winthrop & Co. A composite picture of business America as seen through the eyes of 4,310 men of affairs. 1920. L 16786

Labor

Askwith, Lord. Industrial problems and disputes. 1921. L 16788

A statement of facts concerning labor problems in England and Ireland presented chronologically. Lord Askwith comments on conditions and attempts to present solutions.

Douglas, Paul H. American apprenticeship and industrial education. 1921. L 6589, 95¹¹

(Columbia University studies in history, economics and public law.)

The book is exceptionally well written, and, although historical and in many places statistical, it is very readable.—School Review.

Vorse, Mary Heaton. Men and steel. 1920. L 17232

Gradually the things of steel take form before the eyes, then the people of steel, then the revolt of the people against the things . . . It is a beautiful and a terrible book, because like a true work of art it embodies the elemental beauty and terror of life.—Nation.

Bolshevism

Trotsky, L., pseud. The defence of terrorism (Terrorism and communism); a reply to Karl Kautsky. 1921. L 17636

Finance

Buck, Arthur Eugene. Budget making; a handbook on the forms and procedure of budget making, with special reference to states. 1921. L 17710

(Handbooks in administration.)

It is not the purpose of this handbook to discuss the philosophy and theory of the budget, but to present model budget forms and to outline the procedure of budget making.

Huebner, S. S. The stock market. 1922. L 17478

A comprehensive, non-technical treatment of the services of the organized stock market both to the investor and to business enterprise, and of the principles and practices underlying its operation.—Book Review Digest.

Kniffin, William H. American banking practice; a treatise on the practical operation of a bank, intended for students, bank employees and others who would know of the conduct of a bank under recognized American practice, with which is combined the negotiable instruments law, uniform in forty-six states. 1921. L 17380

Lagerquist, Walter Edwards. Investment analysis; fundamentals in the analysis of investment securities. 1922. L 17477

Contents: General fundamentals and their application in the analysis of investment securities.—Corporation bonds.—Bonds secured by land or real estate.—Civil obligations.

Throughout this work Professor Lagerquist, who occupies the chair of finance in Northwestern University, strives to make his subject understandable to the average beginner and at the same time . . . give readers something more than a superficial knowledge of the subject.—Literary Review.

Westerfield, Ray B. Banking principles and practice. 1921. 5v. L 17379

- v.1. Elements of money, credit, and banking.
2. The banking system of the United States.
3. Domestic banking; cash and deposit operations.
4. Domestic banking; earning assets.
5. The foreign division.

A work for bankers, students of banking, and business men. It covers completely the present United States banking system, the theory on which it is based, and the principles which underlie banking practice. These principles are traced through every department of a representative bank.

Insurance, Pensions

Riegel, Robert, and Loman, H. J. Insurance, principles and practices. 1921. L 19261

Gives clear, comprehensive information on all kinds of insurance. It will be a great aid to the business man in telling him what he wants to know without loss of time and effort.

Stevenson, John Alford. Selling life insurance. 1922. L 19268

(Harper's life insurance library.)

Mr. Stevenson was director of the life-insurance school of salesmanship, Carnegie Institute of technology. This volume consists of plans for selling, methods of making a sale and suggestions as to ways of approaching customers.

Women's Educational and Industrial Union, Boston. Old-age support of women teachers, provisions for old age made by women teachers in the public schools of Massachusetts. 1921. L 9237, 11

(Studies in economic relations of women.)

Trusts, Cooperation

Jones, Eliot. The trust problem in the United States. 1921. L 17905

Mr. Jones has gathered a vast amount of valuable facts and figures and has presented them fairly. The chief question on which he seeks to throw a light is, whether we should restore competitive conditions, regulate prices, or socialize the monopolized industries.—Nation.

Webb, Sidney and Beatrice. The consumers' co-operative movement. 1921. L 17549

Will have considerable influence with those in whose hands the future development of cooperation lies. The book will help to disperse some of their fears and will give them new confidence.—Survey.

Symonds, R. W. The present state of old English furniture. 1921. P 4260

Mr. Symonds has done all that it is possible to do for that incomprehensible person who must buy for high prices what he cannot understand.—Times (London).

Tabor, Grace. Come into the garden. 1921. K 27287

A book written to help those who have limited means and space for a garden. It discusses the garden's place in civilization; how to design a garden; walks, paths and garden entrances; trees and their purpose; flowers of all climes and seasons, etc.

Drawing and Engraving

Beerbohm, Max. A survey. 1921. P 3703

Cartoons and caricatures.
In the drawings of Max Beerbohm there has even been an exquisite quality—something finer than humor—that renders analysis absurd.—Gene Markey in Chicago Daily News.

Catterson-Smith, R. Drawing from memory and mind picturing. 1921. K 28444

The excellence of the author's method is attested by the results as shown in illustrations reproduced from the work of his pupils.

Noguchi, Yone. Hiroshige. 1921. P 3190

A biography and appreciation of a Japanese artist of the first half of the nineteenth century, with reproductions from his work. The text is in English (in beautiful type) and the whole is dedicated to Arthur Davison Ficke.

Contents: A humorous novel by an eighteenth-century musician.—An English amateur (Pepys's diary).—A portrait of Händel.—The origins of the "classic" style in eighteenth-century music.—The autobiography of a forgotten master: Telemann, the successful rival of J. S. Bach.—Metastasio; the forerunner of Gluck.—A musical tour across Europe in the eighteenth century; Italy, Germany.
Sequel to Musicians of former days. K 11787.
Discusses men of the transition period who, though not famous, were the pioneers of our present music. The book will appeal especially to musicians, but it is not too technical for the layman.

The violinist. v. 28-29. 1921. Ser.

LITERATURE

Benham, W. Gurney, comp. A dictionary of classified quotations from authors of all nations and periods, grouped under subject-headings, with full index of cross-references and annotated list of authors. 1922. J 6285

—Another copy. R 1428

Its function is to afford assistance when assistance is required and it fulfills that function amply.—Literary Review.

Birkhead, Edith. The tale of terror; a study of the Gothic romance. 1921. J 7240

Academically speaking, her work deserves the praise of thoroughness. . . . The broad sweep of the Gothic in later 18th and earlier 19th century fiction is here ably, learnedly and humorously set out.—New Statesman.

Heydrick, Benjamin A., ed. Types of the essay. 1921. E 3499

A useful book for students of the essay. The introduction takes up the history and types of essays and how to study them. Examples by well known authors are given of the personal, descriptive, critical, editorial and reflective essay.

Keller, Helen Rex. The reader's digest of books. 1922. J 7654

—Another copy. R 3185

A handbook summarizing concisely the plots of over four hundred of the world's best novels. A valuable desk companion for the student of literature, the author, or the scenario writer.

Journalism, Authorship

Lubbock, Percy. The craft of fiction. 1921. J 7239

An example of the best qualities of the analytical method of criticism. . . . It is a book which no writer of fiction can afford to leave unread, and it is one which will also very much enhance the pleasure of every intelligent novel-reader.—Spectator.

Smith, Russell E. Co-operation, merchandising and promotion; a hand-book for the merchandising and promotion departments of newspapers. 1921. J 7265

Covers in detail the service that can be rendered to an advertiser entering a new territory and is based on actual practice. It is a pioneer work in its field, is clear and thorough and will be of value not only to the advertising staffs of newspapers but also to advertisers.—Literary Review.

Williams, Talcott. The newspaperman. 1922. J 7273

(Vocational series.)

Deals with the theory and practice of newspaper work, giving its discouraging features as well as its rewards. The author is director of the school of journalism at Columbia University.

Poetry

Benét, Laura. Fairy bread. 1921. E 14489

The best and highest praise that a critic can give to any book of poems is this: It has magic. That is what Miss Benét's has—magic—a heap of it.—Oliver Jenkins in The Chicago Daily News.

Blunt, Wilfrid Scawen. A new pilgrimage, and other poems. 1889. E 14498

Contents: A new pilgrimage.—The idler's calendar.—The old squire.—Sancho Sanches.—Across the pampas.—From the Arabic: The camel-rider; The desolate city; The grief of love; A love secret.—Pastoral poems: Worth forest; Sed nos qui vivimus.

Contemporary verse; the all-poetry magazine for America. v.11-12. 1921. *Ser.

Drinkwater, John. Seeds of time. 1922. E 14604

A group of good poems, though without distinction.

Gould, Gerald. The journey: odes and sonnets. 1921. E 14711

We find it hard to think of a modern poet who excels him in the intimate spiritual revelation of human love.—Nation and Athenaeum.

Leonard, Sterling Andrus, comp. Poems of the war and the peace. 1921. E 14363

An anthology for high-school use grouped into poems on love of country, pictures of the war, the supreme sacrifice, and the ideal of peace, with biographical notes on the poets.

Masefield, John. King Cole. 1921. E 14867

He tells the story of the legendary king returned to earth to be a friend to man in his usual straightforward graphic style, good, workmanlike realism, enlivened by genuine poetry.—Literary Review.

Metcalf, John Calvin, and Wilson, James Southall, ed. The enchanted years; a book of contemporary verse, dedicated by poets of Great Britain and America to the University of Virginia on the occasion of its one-hundredth anniversary. 1921.

E 14362

The great majority of the poems are new, and more than occasional verse. D. H. Lawrence, Amy Lowell, Vachel Lindsay, Edwin Arlington Robinson, Thomas Hardy, Arthur Symonds and Walter de la Mare are among the contributors.—Bookman.

Robinson, Edwin Arlington. Collected poems. 1921. E 14968

Contents: The man against the sky.—The children of the night.—Captain Craig, etc.—Merlin.—The town down the river.—Lancelot.—The three taverns.—Avon's harvest.

In this one unadorned novel-size blue volume we have a whole net-work of plots, a whole township of men and women, evidence of an observation and imagination that . . . would have furnished forth any number of volumes of short stories.—W. R. Benét in The Literary Review.

Shelby, Annie Blanche, comp. The lullaby book; or, Mothers' love songs. 1921.

E 14361

A tale of a walled town, and other verses, by B. 8266, —penitentiary; with an introduction by William Stanley Braithwaite. 1921. E 15041

The "walled town" is the state penitentiary where the writer of these verses is a life prisoner. The title poem relating the story of his life, though not a second "Ballad of Reading Gaol," is written with some technical skill and is obviously sincere.

Drama

Best, Mrs. A. Starr, and Houston, Alice M., comp. Popular study course for clubs; important plays of the seasons 1919-1920 and 1920-1921 prepared especially for club use; outlines by specialists. 1921. E 13506

Goodell, Thomas Dwight. Athenian tragedy; a study in popular art. 1920.

E 13783

(Yale classical series.)

An account of the background and structure of Greek tragedy together with a detailed description of the plays themselves.

Greenwood, Sir George. Ben Jonson and Shakespeare. 1921. E 10105

Sir George Greenwood stands out above the rank and file of the Shakespeare skeptics. As compared with them he is moderate in assertion, as he is also superior in style and knowledge of Shakespearean literature.—Literary Review.

Molière, J. B. P. TILLEY, ARTHUR. Molière. 1921. E 14103

His book embodies the conclusions of all the best French critics and students of Molière, as well as his own judicious comments. We know of no other work in English that illuminates so clearly the career of the great French dramatist.—Spectator.

Andreyev, Leonid. He who gets slapped; a play in four acts. 1922. E 11755

A study of human nature as viewed by a mountebank whose philosophy of life the New Republic calls "a bitter lovely thing, full of an intellectual passion in which all beauty is exalted and the drabness and commonness of men is perpetually mocked."

Chapin, Harold. The comedies of Harold Chapin. 1921. E 13590

Contents: The new morality.—Art and opportunity.—Elaine.—The marriage of Columbine.

Cook, George Cram. The spring. 1921. E 11947

One of the most arresting in interest and provocative of the plays of several seasons . . . a thesis drama on the subject of psychoanalysis in its serious aspects.—Literary Review.

Dunsany, Lord. If; a play in four acts. 1922. E 12039

Lord Dunsany cannot write without a touch of poetry in his sentences. "If" is a whimsy, charming, beautifully written, which is sheer romance, not only because it is romantic but because it sets one thinking about the if's in one's own life, and that, we must admit, is the height of romantic imagining.—Fanny Butcher in Chicago Tribune.

France, Anatole. The bride of Corinth, and other poems and plays. 1920. J 154, 27

Contents: The bride of Corinth.—Verses.—Crainquebille.—The comedy of a man who married a dumb wife.—Come what may.

Galsworthy, John. Strife; a drama in three acts. 1921. E 13766

Gay, John. The beggar's opera, to which is prefixed the musick to each song. 1921. E 13769

Owes special interest to its gay new clothes, with its bright yellow, black, and green cover, and charming color prints, reproductions of the dresses and decorations by Claud Lovat Fraser produced for the Hammersmith recent revival of the opera.—Booklist.

Hirshbein, Peretz. The haunted inn; a drama in four acts. 1921. E 12339

Housman, Laurence. Angels and ministers; three plays of Victorian shade and character. 1922. E 13829

Contents: The queen: God bless her! (A scene from home-life in the Highlands).—His favourite flower (a political myth explained).—The comforter (a political finale).

Martyn, Edward. The dream physician; play in five acts. 1918. E 14086

—The heather field; play in three acts. 1917. E 14090

—Maevie; a psychological drama in two acts. 1917. E 14091

Millay, Edna St. Vincent. Two slatterns and a king; a moral interlude. 1921. E 14100

(Stewart Kidd modern plays.)

Milne, A. A. The acting edition of Mr. Pim passes by; a comedy in three acts. 1921. E 14096

(French's acting edition.)

Gay, sparkling talk it is, with wit dancing through it and satire inspiring it, but a satire that is not malicious, even when it bites like a touch of tabasco . . . The whimsical art of it does not prevent its being a criticism of life.—New York Times.

Yeats, W. B. Four plays for dancers. 1921. E 14275

Contents: At the Hawk's well.—The only jealousy of Emer.—The dreaming of the bones.—Calvary.

Short plays of fantastic and legendary character, to be given with the simplest of stage setting, the dramatic effect depending on the costumes, the primitive musical accompaniment and the dancing.—Booklist.

Essays and Miscellany.

Black, Alexander. The latest thing and other things. 1922. E 1956

These papers are to be read with leisure as a handmaid, to be picked up, enjoyed, laid aside to await again the right moment. They incite a reflective mood, inspire a gentle argument, hold many a smile.—Hildegard Hawthorne in New York Times.

Squire, J. C. Collected parodies. 1921. E 5865

Contents: Repertory drama.—How they do it. How they would have done it.—Imaginary reviews.—Imaginary speeches.—The aspirant's manual. "Includes almost the whole of three previous books; Imaginary speeches, Steps to Parnassus, and tricks of the trade."

Stearns, Harold. America and the young intellectual. 1921. E 5869

Contents: America and the young intellectual. Van Wyck Brooks: critic and creator.—A study in docility.—La peur de la vie.—Where are our intellectuals?—Illusions of the sophisticated.—Lost in the crowd.—An intellectual egg-shell period.—A question of morals.—Au-dessous de la mêlée.—Common sense about France.—Overdone.—A dilapidated scarecrow.—Bigotry and class-consciousness.—Science and common sense.—Roots of anti-British feeling.—Progress versus industrialism.—The twilight of the gods.—The country versus the town.—The claims of loyalty.—Through art to individualism.—What can a young man do?

A series of essays dealing with our modern ailments and their remedies. These articles will create considerable interest.

Vince, Charles. Wayfarers in Arcady. 1922. E 6231

A collection of twenty-six short essays on the English countryside. They are written in a straightforward manner which is quite as wholesome as the downs, the hills or the quiet spot on the landscape which the author describes.

TRAVEL AND DESCRIPTION

Geography and Atlas

Brown, R. N. Rudmose. The principles of economic geography. 1920. I 11374

(Pitman's economic library.)

The work embraces all the economic activities of man, the production and distribution of the necessary commodities, colonization, development of trade. A vast subject scientifically handled.

Rand McNally & Co. Atlas of reconstruction for schools; a brief history of the world war, an outline of new Europe, statistics of the war, racial frontier of Europe and the Near East, and the terms of the peace treaties. 1921. I 11373

Smith, E. Ehrlich. Teaching geography by problems. 1921. I 11372

A book based on classroom experience, which aims to reform the mechanical method of teaching geography now employed in the schools. Mr. Smith advocates a vital method of instruction by means of problems and projects, which emphasizes the regional rather than political aspects of the subject.

Europe

Clark, Charles Upson. Greater Roumania. 1922. I 11061

A work full of information on Roumania, her people, wars, arts, customs, physiography, geography, government and economics, with a bibliography including books in several languages, and an index.—Booklist.

Dos Passos, John. Rosinante to the road again. 1922. I 10484

Impressions of Spain gained by Telemachus and Lyaeus on a walking tour. The book abounds in clever conversation, subtle wit and gentle satire. It contains much that is informative and is delightful reading in a very real sense.

Goff, A., and Fawcett, Hugh A. Macedonia; a plea for the primitive. 1921. I 10982

A delightful book beautifully illustrated. A picture of Macedonia that brings out every detail of this rugged country, its villages and people, leaving an indelible impression.

Graham, P. Anderson. Highways and byways in Northumbria. 1920. I 10367

A good travel book written with an enthusiasm that gives new life to the historical and legendary incidents related of those heroic but 'shadowy' characters who fought in the Wars of the Roses.

Graham, Stephen. Europe—whither bound? (Quo vadis Europa?); being letters of travel from the capitals of Europe in the year 1921. 1922. I 11255

Mr. Graham enables you to walk the streets of the European capitals with him, and all who know his power of visualization and admire his skill in discovering the inner meanings of the ordinary sights he sees will find this the most attractive of all his published works.—New York Times.

McKenna, Stephen. While I remember. 1921. I 10368

His generation, he says, ended with the peace of Versailles, and he is setting down his memories of it before they fade. He does it with that sad reticence, punctured by irritation over our non-comprehension, which is the badge of our own war youngsters.—Chicago Evening Post.

Maurel, André. A fortnight in Naples. 1921. I 10450

This is neither a guide book nor a book of travel nor a collection of essays, but rather, perhaps, it is a perplexing mixture of all three, and is rather better for that fact.—Literary Review.

Nutting, William Washburn. The track of the "Typhoon." 1922. I 11385

The story of the building and sailing of a 45-footer, which sailed over 7,000 miles, crossing the Atlantic in 15 days, returning through bad storms via Spain and the Azores.—Publishers' Weekly.

Repington, Charles à Court. After the war; London, Paris, Rome, Athens, Prague, Vienna, Budapest, Bucharest, Berlin, Sofia, Coblenz, New York, Washington; a diary. 1922. I 11264

An interesting collection of confidences, characterizations and stories by a British newspaper man.

Sabin, Frances Ellis, comp. Classical associations of places in Italy. 1921. I 10449

Excerpts from the classics, with English translations arranged on opposite pages, describing places in Italy immortalized in the writings of ancient Latin and Greek authors.

Sturgeon, Mary. Westminster abbey, its memories and its message. 1921. I 10382

This great volume, in quarto, is the handsomest that has ever been published on Westminster Abbey.—Literary Review.

Trend, J. B. A picture of modern Spain; men and music. 1921. I 10483

Contents: Spain after the war.—Education in Spain.—Literature.—The Catalan contribution.—Spanish plays and incidental music.—Three memories of music.

One of the most readable of recent books on its subject, by an author who is equally at home in discussing the politics, the novel, the drama, or the music of Spain.—Outlook.

Asia

Maxwell, Donald. A painter in Palestine; being an impromptu pilgrimage through the Holy Land with Bible and sketchbook. 1921. I 10913

It is as an artist he describes the holy places and sacred cities of Palestine. This point of view helps him to make illuminating explanations of some difficult passages in the Bible narrative and to bring some helpful and unconventional suggestions to bear on problems of modern criticism.—Book Review Digest.

Tyau, Min-ch'ien T. Z. China awakened. 1922. I 10666

Mr. Tyau is a Chinese publicist of distinction who is now representing China in the League of Nations. He discusses China of today and the many changes that are taking place, the progress in elementary education, the spread of journalism, the student movement, etc.

Africa, Oceanica

Calderon, George, (Tihoti). Tahiti. 1921. I 9183

Has a veracious charm and a wealth of refined observation which put it close to the top in the South Sea cycle. Tihoti feels and conveys the spell of the islands as well as any one, but he delves deeper than most into their language and customs.—Daily News.

Rayne, Major H. Sun, sand and Somals; leaves from the note-book of a district commissioner in British Somaliland. 1921. I 8852

The scenery, climate, laws and customs, loves and hates of that arid country which is vaguely known to us as British Somaliland are the subject of Major Rayne's vivid, unpretentious, and pleasantly written book.—Times (London).

Russell, Charles Edward. The outlook for the Philippines. 1922. I 9404

North America

Mexico, United States

Cole, H. E. Baraboo, Dells, and Devil's Lake region; scenery, archeology, geology, Indian legends, and local history briefly treated. 1921. I 4350

Dillon, E. J. Mexico on the verge. 1921. I 10027

The author is a partisan of Obregon who believes that foreign capital is responsible for all the evils that beset Mexico. His book is a plea for the official recognition of the Obregon government.

Freeman, Lewis R. Down the Columbia. 1921. I 11783

An account of a boat trip down the Columbia river, from its glacial sources to its mouth. . . . The author's account of his adventures and of the grandeur of the scenery through which he passed is fully illustrated with photographs taken along the way.—Book Review Digest.

Illinois. Chamber of Commerce. Illinois facts. 1921. I 4349

A brief survey of the business opportunities, resources and advantages of Illinois.

Sheridan, Clare. My American diary. 1922. I 4333

In a refreshing manner Clare Sheridan describes her life in New York where she was dined by the great, the near great and the rich. Her experiences in Mexico and California and the people she met are all vividly portrayed and make enjoyable reading.

Thompson, Wallace. The Mexican mind; a study of national psychology. 1922. I 10025

The author gives an interesting analysis of the workings of the Mexican mind and an insight into Mexican character, temperament, and culture. He tells the origin of the race and the conditions and environments of social and political life which go to make up the Mexican as he exists today.

BIOGRAPHY

Genealogy, Flags

McCandless, Byron, and Grosvenor, Gilbert. Flags of the world. 1917. A 7661
A reprint from the National Geographic Magazine.

Mayflower descendents and their marriages for two generations after the landing; including a short history of the church of the Pilgrim founders of New England. 1922. C 20198

Collective Biography

An analysis of representatives of all clerical types with the avowed purpose of discovering "the reason for the present rather ignoble situation of the Church in the affections of men."

Bradford, Gamaliel. American portraits, 1875-1900. 1922. C 19297

Contents: Mark Twain.—Henry Adams.—Sidney Lanier.—James McNeill Whistler.—James G. Blaine.—Grover Cleveland.—Henry James.—Joseph Jefferson.

I like these Bradford books. They make dead men seem real to me—and often surprisingly likable.—H. L. Mencken in The Literary Review.

Pearson, Hesketh. Modern men and mummies. 1922. C 19879

Contents: Modern men and mummies; Bernard Shaw.—Sir Herbert Tree.—Sir Francis Galton.—Sir George Alexander.—Frank Harris.—Lyttton Strachey.—Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson.—Stephen Phillips.—Frank Benson.—Robert Ross.—Playwright producers.

Post impressions: H. G. Wells.—Edmund Gosse.—Arthur Bourchier.—Mrs. Asquith.—Sir Hall Caine.—Lewis Waller.—Winston Churchill.—Joseph Conrad.—Dean Inge.—Mrs. Patrick Campbell.—Father Bernard Vaughan.—Irene Vanbrugh.—Lloyd George.—Genevieve Ward.—"John Bull".—The Irvings.—The Chestertons.—Gerald Cumberland.

An interesting and amusing collection of anecdotes dealing with notable Englishmen. Neither praise nor adverse criticism is wanting, and many new sidelights are thrown on world-known characters.

Sherrill, Charles Hitchcock. Prime ministers and presidents. 1922. C 19965

Contents: Introduction.—The post-war British Empire.—Present day official France.—Makers of the German republic.—The Low countries and their colonies.—Scandinavian problems.—The Petite entente, the northern dam.—The Petite entente, the southern dam.—A house divided, Hungary.—A house divided, Austria.—Venizelos, the waning Turk and the changed Mediterranean.—Far-Eastern postscript.

Short up-to-the-minute discussions about prominent men who are of great importance in the affairs of the world. All countries are considered as well as the changing policies within them for which these men are responsible.

Taylor, G. R. Stirling. Modern English statesmen. 1921. C 20044

Contents: Statesmen and statesmanship.—Oliver Cromwell.—The Walpoles.—The Pitt family; and its myths.—Edmund Burke.—Benjamin Disraeli, earl of Beaconsfield.

Comiskey.—Glenn Curtiss.—Coleman du Pont.—Elbert Henry Gary.—George Washington Goethals.—John Hays Hammond.—Edward Henry Harriman.—James J. Hill.—Herbert Clark Hoover.—Minor Cooper Keith.—Louis Kroh Liggett.—Gustav Lindenthal.—Andrew William Mellon.—Perley Morse.—Frank A. Munsey.—George Mortimer Pullman.—Eliphalet Remington.—Julius Rosenwald.—Lee Shubert.—Harry Ford Sinclair.—Ellsworth Milton Statler.—Theodore Newton Vail.—William Wrigley, Jr.

Individual Biography

Barton, Clara. BARTON, WILLIAM E. The life of Clara Barton, founder of the American Red Cross. 1922. 2 v. C 20761

Clara Barton left two vaults full of letters, diaries and fragments of autobiography. From this mass of material her nephew, Dr. Barton, of Oak Park, has produced a most complete and authentic account of her life.

Chaplin, Charlie. My trip abroad. 1922.

C 21191

Charlie Chaplin has written a naïve account of his visit to the capitals of the Old World where he received the attention ordinarily reserved for kings and generals. Fanny Butcher in the Chicago Tribune says: "Charlie Chaplin is the funniest writer in America or he is the greatest satirist."

Danton, Georges Jacques. MADELIN, LOUIS.

Danton. 1921.

C 21508

Danton's remarkable personality—violent yet feeble, bloodthirsty yet mild, ambitious and restless yet indifferent and yearning for quiet. These strangely variant characteristics have been caught up by M. Madelin.—Publisher's Announcement.

Depew, Chauncey M. My memories of eighty years. 1922.

C 21567

A good picture of political, business and diplomatic life during the past eighty years written in an informal, pleasing style. Many older people hark back to the good old days, but Mr. Depew speaks rather of the changes for the better that have taken place.

Dostoyevski, Fyodor. DOSTOYEVSKI, AIMEE. Fyodor Dostoyevsky. 1922.

C 21624

A familiar, intimate, passionately loyal biography of a great novelist written by his daughter . . . She is never dull. From first page to last she holds the reader's attention.—New York Times.

Fisher, John, bp. HALL, RICHARD. The life of Fisher transcribed from ms. Harleian 6382, by the Rev. Ronald Bayne, M. A.; supplementary to the English works of John Fisher. 1921. *J 1176, 117

(Early English Text Society.)

Ford, Henry. BUSHNELL, SARAH T. The truth about Henry Ford. 1922.

C 21951

A brief biography of this amazingly successful man, giving interesting accounts of the peace-ship, the Ford-Newberry senatorial campaign, and the Chicago Tribune libel suit from the Ford point of view.

Higginson, Thomas Wentworth. Letters and journals of Thomas Wentworth Higginson, 1846–1906; ed. by Mary Thacher Higginson. 1921.

C 22429

An autobiography filled with glimpses of literary, political and social celebrities of the past fifty years, describing army life of the Civil War, yesterday's foreign travels, and New England life at Cambridge in a recital of intimate incidents vivid with humor and sympathy.—Booklist.

Kitchener, H. H., Lord. ESHER, REGINALD, Viscount. The tragedy of Lord Kitchener. 1921.

C 22791

A biography by a friend and co-worker who knew Kitchener's greatness and yet has the courage to voice his criticisms. It depicts his brilliant career in India and then shows the pathetic picture of a man whose judgment was blurred by time and conditions when called into the war.

Laurier, Sir Wilfrid. SKELTON, OSCAR DOUGLAS. Life and letters of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. 1922. 2 v.

C 22879

A well written biography combining the life story of an eminent Canadian statesman with the history of Canada during the critical period of her development.

Lewisohn, Ludwig. Up stream; an American chronicle. 1922.

C 22954

A German Jew brought to America at the age of ten tells of his life and progress. A well written autobiography of a college professor and literary man, a radical, who with some bitterness gives his opinions on American life and institutions.

Louise, princess of Belgium. My own affairs. 1921.

C 23081

Princess Louise, the daughter of Leopold II and wife of Prince Philip of Saxe-Coburg, tells the story of her life. There are interesting glimpses of Leopold's family life and an intimate account of European Court affairs.

Monroe, James. MORGAN, GEORGE. The life of James Monroe. 1921.

C 23463

Mr. Morgan has not written a critical biography, but rather a genial story that will engage the interest of those who like to while away a long evening with a judicious mixture of personalia, gossip, and history.—Nation.

Morris, William. GLASIER, J. BRUCE. William Morris and the early days of the socialist movement. 1921.

C 23487

"Being reminiscences of Morris' work as a propagandist, and observations on his character and genius, with some account of the persons and circumstances of the early socialist agitation, together with a series of letters addressed by Morris to the author."

Sand, George, pseud. The George Sand-Gustave Flaubert letters; tr. by Aimee L. McKenzie, with an introduction by Stuart P. Sherman. 1921.

C 21646

The letters of these two strongly contrasting personalities, Flaubert "the martyr of style" and George Sand who wrote from inspiration with little regard for beautiful phrasing, express the diverse viewpoints and objectives of both literary artists.

Smyth, Ethel. Streaks of life. 1922.

C 24304

Contents: Concerning this book.—Recollections of the Empress Eugénie.—A fresh start and two portraits.—Two glimpses of Queen Victoria.—"Mount Music."—An adventure in a train.—The quotation-fiend.—A winter of storm.—The opera fiasco.—An open secret.

A brilliant collection of intimate recollections of noted people by a vigorous writer. Empress Eugénie, Queen Victoria and ex-Kaiser Wilhelm are among the list.

Sorley, Charles. The letters of Charles Sorley, with a chapter of biography. 1919.

C 24309

Letters dated Dec. 10, 1911 to Oct. 5, 1915.

Contents: Biographical.—Marlborough.—Schwerin in Mecklenburg.—The University of Jena.—The army: in training.—The army: at the front.

Charles Sorley was a young Cambridge man who died in the war at the age of twenty. The New Republic calls his letters "the expression of a rarely independent mind, humorous, rich and wise far beyond its years."

Stanton, Elizabeth Cady. STANTON, THEODORE, and BLATCH, HARRIOT S. Elizabeth Cady Stanton as revealed in her letters, diary and reminiscences. 1922.

C 24354

Neither ancient history nor propaganda can obscure the irresistible personality that shines through the seven hundred or more pages of the book.—New Republic.

Washington, George. President Washington's diaries, 1791 to 1799; transcribed and comp. by Jos. A. Hoskins. 1921.

C 24770

Continues Lossing's Diary of George Washington, 1789 to 1911 (C 2399). It includes a trip to Georgetown and a conference on the selection of sites for the buildings of the capital.

Westinghouse, George. PROUT, HENRY G. A life of George Westinghouse. 1922.

C 24808

Most of the book is concerned with an account of his various inventions.

Whistler, James McNeill. PENNELL, E. R. and J. The Whistler journal. 1921.

C 24828

A book which proclaims its own charms and importance. Elizabeth R. and Joseph Pennell who were named by Whistler as his official biographers . . . have edited these journals with the same loving enthusiasm with which they have always devoted themselves to Whistler's memory.—Fanny Butcher in Chicago Tribune.

HISTORY

Europe

Addams, Jane. Peace and bread in time of war. 1922.

A 7191

A history of the work of the Woman's Peace Party during the war and of its part in forming the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. It gives an insight into what pacifism really means to Miss Addams and her supporters.

Ault, Norman. Life in ancient Britain; a survey of the social and economic development of the people of England from earliest times to the Roman conquest. 1920.

A 5422

From the findings of archeologists, the author pictures living conditions from the paleolithic to the early iron age. He shows people in their homes . . . taking the first steps in solving the problems which have passed down the long ages to modern times.—Booklist.

Frank, Tenney. An economic history of Rome to the end of the republic. 1920.

A 2812

It stands alone in its completeness, in the thorough use which the author has made of available evidence, in the sound judgment which he has shown, and in the clear convincing way in which he has set forth his conclusions.—American History Review.

Guilford, Everard L. Nottingham. 1920.

A 5435

(The story of the English towns.)

One of a series which gives a compressed, but interesting, survey of the history of each town from its legendary beginnings, of its government, its industries, and its religious institutions.—Booklist.

Hearnshaw, F. J. C., ed. Mediaeval contributions to modern civilization; a series of lectures delivered at King's College, University of London. 1922.

A 6469

Contents: Introductory: The middle ages and their characteristic features, by F. J. C. Hearnshaw.—The religious contribution of the middle ages, by C. Jenkins.—Philosophy, by H. W. Carr.—Science, by C. Singer.—Art, by P. Dearmer.—The middle ages in the lineage of English poetry, by Sir I. Gollancz.—Education, by J. W. Adamson.—Society, by Hilda Johnstone.—Economics, by E. R. Adair.—Politics, by J. W. Allen.

Mr. Hearnshaw feels that the "Middle ages are a pit from which we were dugged and the rock from which we were hewn," the origin and beginnings of things as they exist today. The special contributions are excellent.

Italy. Army. The battle of the Piave (June 15–23, 1918); issued by the Supreme Command. 1921.

A 7194

Marcovitch, L., ed. Serbia and Europe, 1914–1920. 1920.

A 7190

Contents: Serbian politics.—The union of Serbians, Croats and Slovenes.—The struggle with Austria-Hungary.—The policy of Bulgaria.—Serbia and Italy.—Serbia and Germany.—Serbia and Russia.—The politics of Roumania.—Serbo-Greek relations.—Austro-Germano-Bulgarian atrocities.

Simkhovitch, Vladimir G. Toward the understanding of Jesus, and other historical studies. 1921.

A 2315

Contents: Toward the understanding of Jesus.—Rome's fall reconsidered.—Hay and history.

Japan

Ballard, G. A. The influence of the sea on the political history of Japan. 1921.

A 4975

One of the most distinguished of British sailors has traced from the earliest times the fortunes of Japanese sea power, including the creation of the modern Japanese navy.—Boston Transcript.

Satow, Sir Ernest Mason. A diplomat in Japan. 1921.

A 4974

"The inner history of the critical years in the evolution of Japan, when the ports were opened and the monarchy restored, recorded by a diplomat who took an active part in the events of the time, with an account of his personal experiences during that period."

United States

Biggs, William. Narrative of the captivity of William Biggs among the Kickapoo Indians in Illinois in 1788, written by himself. 1922.

B 5714, 37

(Heartman's historical series.)

Gordy, Wilbur Fiske. History of the United States. 1922.

B 5692

Harrison, Francis Burton. The cornerstone of Philippine independence; a narrative of seven years. 1922.

B 7617

Mr. Harrison, who was Governor General of the Philippines believes that the Filipinos have proved themselves ready for self-government. He presents in a very readable way his experiences and opinions as well as the historical background of these people.

Powell, E. Alexander. Some forgotten heroes and their place in American history. 1922.

B 5941

Contents: Adventurers all (filibustering expeditions to Mexico).—When we smashed the prophet's power (battle of Tippecanoe).—The pirate who turned patriot (Lafitte).—The last fight of the "General Armstrong" (Reid).—The man who dared to cross the ranges (Smith).—Under the flag of the Lone Star (Texan revolution).—The preacher who rode for an empire (Marcus Whitman).—The flag of the bear.

Selected chapters from Gentleman rovers (C 19396) and The road to glory (B 5940).

Tyler, Lyon G. Virginia first. 1921.

B 8355

FICTION

Andrews, Mary Raymond Shipman. His soul goes marching on. 1922. F 10573

A patriotic narrative in which the author pays a tribute to Theodore Roosevelt by relating the great influence he had on the life of a boy whom he accidentally met, and with whom he spoke only once.

Bibesco, Elizabeth Asquith. I have only myself to blame. 1921. F 11127

Contents: I have only myself to blame.—Tomorrow.—"The web."—An ordinary man.—The gesture.—Cyclamen.—The dream.—The farewell.—Tout comprendre.—Three love letters.—The successor.—As it was in the beginning.—The old story.—The pilgrimage.—The ball.—Fragment of a correspondence.

Cleverness and sophistication are two qualities one would expect to find as a matter of course in any books written by a daughter of Margot Asquith and they are both abundantly present in this collection of short stories.—New York Times.

Buckrose, J. E., pseud. of Mrs. A. E. F. Jameson. The privet hedge. 1922. F 20776

A pleasantly quiet sort of story portraying English life at a little sea-side resort during the transitional period of readjustment after the war.

Chekhov, Anton. The schoolmaster, and other stories. 1921. F 11931

Contents: The schoolmaster.—Enemies.—The examining magistrate.—Betrothed.—From the diary of a violent-tempered man.—In the dark.—A play.—A mystery.—Strong impressions.—Drunk.—The marshal's widow.—A bad business.—In the court.—Boots.—Joy.—Ladies.—A peculiar man.—At the barber's.—An inadvertence.—The album.—Oh! The public.—A tripping tongue.—Overdoing it.—The orator.—Malingerers.—In the graveyard.—Hush!—In an hotel.—In a strange land.

Dramatic, intense sketches of Russian life among the upper classes.—Booklist.

Child, Richard Washburn. The hands of Nara. 1922. F 11935

The two central figures are Nara, a Russian refugee whose beautiful hands are gifted with powers of healing, and Emlen, a young physician who is an arch enemy of the mystic cults. Their common search for truth, hers through occultism, and his through science, forms the bond between them.

Collins, Wilkie. Basil. 1873. F 12066

Delafield, E. M., pseud. of E. E. M. De la Pasture. Humbug; a study in education. 1922. F 21535

A true and vivid picture of the fate of an exceptionally conscientious, extremely sensitive child, whose misfortune it was to be born of ultra-sentimental parents.—New York Times.

Durkin, Douglas. The Lobstick trail. 1922. F 12617

A tale of the great Canadian north-west and the redemption of Kirk Brander, a reckless, vacillating youth. His trials and vicissitudes and final triumph make a story that will greatly appeal to lovers of adventure.

Fletcher, J. S. The Rayner-Slade amalgamation. 1922. F 22130

A murder mystery, in which the solution seems evident in the third chapter. But the anticipated solution does not prove correct and the reader is soon completely mystified. The climax comes as a total surprise.

Footner, Hulbert. The Deaves affair. 1922. F 22184

This detective story deals neither with an inexplicable crime nor an elusive murderer, but a sharp edged vein of humor runs throughout and makes the book an unusual one of its kind.

Hamsun, Knut. Wanderers. 1922. F 13437

Contents: Under the autumn star.—A wanderer plays on muted strings.

A story of Norwegian gentry. An unusual book of great power and excellent characterization. Readers will recognize the author's sincerity and grasp of the complexities of life.

Harker, L. Allen. The bridge across. 1921. F 13603

A continuation of the life of Raby Verdon now grown to womanhood. The bridge of understanding between her youth and the middle age of her close friend is handled well.

Harrison, Henry Sydnor. Saint Teresa. 1922. F 13612

Before America entered the war, this beautiful heiress gained control of a steel corporation to keep it from selling munitions. The theme is the conflict between her will and that of a young patriot who became her efficiency expert to learn how to thwart her pacifism. There is argument, business detail, and finally a hand to hand combat.

Hext, Harrington, pseud. Number 87. 1922. F 13778

The hero is a man possessing the knowledge of secrets which enable him to destroy human life and property without detection, and he endeavors to regulate world affairs according to his own ideas. A thrilling book.

Heyer, Georgette. The Black Moth; a romance of the XVIII century. 1921. F 13773

You would like to read it to the soft accompaniment of Beethoven's Minuet because there is something about it that suits the daintiness and Old World charm of the music.—Literary Review.

Hurst, S. B. H. Coomer Ali. 1922. F 23289

A story without any love interest. There are three heroes, a Mohammedan fanatic, a huge negro, and a mysterious white man, who in spite of their exotic character are made very real. The descriptions are vivid and colorful, particularly one of Mecca by night and another of a storm in the Indian Ocean.

Johnston, Sir Harry. The Veneerings. 1922. F 14395

A continuation of the lives of Hamilton Veneering and his children who first lived in Our mutual friend (F 401). It is a leisurely slow-moving story with small plot interest but some English politics. The scene shifts between Calais, London, and South Africa.

Kelland, Clarence Budington. Conflict. 1922. F 24194

Dorcas Remalie, a wealthy New York girl, compelled on the death of her father to live in a little village of the Maine woods with her guardian who controls her money, is in conflict with the whole of her new life. A clever and absorbing story.

Lagerlöf, Selma. The outcast. 1922. F 14613

There is a mystical quality to this book, as there is to other books by Miss Lagerlof. It is a passionate indictment of war, a plea that war shall cease from out the world, that men shall make clean their hearts from the sin of their brothers' blood.—Hildegard Hawthorne in New York Times.

MacConnell, Sarah Warder. One. 1922. F 24820

A conventional story of married life among those who live only from one social event to another. Alethea marries Frederick Haviland knowing his philandering habits but thinks she can make a success of marriage in spite of it. Her efforts in this direction make up the story.

MacHarg, William. Peewee. 1922. F 24848

Peewee is a little street boy who sells newspapers in Chicago's crowded loop district. William MacHarg has taken his interesting boy character from real life and written an appealing story about him from the child's point of view.

McKenna, Stephen. The secret victory. 1922. F 15225

The third of the series "The sensationalists," following (1) Lady Lilith, F 15224; (2) The education of Eric Lane, F 24859.

Paris, John, pseud. Kimono. 1922. F 15983

The story of an international marriage. The author has stripped Japan of the poetry and glamor commonly woven about it. He has been horrified by the position of women in Japan and especially by the cold-blooded trade in vice licensed there.

Pérochon, Ernest. Nène. 1922. F 16124

It is a sad little tale of a girl who hired herself to a young widower and who gave every drop of the love that filled her big peasant heart to his two babies, and then had to give them up—and killed herself because they no longer loved her.—Fanny Butcher in Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Phillipotts, Eden. Eudocia; a comedy royal. 1921. F 16300

The love story of a soldier who in the midst of the effeminate and degenerate Byzantine Court stood forth a man, and of an Empress who was not only an intelligent ruler, but a warm-hearted and very beautiful woman.—Literary Review.

Roberts, Charles G. D. In the morning of time. 1919. F 17359

A story of the struggles of earliest man to overcome the difficulties of his existence. There are tense moments when fire is discovered and food cooked for the first time. Numerous conflicts with colossal beasts of the jungle are thrillingly related.

Sabin, Edwin L. Desert dust. 1922. F 17583

Early railroad building, boom towns, and a journey across the desert in a wagon train lend romance and adventure to this story of the taming of the wilderness.

Scott, Sir Walter. The talisman, a tale of the crusaders; with reproductions in colour of twelve original drawings by Simon Harmon Vedder. 1920. F 17845

Seltzer, Charles Alden. Square Deal Sanderson. 1922. F 17922

The hero acquired the epithet "Square Deal" from his honesty and courage, and in this highly colored western tale he sustains his reputation in the face of great obstacles and danger.

Smith, Arthur D. Howden. The Doom trail. 1922. F 18213

A swift moving tale of the contest in America about 1725 between the French and English to secure the Indian fur trade. A slight love story weaves its way through the excitement of Indian wars and strange adventure.

Speare, Dorothy. Dancers in the dark. 1922. F 18286

A picture of the modern "prom girl" as seen by a young Smith graduate. Three different types of girls, Jerry, the excitement eater, Sarah, the languid vamp, and Joy, the little New England music student, have an apartment together in Boston. Their carefree existence and endless good times make very good reading.

Stribling, T. S. Birthright. 1922. F 18433

Mr. Stribling, a native of Tennessee, presents the problem of the southern negro with the fidelity and detail which make his novel valuable as a sociological study, while an absorbing plot well worked out holds the attention of the reader not otherwise interested in the subject.

Stringer, Arthur. The prairie child. 1922. F 18459

Continuation of The prairie wife (F 18429) and The prairie mother (F 18432), written in the same style and dealing as much with the marital troubles of the child's parents as with "Dinkie" himself.

Thayer, Lee. Q. E. D. 1922. F 27771

Peter Clancy, red-haired detective, is the hero of this first-rate mystery story. The interest in the persons involved and in the rapidly moving events is well sustained.—Literary Review.

Toohy, John Peter. Fresh every hour; detailing the adventures, comic and pathetic of one Jimmy Martin, purveyor of publicity, a young gentleman possessing sublime nerve, whimsical imagination, colossal impudence, and, withal, the heart of a child. 1922. F 27830

Jimmy is press agent for an amusement park in Coney Island and in his attempts to advertise meets with some rare experiences.

Tully, Jim. Emmett Lawler. 1922. F 27902

You will never guess what Tully's people will do next. They are illogical, inconsistent, incalculable—in a word, human; men and not marionettes moved by wires. They are under no bonds to do the graceful thing. They do disgraceful things, without any particular emotion about them.—Daily News.

Underwood, Edna Worthley, ed. and tr. Famous stories from foreign countries. 1921. F 27930

Contents: The little Blancheffeure, by R. H. Bartsch.—The exchange, by S. Cech.—Chai, by A. Aharonian.—In prison, by A. Aharonian.—The elopement, by P. Petöfi.—Saidjah, by Multatuli.—Abisag, by J. Vrchlický.—The king's clothes, by K. Mikazáth.—When the bright nights were, by P. Rosegger.—The point of view, by A. L. Kielland.—My traveling companion, by P. Päivrinta.

Wallace, Edna Kingsley. The stars in the pool; a prose poem for lovers. 1920. F 18913

An exquisite tale that has the shimmering grace and spiritual charm of the romantic spirit of chivalry.—Boston Transcript.

Williams, Ben Ames. All the brothers were valiant. 1919. F 19519

A stirring story of a whaling boat in the South Seas, a hidden treasure of pearls, savage love, a meeting on shipboard with brother against brother.—Booklist.

Wolff, William Almon. Sold south. 1921. F 19723

Here is a novel of Latin American adventure with a singular difference—it might almost be classed as propaganda for a better understanding of our neighbors.—Literary Review.

GENERAL WORKS

Libraries, Library Economy

Brown, George E. Indexing; a handbook of instruction. 1921. J 7375
(Coptic series for librarians.)

Dana, John Cotton. On buying and using print; practical suggestions from a librarian to the business man. 1921. J 7290

Fellows, Dorcas. Cataloging rules, with explanations and illustrations. 1922. J 7288

A revision of the preliminary edition published by the New York State Library in 1914 as Library School Bulletin 36. Based on the A. L. A. catalog rules.

Krause, Louise B. Better business libraries; talks with executives. 1922. J 7298

Although written primarily for business executives, they contain helpful suggestions both for public and business librarians.—The Index Press.

The Wilson Bulletin. v.1, November, 1914–Mar. 1922.

Devoted to the H. W. Wilson Company publications and their uses in library service.

Newspapers

Park, Robert E. The immigrant press and its control. 1922. J 7261
(Americanization studies.)

In a few pages the author is able to outline the pitifully inadequate attempts we Americans of the older immigration are making to get in touch with over one thousand papers written in over thirty foreign languages.—Survey.

The Stars and Stripes. A history of the Stars and Stripes, official newspaper of the American Expeditionary Forces in France, from February 8, 1918, to June 13, 1919. 1921. J 7280

PHILOSOPHY

Avalon, Arthur, tr. The serpent power. 1919. L 14607

"Being the Shat-chakranirūpana and Pādūkā-Panchaka, two works on Tantrik Yoga, translated from the Sanskrit."

DeWulf, Maurice. Philosophy and civilization in the middle ages. 1922. L 14660
(Louis Clark Vanuxem Foundation.)

Laird, John. A study in realism. 1920. L 13821

The author enters fearlessly into the most technical and involved of all philosophical problems such as those relating to the theory of perception. He achieves the miracle of writing clearly, pungently and even playfully, about these things.—Literary Review.

More, Paul Elmer. The religion of Plato. 1921. L 14621
(The Greek tradition, vol. I.)

Mr. More regards Platonism as the characteristic expression of the Hellenic spirit and advocates the Christian tradition based upon it as the gospel by which alone the world today may be saved from gross materialism.—Nation.

Psychology

Hazlitt, Henry. The way to will-power. 1922. L 14000

The author explains that will power is only desire; he tries to show that it is ideals and the desire to reach them that lead toward the right path. He discusses habit, thought control, concentration, moral courage, programs of work, also psychoanalysis in a common-sense sort of way.

Moore, Jared Sparks. The foundations of psychology. 1921. L 13997

Smith, Stevenson, and Guthrie, Edwin R. General psychology in terms of behavior. 1921. L 13996

Wingfield-Stratford, Esmé. The open road to mind training. 1922. L 13993

A popular book resembling Dana's How to train your mind (L 13895). Much time is spent in condemning the secret systems of mind training frequently offered for sale.

Pathological Psychology

Psychoanalysis

Pierce, Frederick. Our unconscious mind and how to use it. 1922. L 13109

The author tells in simple untechnical language the relation the unconscious part of our personality plays to the conscious part. He believes that practical application can be made of this knowledge and that there are very few problems of character or personality that it can not help.

Stekel, Wilhelm. The beloved ego; foundations of the new study of the psyche. 1921. L 13232

White, William A. Foundations of psychiatry. 1921. L 13991
(Nervous and mental disease monograph series.)

Psychic Phenomena, New Thought

Dresser, Horatio W. Spiritual health and healing. 1922. L 13215

A method of silent healing which teaches the gaining of health and happiness through the psychology of prayer and faith in God. The author claims that all our illnesses, woes and vices are intimately related and that to be rid of one is to be rid of all.

Flammarion, Camille. At the moment of death; manifestations and apparitions of the dying, "doubles," phenomena of occultism. 1922. L 13522, 2

The author in this second volume of his trilogy "Death and its Mystery" tries to prove that a human being consists not only of a visible, ponderable body but likewise of an imponderable psychic element capable of manifestations at a distance, unrestricted by considerations of time and space.

Child Study

Harrison, Elizabeth. The unseen side of child life, for the guardians of young children. 1922. L 13698

The purpose of this book is to show that much may be done to free children from many of the limitations of inherited traits and too confined an environment, and to give to each young life some of the joy of the inner growth of will-power.—Introduction.

Scott, Miriam Finn. Meeting your child's problems. 1922. L 14308

A series of essays to help parents develop the possibilities that lie in their children.

Fortune Telling

Kent, Cicely. Telling fortunes by cards. 1922. L 13467

Full advice on correct procedure describing various methods and illustrating with concrete cases. There is also a chapter on the ouija board.

—Telling fortunes by tea leaves; how to read your fate in a teacup. 1922. L 13468

A thorough analysis of the science of tea-cup reading from the standpoint of serious study.

Ethics, Success

American Academy of Political and Social Science, Philadelphia. The ethics of the professions and of business. 1922. L 14424

(Annals.)

Contents: The significance of the ethical codes for the professions.—The ethical codes of lawyers.—The ethics of the medical profession.—The ethical codes of the engineers.—The ethics of the architects.—Ethical standards for teachers, librarians, ministers and social workers.—Ethical standards for journalists.—The ethical code of accountants.—Ethics in business.

Brent, Charles H., bp. Leadership. 1920. M 4795, 1907

(William Belden Noble lectures.)

Will stand as a classic work on that subject. These discourses are distinctly inspirational in their presentation of great motives and noble examples.—Outlook.

Marden, Orison Swett. Round pegs in square holes. 1922. L 14432

Another success book on how to secure the most benefit from one's life work. Chapters on such subjects as: Fit yourself to fit your career; In harmony with your job; Success after failure, etc.

Shurter, Edwin Du Bois, ed. Selections on American citizenship for use in the declamation contests of the University Interscholastic League. 1921. L 14234

(University of Texas bulletin.)

RELIGION

Bible

Bible. The modern reader's Bible for schools: the Old Testament, by Richard G. Moulton. 1922. M 6401

Peters, John P. Bible and spade. 1922. M 4734, 10

(The Bross library.)

A discussion of the archeological discoveries that throw light on the written documents of the Bible.

Scott, Ernest Findlay. The New Testament today. 1921. M 6799

Professor Scott tells about the changes that the previous ten or twenty years have wrought in this subject, believing that these serve to maintain the authority of the Bible, and bring its essential message into clearer relief.

Doctrinal Theology

Gore, Charles, bp. Belief in God. 1922. M 9036

(The reconstruction of belief.)

The journal of religion; continuing the Biblical world, and The American journal of theology, issued by the Divinity Faculty and Conference of the University of Chicago. v.1. 1921.

Bi-monthly.

Kelman, John. The foundations of faith. 1921. M 4736, 1921

(The Cole lectures.)

The lectures constitute an unusually liberal interpretation of religious faith, regardless of the name under which it is known or the deity in whose name it is cherished.—Literary Review.

Machen, J. Gresham. The origin of Paul's religion. 1921. M 9505

(The James Sprunt lectures.)

Practical and Devotional Religion

Borgongini-Duca, Francis. The word of God; a series of short meditations on the Sunday gospels. 1921. M 8646

The Gospel read in the Mass comes first, then the short meditation and finally the lesson or instruction drawn from the text.

Brent, Charles H., bp. Adventure for God. 1920. M 11209

(The Bishop Paddock lectures.)

Bishop Brent outlines in vivid, effective form the impetus, character and purpose or goal of the active Christian life. The style is vigorous and direct and the thought is practical and helpful.—Public Opinion.

—The consolations of the cross; addresses on the seven words of the dying Lord, together with two sermons. 1919. M 8644

—With God in the world; a series of papers. 1919. M 8689

Cope, Henry F. Principles of Christian service; a text-book in the standard course in teacher-training, outlined and approved by the Sunday school council of evangelical denominations. 1921. M 8816

Gunsaulus, Frank W. Prayers of Frank W. Gunsaulus. 1922. M 9084

It is difficult for one who knew Dr. Gunsaulus and often heard him to read these prayers without emotion. They are beautifully worded but spontaneous and full of deep feeling.—W. A. E. in Daily News.

Sermons

Brent, Charles H., bp. Liberty, and other sermons. 1906. M 5053

—Prisoners of hope, and other sermons. 1915. M 5054

These sermons have the prophetic quality which differentiates them at once from the great mass of sermonic literature. They are characterized by broad information, fervent imagination, and the spirit of devotion.—Outlook.

Jowett, J. H. The eagle life, and other studies in the Old Testament. 1922. M 5101

Forty-eight cheerful, inspiring sermonettes, not exceeding three pages in length, based on texts from the Old Testament.—Booklist.

—The Friend on the road, and other studies in the Gospels. 1922. M 5102

A companion volume to The eagle life (M 5101), based on texts from the Gospels, refreshing and comforting.—Booklist.

The Church, Church Unity

Agar, Frederick A. Modern money methods for the church. 1921. M 8574

Whenever the church of Jesus Christ will provide generous financial support for the work of the local parish and adequate resources for the preaching of the gospel around the world, there will result a new power within the church and a new respect from the people outside.—Introduction.

Garraghan, Gilbert J. The Catholic church in Chicago, 1673-1871; an historical sketch. 1921. B 7803

An excellent narrative of the Roman Catholic Church in early Chicago, providing a heretofore little known chapter on the history of the city itself.

Holmes, John Haynes. New churches for old; a plea for community religion. 1922. M 9192

From the failure of existing churches Dr. Holmes argues the necessity for establishing new ones based on democratic social idealism.

Parks, Leighton. The crisis of the churches. 1922. M 9726

The rector of St. Bartholomew's in New York believes that the way to Christian unity in this critical time is to be found through fellowship rather than combination.

Religious Education

Betts, George Herbert. The new program of religious education. 1921. M 8261

(The Abingdon religious education texts.)

A comparison of the two currents of religious opinion, the one laying emphasis on evangelism and the other on training; and a plea for the adoption by the church of a definite program of religious education, with properly trained teachers and the cooperation of the children's parents.—Booklist.

Hartley, Gertrude. The use of projects in religious education. 1921. M 8262

(Judson training manuals for the school of the church.)

Meredith, William V. Pageantry and dramatics in religious education. 1921. M 8260

(Community training school series.)

Urges the importance and rightful place of dramatic and play instincts in home, church and community, with suggestions for plays and pageants that can be given with simple, homemade stage properties.—Booklist.

Christian Art and Symbolism

Brooks, Neil C. The sepulchre of Christ in art and liturgy, with special reference to the liturgical drama. 1921. J 4854, 7¹¹

(University of Illinois studies in language and literature.)

Vogt, Von Ogden. Art and religion. 1921.
M 4386

A book by a congregational minister of Chicago that is "rich in practical wisdom, real esthetic insight, and a religion that insists on being true to itself even while it is most anxious to get results" (Post).

THE SOCIAL SCIENCES

Social Theory and Psychology

Cram, Ralph Adams. Towards the great peace. 1922. L 15453

(Dartmouth Alumni lectureships.)

Contents: Introduction.—A world at the crossroads.—A working philosophy.—The social organism.—The industrial problem.—The political organization of society.—The function of education and art.—The problem of organic religion.—Personal responsibility.

An earnest plea for a strong philosophy to counteract the moral disintegration following the Great War.

Lindeman, Eduard C. The community; an introduction to the study of community leadership and organization. 1921.

L 15318

As a whole the book affords a practicable chart of community tendencies and organization currents, and every worker in this field will find his objectives made easier by a perusal of its pages.—Survey.

Lippmann, Walter. Public opinion. 1922. L 15317

Contents: Introduction.—Approaches to the world outside.—Stereotypes.—Interests.—The making of a common will.—The image of democracy.—News-papers.—Organized intelligence.

A remarkable analytical study of what goes to make up "public opinion"—press, politics, etc., treated psychologically and sociologically.

Platt, Charles. The psychology of social life; a materialistic study with an idealistic conclusion. 1922. L 15385

Presents society in its relation to the individual and considers the social aspects of such instincts as habit, fear and fighting, sex, convention, and superstition. Written with humor and against a background of literary and historical allusions, it makes an interesting diversion for the general reader.

Stoddard, Lothrop. The revolt against civilization; the menace of the under man. 1922. L 15355

A discussion of the problems of social revolution in the light of biological discoveries confirmed and amplified by investigations in other fields of science—especially psychology—with a plan for race betterment proposed through a eugenic program.

Statistics, Yearbooks

The Mexican Year Book; the standard authority on Mexico. 1920–21. 1922.

*R 3587

Shelved in Civics Dept.

census, including distribution of retail and wholesale dealers, comp. from trade sources. 1921. L 15614

Economics

Boucke, O. Fred. The development of economics, 1750–1900. 1921. L 16564

A textbook for college students, consisting of a short history of economics as a science, written in a comparatively simple style. The author reduces the systems to four, historicism, naturalism, utilitarianism, marginism.

Fradenburgh, A. G. Elements of economics. 1921. L 16713

A clearly written text book, and rather elementary in style. It covers the subject well, is very logical as to sequence, and the figures quoted are the latest obtainable (1921).

Hughes, R. O. Economic civics. 1921. L 16570

Lapp, John A. Economics and the community. 1922. L 16575

A textbook in economics sufficiently simple and interesting to make possible the introduction of that study in the lower high school grades. The different themes . . . are treated concretely and with a view to forming the basis for the gathering of data by the students in their own community.—The Survey.

Robinson, John Beverley. Economics of liberty. 1916. L 16586

A brief statement of the system of social organization first enunciated by Proudhon.

Simpson, Kemper. Economics for the accountant. 1921. L 16590

The first to offer to the accountant a clear, concise analysis of those elements of economic theory of direct and practical application to his daily work.—Industrial Arts Index.

Economic History and Conditions

MacLean, Annie Marion. Some problems of reconstruction. 1921. L 16578

(The national social science series.)

A condensed volume presenting the main facts, theories and controversies concerning the problems of industrial unrest—housing, woman's labor, Americanization, the negro, education, radicalism, etc.

Riordan, E. J. Modern Irish trade and industry. 1920. L 16584

A full history of Irish trade and industry from 1850 to the present day by the secretary of the Irish Industrial Development Association. One chapter summarizes the period from 1600 to 1850.

Thompson, Wallace. Trading with Mexico. 1921. L 16591

The author is a firm believer in the policy of taking up the "white man's burden," and in supporting the American pioneer whose weapons of conquest are "dollars and brains and energy."—Book Review Digest.

Public Utilities

Dixon, Frank Haigh. Railroads and government; their relations in the United States, 1910-1921. 1922. L 20232

It is intended as a textbook but anyone interested in the subject will find it readable. The author says in the preface: "More experience and experiment have been crowded into these ten years than into all the remainder of our railroad history for nearly a century."

McKay, Charles W. Telephone rates and values. 1921. L 20197

Labor and Laboring Classes

Academy of Political Science, New York. Constructive experiments in industrial co-operation between employers and employees; ed. by Sam A. Lewisohn and Parker Thomas Moon. 1922. L 7286, 9IV

Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. Chicago Joint Board. The clothing workers of Chicago, 1910-1922. 1922. L 17008

Archbald, Hugh. The four hour day in coal; a study of the relation between the engineering of the organization of work and the discontent among the workers in the coal mines. 1922. L 17009

The fundamental causes of strikes have been the same for a generation, this engineer proves, and they will continue as long as the underground operations are run as they are.—Book Review Digest.

Bloch, Louis. The coal miners' insecurity; facts about irregularity of employment in the bituminous coal industry in the United States. 1922. L 16790

Dependable data . . . which show some of the economic facts behind the unrest of the miners.—Book Review Digest.

Chenery, William L. Industry and human welfare. 1922. L 16789

(The social welfare library.)

Mr. Chenery discusses the effect of the factory system on the welfare of the American people. He does not take up industrial control, but rather the effect of industry on the worker and his family, wages, hours of labor and the hazards of industry.—Chicago Daily News.

Harvard University. Graduate school of business administration. Labor terminology. 1921. L 20353, 25

(Bureau of Business Research bulletin.)

A first attempt to give definite meanings to the terms employed by labor unions in their disputes with employers. The object is to simplify the solution of labor problems to the extent of avoiding verbal misunderstandings between employers and employees.—Book Review Digest.

Lowe, Boutelle Ellsworth. The international protection of labor. 1921. L 16787

Gives a complete survey of the movement for the international protection of labor in the chronological order of events up to 1914, including its relation to America and to the formation of the International labor organization of the League of Nations.

Pound, Arthur. The iron man in industry; an outline of the social significance of automatic machinery. 1922. L 16792

Mr. Pound attempts to give an impartial discussion of the industrial problem, taking into account the effect of new tools and methods upon human nature and the social order. Though not scientific in method it is instructive and interesting.

Schneider, William R. The law of workmen's compensation; rules of procedure, tables, forms, synopses of acts. 1922. 2v. N 5509

Tipper, Harry. Human factors in industry; a study of group organization. 1922. L 16793

"Deals with the mental factors of industrial relationships, with organization conditions, and with experiments in changing and modifying organizations." A keen analysis of existing labor problems.

Socialism

Le Rossignol, James Edward. What is socialism? An explanation and criticism of the doctrines and proposals of "scientific socialism." 1921. L 17599

Includes most of the material of an earlier work, Orthodox socialism (L 8624). The various sets of socialism are defined and the tenets of the Marxian variety are refuted one by one.

William, Maurice. The social interpretation of history; a refutation of the Marxian economic interpretation of history. 1921. L 17647

Finance

Banks and Banking

Lanier, Henry Wysham. A century of banking in New York, 1822-1922. 1922. L 17383

Magee, H. W. A treatise on the law of national and state banks; including the clearing house and trust companies and bank acceptances, with an appendix of the National bank and Federal reserve acts and also instructions relative to the organization and powers of national banks. 1921. *N 5498

A simple account in non-technical language of the mechanism of modern exchange. Matters connected with the handling of money and methods of modern finance that the average person should know are plainly told.

Willis, H. Parker, and Edwards, George W. Banking and business. 1922. L 17400

Stocks, Credit

American Exchange National Bank, New York. Acceptances; their importance as a means of increasing and simplifying domestic and foreign trade, with a digest of the amendments to the Federal Reserve act, regulations of the Federal Reserve Board, the United States warehouse act, the Edge export finance act, and the Federal bill of lading act. 1921. L 17381

Kavanaugh, Thomas J. Bank credit methods and practice. 1921. L 17382

The author aims "to elucidate in the most simple language" what technical authors usually delight in making most complicated by a too classical treatment.

Meeker, J. Edward. The work of the stock exchange. 1922. L 17479

Written by the economist of the New York Stock exchange, the book is sound, scholarly, and illuminating, and it throws a clear light of precise information upon the cryptic business of buying and selling stocks and bonds.—Chicago Evening Post.

Sakolski, A. M. Railroad securities; a course of study with references. 1921. L 20247

Another copy in Civics Dept.

Wall, Alexander. Analytical credits; a study in brief of the methods used to accumulate, tabulate and analyze information for the protection of loans and credit extensions. 1921. L 17384

Lister, Thomas D. Medical examination for life insurance. 1921. L 19262

Public Finance, Taxation

Beman, Lamar T., comp. Selected articles on current problems in taxation. 1921. L 17740

(The handbook series.)

Contents: General principles of taxation.—The sales tax.—The state income tax.

It is the purpose of this volume to make information on a vital public question easily available by reproducing the best that has been written on each side.—Wilson Bulletin.

Friedman, Elisha M. International finance and its reorganization. 1922. L 17713

"The aim of this book is to present a concise account of the financial changes in Europe during and since the war, and a summary of the proposals for financial reconstruction."—Preface.

Rossmoore, E. E. Federal income tax problems—1922. L 17770

Political Science

U. S. Government and Politics

Behind the mirrors; the psychology of disintegration at Washington, by the author of The mirrors of Washington. 1922. L 16481

The anonymous author does not find much to praise in the inner circle, but his comments are pithy, and humor is not lacking.

Colegrove, Kenneth. American citizens and their government. 1921. L 18402

Professor Colegrove has described governmental processes in a free running account which is almost as interesting as a work of fiction. His text is illuminated with anecdote and action, and minutiae and detail are effectively buried.—Chicago Daily News.

Dunn, Arthur W. Community civics for city schools. 1921. L 18401

Mayers, Lewis. The federal service; a study of the system of personnel administration of the United States government. 1922. L 18184

(Studies in administration.)

It is a most important document for all students of our government and for all who would criticise it intelligently or who hope to take part in it.—Post.

Taft, William Howard. Liberty under law; an interpretation of the principles of our constitutional government. 1922. L 18035

.(The Cutler lectures.)

He analyzes it thoroughly, showing where we can interpret it more fully to our advantage and how also showing how it has preserved our liberties in the past and is competent to achieve the same result in the future.

Local Government

State and Municipal

Capes, William Parr. The modern city and its government. 1922. L 18249

Its aim is to combine the different points of view of the city official, the student of government, and the critical observer, and draw practical conclusions based on experience from an analysis of their claims.

Fassett, Charles M. Handbook of municipal government. 1922. L 18253

Lists the political and financial desiderata of city government and seems to have been written more particularly for the education of new voters.—Survey.

Kimball, Everett. State and municipal government in the United States. 1922.

L 18403

Discusses the organization, nature and operation of all forms of local government, state, county, township, and city. Statistics are taken from 1920 census.

Mayo, Katherine. Mounted justice; true stories of the Pennsylvania state police. 1922.

L 18424

Contents: The Coughlin case.—Between two days.—“Quick as God will let you.”—The patent-leather shoes.—The hand-picked job.—The blazing mountain.—Advertising mustard.—Under the yellow flag.—Cut-beans and company.

The main object of these nine authentic narratives is to indicate the importance of the organization for the welfare and protection of country folk. Through former writings on the subject, Miss Mayo influenced New York public opinion to demand a similar organization.

Van de Water, Frederic F. Grey riders; the story of the New York state troopers. 1922.

L 18425

Their adventures are as dramatic in many respects as those of the Northwest Mounted Police, and are eye-openers regarding conditions in the rural sections of our civilized United States.

Immigration

Roberts, Kenneth L. Why Europe leaves home; a true account of the reasons which cause Central Europeans to overrun America, which lead Russians to rush to Constantinople, which coax Greek royalty and commoners into strange byways and hedges, and which induce Englishmen and Scotchmen to go out at night. 1922.

L 16086

Contents: Why Europe leaves home.—Ports of embarkation.—The existence of an emergency.—The remedy.—Waifs of an empire.—The Constantinople refugees.—They sometimes come back.—The beer worshippers.—Scotland for Scotch.

A discussion of emigration written in an extremely popular style.

L 16089

(University of Texas bulletin.)

Stauffer, Robert E., ed. The American spirit in the writings of Americans of foreign birth. 1922.

L 16088

The general spirit of the book is excellent from the point of view of the melting pot, says the Boston Transcript, while suggesting that expressions should be obtained from different classes of persons, and not only, as here, from those newcomers who have succeeded.

The Negro

Johnsen, Julia E., comp. Selected articles on the negro problem. 1921.

L 16176

(The handbook series.)

An excellent reference book. Unusually good judgment has been used by the compiler in selecting these opinions, and the result is a well-balanced symposium.—The Nation.

International Relations

Hill, Charles E. Leading American treaties. 1922.

L 21466

Contents: The treaties with France, 1778.—The treaty of independence, Paris, 1783.—Jay's treaty, 1794.—The convention of peace, commerce, and navigation with France, 1800.—The Louisiana purchase, 1803.—The treaty of Ghent, 1814.—The convention of 1818 with Great Britain.—The Florida purchase, 1819.—The Webster-Ashburton treaty, 1842.—The treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, 1848.—The Perry and Harris treaties with Japan, 1854 and 1858.—The Alaska purchase, 1867.—The treaty of Washington, 1871.—The treaty of Paris with Spain, 1898.—The Panama canal treaties.

A source book for general United States history, as well as an aid for the study of diplomatic history. Details of international law are interwoven in connection with the negotiation of treaties and their results.

Pasvolsky, Leo. Russia in the Far East. 1922.

L 16367

Only a Russia restored to national statehood, he declares, can deal authoritatively with the question of the preservation or nonpreservation of the territorial integrity of what was formerly the Russian Empire. Communism is, he argues, bound to disappear.—Times (London).

Tokutomi, Ichiro. Japanese-American relations. 1922.

L 16368

Written for Japanese readers, and while we may not agree with the author's viewpoint, we can not but admire his fair-mindedness and moderation.

Walsh, Edmund A., ed. The history and nature of international relations. 1922.

L 16369

(Georgetown foreign service series.)

Lectures by authorities on such subjects as the fundamentals in a scientific study of international relations, medieval diplomacy, development of diplomacy in modern times, and the United States as a factor in the development of international relations.

League of Nations

Disarmament Conference

Colcord, Samuel. The great deception, bringing into the light the real meaning and mandate of the Harding vote as to peace. 1921.

L 21474

To show that the phenomenal vote for Harding is not to be interpreted as a repudiation by the people of every form of league or association of nations, and that disarmament alone is not sufficient guarantee for world peace without the backing of some form of international cooperation.—Book Review Digest.

Sullivan, Mark. The great adventure at Washington; the story of the conference. 1922.

L 21474

A vivid description written while the conference was in progress and therefore before the results were known.

Tarbell, Ida M. Peacemakers—blessed and otherwise; observations, reflections and irritations at an international conference. 1922.

L 21480

Miss Tarbell's attitude toward the conference delegates is expressed by one of her chapter headings, "Put yourself in their places."

England

Government and Politics

Belloc, H. The House of Commons and monarchy. 1922.

L 16403

Mr. Belloc has a way with him that compels respect; a model style, lucidity, and confidence. Even when we disagree, we admire.—Saturday Review.

Masterman, C. F. G. How England is governed. 1922. L 18583

An untechnical account of British processes of law and government institutions, by a former cabinet member.

(American Chemical Society monograph series.)

Geology

Kozminsky, Isidore. The magic and science of jewels and stones. 1922. K 20485

The book is a singularly interesting miscellany of legend, anecdote, cabalistic lore, ancient and medieval, with occasional excursions into the Australian and Maori folk magic . . . all immensely entertaining.—Literary Review.

Leith, C. K. The economic aspects of geology. 1921. K 20402

Verrill, A. Hyatt. Rivers and their mysteries. 1922. K 20287

Geography and geology presented in entertaining form.—Wisconsin Library Bulletin.

Natural History, Anthropology

Armitage, F. P. Diet and race; anthropological essays. 1922. K 20911

Contents: Diet and physique.—Diet and colour. Diet and cranial form.

A group of convincing and entertaining essays liberally sprinkled with diagrams and charts showing the effects various diets have upon physical characteristics.

Jenkins, Oliver P. Interesting neighbors. 1922. K 20690

Nature stories which are certain to hold the child's interest and at the same time have the advantage of being instructive.

Lundborg, Hermann, and others, ed. The Swedish nation in word and picture, together with short summaries of the contributions made by Swedes within the fields of anthropology, race-biology, genetics and eugenics. 1921. *V 1934

Robinson, Rowland E. Silver fields, and other sketches of a farmer-sportsman. 1921. K 20706

Smallwood, W. M. Man—the animal. 1922. K 20618

A popularly written view of the achievements of modern biological science, dealing with the cell, reproduction, the nervous system, disease, and heredity, at the same time setting forth the limits which scientific investigation has reached at various points.

Zoology

Barnes, Claude T. Mammals of Utah. 1922. K 22161

(Bulletin of the University of Utah.)

Bouvier, E. L. The psychic life of insects. 1922. K 21885

Discusses the attraction of insects to light and their repulsion from it, the reaction of insects to gravity, morbid tropisms which lead them to apparent suicide, the bee which must have the leaves of the red poppy to line its nest—all sorts of interesting problems of behavior.—Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Butler, Arthur G. Birds of Great Britain and Ireland; order passerres. 1907-1908. 2v. *K 22034

- Fabre, J. Henri. More beetles. 1922. K 21952

Chapters reprinted from Life and love of the insect (K 18047) and Social life in the insect world (K 18046).

- Hornaday, William T. The minds and manners of wild animals; a book of personal observations. 1922. K 21594

Gives many proofs of the amazing reasoning of animals from the small trap-door spider to the majestic grizzly. Even the wisdom of serpents is shown.—Bookman.

- Scoville, Samuel. Wild folk. 1922. K 21777

Tales about the bear, black cat, skunk, rattle-snake, chipmunk, coon, bull moose, sea otter, fox, squirrel, rabbit and birds. They are unusual and fascinating narratives of actual experiences, showing keen observation of wild life.

- Thomson, J. Arthur. The haunts of life. 1922. K 21826

Six instructive and delightful lectures on the shore of the sea, the open sea, the depths of the sea, the fresh waters, the dry land, and the air, combining with the detailed knowledge of the expert the rare gift of imagination.

USEFUL ARTS

- Fleming, A. P. M., and Pearce, J. G. Research in industry the basis of economic progress. 1922. K 22286
(Pitman's industrial administration series.)

Medicine

- Atkinson, Charles E. Lessons on tuberculosis and consumption for the household, showing how to prevent tuberculosis, how to recognize its first symptoms, how to win back health. 1922. N 1890

The book seems to cover the ground quite thoroughly. : Whoever reads it will know what the disease implies and involves, and, if he be a sufferer, it will relieve him at once of panic and of too great expectations of speedy and easy cure.—Chicago Evening Post.

- Fuller, Henry C. The story of drugs; a popular exposition of their origin, preparation and commercial importance. 1922.

(The Century books of useful science.) N 1698

The topics discussed have been suggested to the author by well known professional men as questions that the general public are most vitally interested in. They include such popular subjects as patent medicines, cosmetics, the use of alcohol, etc.

- Lord, Frederick Taylor. Pneumonia. 1922. N 1757

(Harvard health talks.)

Addressed to the layman in non-technical language, describing types and causes of pneumonia with suggestions for prevention and treatment.—Booklist.

- Osler, Sir William. The evolution of modern medicine. 1921. N 1227

(Silliman memorial lectures.)

Contents: Introduction.—Greek medicine.—Mediæval medicine.—The Renaissance and the rise of anatomy and physiology.—The rise and development of modern medicine.—The rise of preventive medicine.

As the author states, this is "an aeroplane flight over the progress of medicine." It is a work of intuition rather than research, written in an agreeable and fascinating style.

Physiology and Hygiene

- Baldwin, Bird T. The physical growth of children from birth to maturity. 1921. L 18850, 1st

(University of Iowa studies in child welfare.)

- Galloway, Thomas Walton. Sex and life; a message to undergraduate men. 1920. N 1271

- Hall, G. Stanley. Senescence, the last half of life. 1922. N 578

Both the description of old age in its typical form and a prescription for making that end of life sane and beautiful . . . He reminds us that old age no less than adolescence, has its emotional crises, its storms, its need of repression and its sentimentalities.—Post.

- Harrow, Benjamin. Glands in health and disease. 1922. N 769

A painstaking record of what has been accomplished in the matter of adjustment of glandular disorders, including a discussion of all the glands of the human body and their relation to each other.

Collecting

Furniture, Tapestries, Lace

Calvert, Albert F. The Spanish royal tapestries. 1921. K 28787

(The "Spanish series.")

Five essays on the history of the art of tapestry weaving, the foundation of the Spanish royal collection, the Gothic sacred tapestries, the Gothic-Renaissance transition, and Renaissance tapestries, of great interest to connoisseurs.

Dean, Ben H., and Peterson, Walter J. Modern American period furniture; a guide to the selection of harmonious furnishings for the American home of today. 1917. K 28945

Gade, Felix. Collecting antiques for pleasure and profit; the narrative of twenty-five years search for antique furniture, prints, china, paintings and other works of art, copiously pictured with many fine examples. 1922. K 28956

Every bit of this narrative is personal experience and full of sound advice. It covers a vast variety of objects and treats collecting as an art, a sport, and an investment.

Head, Mrs. R. E. The lace and embroidery collector; a guide to collectors of old lace and embroidery. 1922. K 28797

(The collectors series.)

This is intended for the small buyer and collector. It is an interestingly written book, tracing the history of laces and telling how they were adopted from one country to another.

Coins

Gutttag Bros., New York. Rare coins of the United States. 1921. K 28272

Motion Pictures

Emerson, John, and Loos, Anita. Breaking into the movies. 1921. E 13324

Childs, W. M. Holidays in tents. 1921. K 30914

A little book on how to camp and how to outfit with a very pleasant narrative background and plenty of useful advice.—Literary Review.

Heilner, Van Campen. Adventures in angling; a book of salt water fishing. 1922. K 30827

Full of special information for the man who fishes in either the Atlantic or Pacific, and full of such thrilling experiences as to make a fascinating tale for the general reader.

Johnson, Frank Mackie. Reminiscent tales of a humble angler. 1921. K 30829

By an author who has sufficient poetic imagination to appreciate the beauty of nature's varying moods; sufficient of the fisherman's veracity to retail fish yarns for the gullible.—Chicago Evening Post.

Van Dyke, John C. The open spaces; incidents of nights and days under the blue sky. 1922. K 30517

Reminiscences of out-door life in the eighties interspersed with reflections on life in the wild and in the city. The descriptions of cow-punching days are penned with an artist's love of color and are vivid with atmosphere.

Golf

O. M. Scott & Sons Co., Marysville, O. The seeding and care of golf courses. 1922. K 30611

Wethered, Roger and Joyce. Golf from two sides. 1922. K 30619

Miss Wethered recently won the British women's championship . . . and Roger Wethered two weeks later made his way to the semi-finals of the British amateur event. The two have collaborated in producing a volume on golf dealing adequately with the game for men and women.—Literary Review.

LITERATURE

Atlantic Monthly. Story, essay, and verse; modern prose and poetry selected from the Atlantic Monthly, edited with an introduction by Charles Swain Thomas and Harry Gilbert Paul. 1921. J 7047

Beerbohm, Max. LYNCH, BOHUN. Max Beerbohm in perspective, with a prefatory letter by M. B. 1921. J 6381

An attractive book containing sketches by an ardent admirer of Max Beerbohm, and illustrated with cartoons of and by him. The London Times says that "as a Max Museum it is well worth the price of entry."

Cairns, William B. British criticisms of American writings; a contribution to the study of Anglo-American literary relationships. 1918-1922. 2v. J 4855, 1, 14

(University of Wisconsin studies in language and literature.)

The Cambridge History of American Literature. A short history of American literature; based upon the Cambridge history of American literature, ed. by William Peterfield Trent, John Erskine, Stuart P. Sherman, and Carl Van Doren. 1922. J 7046

Contents: Colonial writers.—Knickerbocker writers.—Poe.—Transcendentalists.—Poets, essayists, romancers.—Lincoln.—Whitman.—The New nation.—The short story.—Historians and scholars.—Preachers and philosophers.—The English language in America.

France, Anatole. The opinions of Anatole France, recorded by Paul Gsell. 1922. E 2989

In spicy epigrams we are given his views on a great variety of subjects, and from them we gain rare glimpses of the man himself.

Hardy, Thomas. CHEW, SAMUEL C. Thomas Hardy, poet and novelist. 1921. J 7762

(Bryn Mawr notes and monographs.)

He carries the Hardy microcosm in his head as if he were an intelligent concordance. In a brief space he packs more trustworthy information about the greatest living English author than can be found anywhere else . . . He does the novels justice, and yet he knows that Hardy is a superb poet.—Carl Van Doren in The Nation.

Hertz, Joseph H., comp. A book of Jewish thoughts selected and arranged by the chief rabbi. 1920. J 1939

A learned collection of the profoundest tributes that have been paid to the Jewish race by its own members and others.—Nation.

Lilienthal, Max. PHILIPSON, DAVID. Max Lilienthal, American rabbi; life and writings. 1915. E 4309

Monro, Harold. Some contemporary poets. 1920. J 6378

Contents: Some characteristics of the twentieth century.—A glance backward.—Poets and poetasters of our time.—Some concluding observations.—Note and index.

A list of somewhere near a thousand poets with brief characterizations which the editor states are written without regard to the fear of giving offense. He grants very little merit to those who have held over from the last century.

Prescott, Frederick Clarke. The poetic mind. 1922. J 7665

The author, who is professor of English at Cornell applies Freudian principles to the poet's mental processes with the result that poetry seems to be the product of sub-conscious states, not inspiration.

Ramsay, Robert L., ed. Short stories of America, with an introductory essay, course outline, and reading lists. 1921. J 7763

Written in harmony with the new educational idea of uniting the study of English with that of American life and institutions. The stories are divided into groups on American traditions, landscapes, communities, on social heritage, and the spirit of the place.

Reeve, James Knapp, and Reeve, Agnes M., comp. The new 1001 places to sell manuscripts; a complete guide for all writers who are seeking avenues for the publication of original manuscripts. 1922.

Shelved in Reference Room.

*J 1756

Slosson, Edwin E., and Downey, June E. Plots and personalities; a new method of testing and training the creative imagination. 1922. J 7765

Advocates the use of the "personal" advertisements in newspapers as a stimulant for the literary imagination, and a source for plots for novelists and dramatists.

Tagore, Sir Rabindranath. Glimpses of Bengal, selected from the letters of Sir Rabindranath Tagore, 1885 to 1895. 1921. E 5903

These letters written during Tagore's early manhood reveal vivid and characteristic scenes and episodes of everyday life in India.

Van Doren, Carl. Contemporary American novelists, 1900-1920. 1922. J 7761

Really an analysis of contemporaneous American civilization . . . If all the novels he discusses were destroyed, a reader in the next century could get from Mr. Van Doren's book an intelligent view of the sort of people we Americans are at this hour.—Nation.

Starr, Meredith. The future of the novel, famous authors on their methods; a series of interviews with renowned authors. 1921. J 7764

Among the sixty-two of England's foremost writers interviewed are Maurice Hewlitt, W. L. George, Swinerton, May Sinclair, Eden Phillpotts, Beresford, E. F. Benson, F. Brett Young, Hugh Walpole, and Thomas Burke.

Poetry

Colum, Padraic, ed. Anthology of Irish verse. 1922. E 14366

The most representative and appealing Irish poetry . . . grouped under seven heads, such as poems of the house, the road, the field, the fair and the fireside; then street songs and country side songs; then the Celtic world and the realm of fairy poems of place and of exile, satires and laments and so on.—Daily News.

Johnson, James Weldon, ed. The book of American negro poetry, with an essay on the negro's creative genius. 1922. E 14365

He tells of the negro's achievement in music, the most distinctive American contribution to the arts in the last two or three decades, and he tells of the growth of a race soul which gives to the world in ever larger numbers men and women who count in the emancipation of all humanity.—Survey.

Le Gallienne, Richard, ed. The Le Gallienne book of English verse, with an introduction. 1922. E 14364

(The modern books of verse.)

The aim has been to bring together as much of the best English poetry as it is possible to include in one companionable volume . . . The selections beginning as far back as the eleventh century are brought up to the present day.—Book Review Digest.

Bates, Katharine Lee. Yellow clover; a book of remembrance. 1922. E 10631

Poems addressed to Katharine Coman.

Blunt, Wilfrid Scawen. In vinculis. 1889. E 14499

Cobb, Ann. Kinfolks; Kentucky mountain rhymes. 1922. E 14540

Verse of the Cumberland mountaineers, homely in texture, much of it in dialect, with a tendency to be sentimental. It is, however, illuminant of John Fox Jr.'s country.—Post.

De La Mare, Walter. Down-adown-derry; a book of fairy poems. 1922. E 14582

Light fanciful poems of fairies and witches. Their lyrical lilting rhythms fit them especially for reading aloud either to adults or children, though the imagery and phrasing are too advanced for the youngest.

—The veil, and other poems. 1922. E 14584

These verses have, for the most part, Mr. De La Mare's usual charm—the unusual subject, the sensitive choice of words, the hint of the elusive and the mysterious.—Booklist.

Doolittle, Hilda, (Mrs. Richard Aldington). Hymen, by H. D. 1921. E 10609

In widening her poetical content, H. D. has lost nothing of her beautiful, astringent manner of presentation. A rare artist, indeed! "Hymen" proves her once more among the most important of recent American poets.—Amy Lowell, in Literary Review.

Freeman, John. Music; lyrical and narrative poems. 1922. E 14674

Nature inspires most of the poems, which are simple and melodious, revealing sensitiveness of feeling and a gentle melancholy, but rarely passion or strong emotion.—Book Review Digest.

Gale, Zona. The secret way. 1921. E 14691

Here is a reality of the spirit far more real than the alleged reality of streets, hovels and unwholesome hearts. Miss Gale is not unaware of the hovels, but her gaze includes stars as well as shingles . . . She is one of the pioneers walking far ahead on the spirit's splendid "secret way."—Julia Cooley Altrocchi in the Post.

Jones, Edward Smyth. The sylvan cabin; a centenary ode on the birth of Lincoln. 1922. E 11101

Lovelace, Richard. Lucasta: the poems of Richard Lovelace, esquire; with an introductory note by William Lyon Phelps. 1921. 2v. *E 7845

McKay, Claude. Harlem shadows; with an introduction by Max Eastman. 1922. E 14852

The author is a Jamaica negro who, though writing of New York, breathes throughout his verses a yearning for the colorful tropics. The poems are lyrical and imaginative and not written in dialect. A few voice the hopes and sorrows of his race.

Marks, Jeannette. Willow pollen. 1921. E 14850

The poems show the same tendency as her latest short stories, which have taken the form of allegory, for many of them are highly and often subtly symbolical.—Springfield Republican.

Marquis, Don. Sonnets to a red-haired lady (by a gentleman with a blue beard), and famous love affairs. 1922. E 14851

Clever light verse, a mixture of up-to-date slang and real poetry, in which Blue Beard sounds the praises of his thirty red-haired wives. The second section burlesques fourteen famous love affairs, of Paris and Helen, Tristram and Isolde, Antony and Cleopatra, Othello and Desdemona, etc.

Mew, Charlotte. Saturday market. 1921. E 14874

Not without humor, the cumulative effect of these verses is a high seriousness, an intensified projection of character.—Literary Review.

Mixter, Florence Kilpatrick. Out of mist. 1921. E 14873

"She has attempted a sonnet sequence, vers libre, and the simple rhyming form of verse, all with considerable success . . . The book bears the mark of a distinct and contributive personality—and parts of it are charming."—Margaret V. Saunders in The Daily News.

Morse, Katharine. A gate of cedar. 1922. E 14879

A collection of fresh and musical poems. There is loveliness in all of them, from the nature poems and verse for children to the intimate group entitled "For any lover," and the longer ones on events of New England history.

Nathan, Robert. Youth grows old. 1922. E 14895

Reflections on the passing of time. The individuality of the poet is characterized by "quiet charm," "gentle humor" and "exquisite descriptions of nature." The format is pleasing and tasteful.

Petrarchino, pseud. The sonneteering of Petrarchino. 1921. E 11409

This anonymous Petrarchino has written a short cycle of love sonnets in the most restrained spirit of the classics, warm with the real yearning of love to celebrate in noble form its passion.—Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Porter, Gene Stratton. The fire bird. 1922. E 11411

A narrative of an Indian maiden's futile love, possessing beauty and rhythmic force. It shows the author at her best with her perfect understanding of nature and her sympathy for the simple, direct things of life.

Pound, Ezra. Poems 1918-21, including three portraits and four cantos. 1921. E 14937

The bulk of his verse is an attempt to escape either by paraphrasing the poetry of the ancient or medieval time in which he fancies that he would have been more at home, or by execrating his contemporaries in acid little epigrams.—Literary Review.

Sandburg, Carl. Slabs of the sunburnt west. 1922. E 14985

Thirty-odd new poems from Sandburg, and the critics disagree as to their relative merits compared to earlier volumes. But they include "The windy city" which has been regarded as the greatest literary interpretation of Chicago.

Squire, J. C. Poems; second series. 1921. E 15030

J. C. Squire follows the school of John Freeman and Edward Thomas a while, then reaches back to older classic forms and forward to an easy, swinging individual rhythm of his own in embodying his sensitive, sincere, and romance-lit reactions to life.—Bookman.

Stevenson, Robert Louis. Moral emblems and other poems, written and illustrated with woodcuts; first printed at the Davos press by Lloyd Osbourne. 1921. E 15033

Poems which Stevenson wrote for his stepson Lloyd Osbourne and illustrated with wood-block cuts during their stay in Switzerland. The preface tells how the boy printed the first copies on a handpress and sold them to the guests at the watering place.

The Theater and Stage

Lewisohn, Ludwig. The drama and the stage. 1922. E 12529

Contents: The new dramaturgy.—The American stage.—Contemporaries.—Art, life and the theatre.

Brief and caustic comments on all phases of the theater. He is as hard upon the critics as upon the plays they review, among which he discusses Abraham Lincoln, Jane Clegg, A bill of divorcement, Medea, The skin game, Mary Rose, The circle, and many others.

Platt, Agnes. Practical hints on training for the stage. 1921. E 14181

Thaler, Alwin. Shakspeare to Sheridan; a book about the theatre of yesterday and to-day. 1922. E 12903

Showing "how much the theater of our day and hour owes to that of yesterday."

Walkley, A. B. Pastiche and prejudice. 1921. E 12974

A book of what the New York Times characterizes as "amazing essaylets," dealing with drama and other forms of art from the Crocean point of view.

Plays

Chapin, Harold. Three one act plays: It's the poor that 'elps the poor, The autocrat of the coffee-stall, Innocent and Annabel. 1921. E 13591

(French's acting edition.)

Among recent writers of short plays few equal Harold Chapin in subtlety and delicacy of characterization and a blending of humor and humanity.—Theatre Arts Magazine.

Colby, Gertrude K. The conflict; a health masque in pantomime. 1921. E 11941

Dane, Clemence, pseud. of Winifred Ashton. Will Shakespeare; an invention in four acts. 1922. E 13473

The drama is an achievement, for its poetry is recognizable and its Elizabethan flavor excellently well done . . . but one has a right to regret that Miss Dane has . . . had to distort the few known facts of Shakespeare's life for dramatic effect.—John Macy in the Literary Review.

Dargan, Olive Tilford, and Peterson, Frederick. The flutter of the goldleaf, and other plays. 1922. E 11979

Contents: The flutter of the goldleaf, by Olive T. Dargan and F. Peterson.—The journey, by Olive T. Dargan.—Everychild, by F. Peterson and Olive T. Dargan.—Two doctors at Akragas, by F. Peterson.

Four delicate one-act plays of psychoanalytic interest. "The journey" seems to contain the greatest dramatic value.

Davis, Owen. The detour; a play. 1922. E 11980

The theme of the play is "a supreme picture of farm life, of mother love and wifely rebellion where the tragedy is two fold in the woman's yearning for self-expression through her daughter and in the daughter's inadequacy through the inheritance of her father's stodginess."

Duran, Leo, tr. Plays of old Japan. 1921. E 13675

Contents: The daimyo.—The honor of Danzo.—The horns.—The hands in the box.—Forsaken love (a poetical comedy).

In the process of reincarnation, Mr. Duran has most charmingly preserved the Japanese influence and viewpoint; but we appreciate as well his selection of situations and affairs well within the range of our own occidental understanding.—Post.

Galsworthy, John. A family man; in three acts. 1922. E 13767

A delightful realistic comedy depicting the family life of the middle-class English since feminism has swept England. Mr. Galsworthy has set out on a campaign to strip off romantic pretense and show the reality underneath. The play makes good reading and is adaptable for amateur production.

Glaspell, Susan. Inheritors; a play in three acts. 1921. E 12234

A three-act play designed to emphasize the necessity of developing nationalism of the highest character in modern America.—Booklist.

Gregory, Lady. The image, and other plays. 1922. E 12277

Contents: The image.—Hanrahan's oath.—Shanwalla.—The wrens.

Four plays of the Abbey Theatre. They are folk plays, tragic and humorous, portraying the Irish peasant characteristics.

Masefield, John. The tragedy of Nan. 1921. E 14093

A gift-book edition beautifully illustrated by photographs of Broad Oak farm and the Severn river where the scenes of this three-act tragedy are laid.—Booklist.

Peabody, Josephine Preston, (Mrs. L. S. Marks). Portrait of Mrs. W.; a play in three acts with an epilogue. 1922. E 14182

A play based on the life of Mary Wollstonecraft, an early champion of women's rights. The Boston Transcript says, "Mrs. Marks has written a very remarkable play; she has drawn vividly the character and personality of an extraordinarily picturesque woman."

Pinero, Arthur Wing. The social plays of Arthur Wing Pinero, ed., with a general introduction and a critical preface to each play, by Clayton Hamilton. 1917-1922. 4v. E 12728

v. 1. The second Mrs. Tanqueray.—The notorious Mrs. Ebbsmith.

2. The gay Lord Quex.—Iris.

3. Letty.—His house in order.

4. The thunderbolt.—Mid-channel.

Richman, Arthur. Ambush. 1922. E 14216

A three-act play, exceedingly well written and produced by the Theatre Guild. It has a somewhat sordid story that ends unhappily.

Rostand, Edmond. Plays of Edmond Rostand. 1921. 2v. E 14218

v. 1. Romantics.—The Princess Faraway.—The woman of Samaria.—Cyrano of Bergerac

2. The Eaglet.—Chanticleer.

Tarkington, Booth. Clarence; a comedy in four acts. 1921. E 14241

French's standard library edition.

Clarence is such a boy as no one but Tarkington can create. The play is the "Seventeen" type and true comedy.

Waley, Arthur. The Nō Plays of Japan. 1922. E 12973

A translation from the Japanese of twenty exquisite mystical plays written between the fourteenth and sixteenth centuries. The plays and the descriptive introduction will be of special interest to students of the classical drama.

Zangwill, Israel. Merely Mary Ann; comedy in four acts; from his story of the same name. 1921. E 13080

Essays and Miscellanies

Addison, Joseph, and Steele, Richard. Selections from Addison and Steele; ed. by Will D. Howe. 1921. E 1744

(The modern student's library.)

Garnett, Edward. Friday nights; literary criticisms and appreciations. 1922. J 7652, 1

Contents: Nietzsche.—W. H. Hudson's "Nature books."—Tchekov and his art.—Ibsen and the English.—Mr. Joseph Conrad.—Mr. C. M. Doughty.—Ostrovsky's "The storm."—Mr. D. H. Lawrence and the moralists.—Richard Jefferies' "Amoryllis at the fair."—Henry Lawson and the democracy.—Sarah Orne Jewett's tales.—Stephen Crane and his work.—Robert Frost's "North of Boston."—Some remarks on English and American fiction.—American criticism and fiction.—Critical notes on American poets.—Two American novelists.—The contemporary critic.

Mr. Edward Garnett has something worth while to say of people who are worth writing about. His pronouncements on present-day American writers are especially valuable and interesting to American readers.

Gosse, Edmund. Aspects and impressions. 1922. J 7651

Contents: George Eliot.—Henry James.—Samuel Butler.—A note on Congreve.—The first draft of Swinburne's "Anactoria."—The Hôtel de Rambouillet.—Malherbe and the classical reaction.—The foundation of the French Academy.—Rousseau in England in the nineteenth century.—The centenary of Leconte de Lisle.—Two French critics: Emile Faguet.—Remy de Gourmont.—The writings of M. Clemenceau.—A visit to the friends of Ibsen.—

Fairyland and a Belgian Ariosto.—Some recollections of Lord Woooseley.—Index.

An account of the author's visit to every place in which he has "lived or loved or labored."

—The scholar's larger life. 1920. M 9167

Johnston, William T., ed. Bill Johnston's joy book. 1922. E 3851

The jokes are all clear cut and to the point and up to date, with very few old ones.

Jokes for all occasions, selected and ed. by one of America's foremost public speakers. 1921. E 3858

Clever and amusing jokes and short stories in an alphabetical subject arrangement.

Murray, Gilbert. Tradition and progress. 1922. E 15951

Contents: Religio grammatici: the religion of a "man of letters."—Aristophanes and the war party.—The Bacchae of Euripides.—The Stoic philosophy.—Poesis and mimesis.—Literature as revelation.—The soul as it is and how to deal with it.—National ideals: conscious and unconscious.—Orbis terrestris.—Satanism and the world order.

The book is at once an antidote to the pessimism of youth and a suggestion that it had better not go too fast and cut itself off from the main body of advance.—Llewellyn Jones in the Post.

Nevinson, Henry W. Essays in freedom and rebellion. 1921. E 4705

The author is a keen humorist, a critic of letters as well as of life.

Orage, A. R. Readers and writers (1917-1921). 1922. J 7662

Brief literary editorials from the New Age (London) written for the purpose of providing a candid constructive criticism after the manner of the 18th century. The style is excellent and the opinions broadly conservative.

Rosebery, Lord. Miscellanies, literary and historical. 1921. 2v. E 5476 v.1. Appreciations: Robert Burns; Dr. Johnson; Thackeray; Cromwell; Frederick the Great; Burke; William Windham; The coming of Bonaparte; Sir Robert Peel; Dr. Chalmers; Mr. Gladstone; Lord Salisbury; Lord Randolph Churchill.

2. Vignettes: The portraits of Burns; The love episode of William Pitt; Nelson; Robert Louis Stevenson; Cecil Rhodes.—Scottish history and character: Scottish history; The union of England and Scotland; The patriotism of a Scot; The formation of a Scottish character; The struldbrug; The Scots greys.—The service of the state: The service of the state; Statesmen and bookmen; Questions of empire; The press of the empire.—Genius loci: Eton; The royal palace of Whitehall; Epsom; The turf; The political aspect of Buckinghamshire.

Santayana, George. Soliloquies in England, and later soliloquies. 1922. E 5566

Like the author's previous work it is rich in analysis and inquiry. The essays deal principally with the Englishman, his line of thought, his habits, his surroundings, etc.

Stevenson, Robert Louis. Diogenes at the Savile club. 1921. E 5867

Strachey, Lytton. Books and characters, French and English. 1922. J 7670

Contents: Racine.—Sir Thomas Browne.—Shakespeare's final period.—The lives of the poets.—

Madame du Deffand.—Voltaire and England.—A dialogue.—Voltaire's tragedies.—Voltaire and Frederick the Great.—The Rousseau affair.—The poetry of Blake.—The last Elizabethan (T. L. Beddoes).—Henry Beyle.—Lady Hester Stanhope.—Mr. Creevey.

A collection of biographies and essays in criticism, written from 1905 to 1919. They are interesting, apart from the style and subject matter, in their indication of the author's development.

Tagore, Rabindranath. Creative unity. 1922. E 5904

Contents: Introduction.—The poet's religion.—The creative ideal.—The religion of the forest.—An Indian folk religion.—East and West.—The modern age.—The spirit of freedom.—The nation.—Woman and home.—An Eastern university.

Untermeyer, Louis. Heavens. 1922. E 6164

Delicious parodies by this versatile writer. He finds in the first group several varieties of heavens each one of which is the idea of bliss held by some author and inhabited by him. He also parodies Mr. Einstein in some very clever rhymes.

Wilkinson, Marguerite. The Dingbat of Arcady. 1922. E 6299

One of America's well known poets here describes a journey in a flat-bottomed boat down the Oregon river. To the experiences of this camping trip she adds various incidents from similar trips by boat, bicycle, and the omnipresent Ford, both in this country and in Europe.

Wright, Richardson. Truly rural. 1922. E 6315

Tired of city life the Wrights decided to go out and buy an old country place and metamorphose it into a real home . . . Mr. Wright tells the story of their enterprise in this volume with a wealth of wholesome humor and an abundance of allusions to art, literature and philosophy.—New York Evening Post.

(The modern student's library.)
Contents: John Hampden.—William Pitt, earl of Chatham.—The Earl of Chatham.—Lord Clive.—Warren Hastings.—Machiavelli.—Frederick the Great.

Boswell, James. TINKER, CHAUNCEY BREWSTER. Young Boswell; chapters on James Boswell, the biographer, based largely on new material. 1922. C 20947

A sympathetic study of the "prince of biographers" written in a spirit of appreciation and understanding. It explains his peculiarities and through intimate details concerning his life brings the young man before us in a new and very interesting light.

Burroughs, John. My boyhood; with a conclusion by his son, Julian Burroughs. 1922. C 21064

John Burroughs' excellent picture of American life before the industrial period reveals less of the personality of its author than do the letters from father to son contained in the concluding section.

Byron, George Gordon, Lord. Lord Byron's correspondence, chiefly with Lady Melbourne, Mr. Hobhouse, the Hon. Douglas Kinnaird, and P. B. Shelley; ed. by John Murray. 1922. 2v. C 21083

Mr. Murray has done well to publish these letters in full. He has allowed them to speak for themselves . . . A just and careful edition of letters that add to our knowledge of Byron and to our admiration for his writing.—Times (London).

Caruso, Enrico. FUCITO, SALVATORE, and BEYER, BARNET J. Caruso and the art of singing, including Caruso's vocal exercises and his practical advice to students and teachers of singing. 1922. C 21186

Sig. Fucito, for five years coach and accompanist to Enrico Caruso, has here written a sympathetic story about the great Italian tenor, first as a tribute to his memory, and secondly to provide an authentic document in which Caruso's methods of tone production and breathing might be permanently recorded.—Chicago Daily News.

Elizabeth, Queen of England. CHAMBERLAIN, FREDERICK. The private character of Queen Elizabeth. 1922. C 21774

A special book for the special student of history. Almost half of it is occupied with medical details proving that Queen Elizabeth possessed very poor health, and the rest enumerates and refutes the charges against her relations with Leicester.

Emerson, Ralph Waldo. SNIDER, DENTON J. A biography of Ralph Waldo Emerson, set forth as his life essay. 1921. C 21786

Eucken, Rudolf. Rudolf Eucken, his life, work and travels, by himself. 1922. C 21822

A careful and modest record of an intellectual life composed by a man of seventy-six. . . . The amiable philosopher reviews the images of this old and almost pastoral time, which he looks back upon through the roaring years between with a sort of pensive amazement.—Spectator.

Harriman, E. H. KENNAN, GEORGE. E. H. Harriman; a biography. 1922. 2v. C 22330

An amazing recital of epochal events in the history of American big business ventures; an intimate and interesting account of a vigorous, resourceful and unusual personality.—Burton Rascoe in the New York Tribune.

(The heritage of India series.)

Tetrazzini, Mme. Luisa. My life of song. 1922. C 24508

A chronological account of her career and its successes, including many anecdotes of interesting persons and places.

William, Crown Prince of the German Empire and of Prussia. Memoirs of the Crown Prince of Germany. 1922. C 24872

Lively and entertaining, this work contains little of the technique of war but a great deal of the personal element.

HISTORY

Barnes, Harry Elmer. The social history of the western world; an outline syllabus. 1921. A 2368

Belloc, Hilaire. The Jews. 1922. A 2681

Mr. Belloc sums up the history of Jews in their adopted homes as a "tragic cycle," and warns us that eventual persecution may follow the growing tension evidenced by the growth of a "whispering" campaign of hostility in our own country.

Boak, Arthur E. R. A history of Rome to 565 A. D. 1921. A 2785

The Roman contributions to government and law receive fullest treatment, but all phases of Roman life and thought are presented in a direct, effective manner. The book combines concreteness and precision of statement with continuity of thought and development.—Publishers' note.

Krey, August C., ed. and tr. The first crusade; the accounts of eye-witnesses and participants. 1921. A 6504

Excellent translations of the four main Latin chronicles of this period remarkably free from anachronisms.

McCabe, Joseph. The evolution of civilization. 1922. A 2369

A short story of civilization from brute man to the present state. The author announces his disagreement with G. B. Shaw and H. G. Wells, maintaining that the world has made more progress during the last ten thousand years than it made during the first million years of its existence.

Ireland

Fitzpatrick, Benedict. Ireland and the making of Britain, with map of medieval Ireland and Britain. 1922. A 10252

A study of the part played by Irish scholars and missionaries in Christianizing and civilizing Saxon England, which assembles evidence from authoritative sources. An intensely partisan work.

Hackett, Francis. The story of the Irish nation. 1922. A 5524

A snap-shot view of the Irish nation from pre-historic times to the present day. It gives a fairly accurate idea of Irish history for those who want a brief account, while it makes a good outline for those who wish to consult authorities for various periods.

Russell, George William. The inner and the outer Ireland, by A. E. 1921. I 10268

Sheehan, D. D. Ireland since Parnell. 1921. A 5523

Benét, William Rose. The first person singular. 1922.

F 20382

A fanciful first novel from the pen of an imaginative poet. The plot begins in front of the New York Public Library, the chief interest centering in a mistaken identity which is solved in the last chapter.

Bennett, John. Madame Margot; a grotesque legend of old Charleston. 1921.

F 20386

Grotesque indeed it is, but very beautifully and symbolically told, as a legend should be. Mme. Margot, the loveliest of all Charleston's lovely creatures, and her traffic with the devil that she might save her daughter Gabrielle from love—that is the legend.—Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Blackwood, Algernon. The bright messenger. 1922. F 20527

A psychic story in which dual personality and its possibilities form the theme. Julius La Vallon (F 11230) is again the leading figure and it is the controlling of his secondary self by Dr. Ellery, a physician interested in psychic tendencies, that makes the story.

Bone, David W. Broken stowage. 1922. F 20631

A collection of sketches, essayettes and tales of sea-faring life, full of magic effect. They are all remarkably different but have the same charm and vigor that made The brassboulder (F 20630) a masterpiece of its kind.

Bridges, Victor. Greensea Island; a mystery of the Essex coast. 1922. F 20721

It is the manner in which the author tells his story, the little twists in the solution of the mystery, and the lovable character traits, which make the reader follow the story to the end.—New York Times.

Brighouse, Harold. Hepplestall's. 1922. F 20727

A strong novel with splendid characterization, depicting the human side of the growth of a great industry. A long feud between the mill owners and a family of the workers is symbolic of the struggle between labor and capital.

Buchholtz, Johannes. Egholm and his God; tr. from the Danish. 1922. F 20772

A gloomy tale of a religious fanatic who cruelly sacrifices the necessities of his family to the demands of a grasping Brotherhood. The Literary Review calls Egholm's God a unique contribution to theology and Egholm himself an equally rare accession to the human family.

Cade, Coulson. The Cornish penny. 1922. F 11546

Robin, brought up in a sleepy village in Cornwall, when on his way to London, meets a stranger who invites him to visit his luxurious home. Robin has the time of his life with this stranger, who is known as an art connoisseur but turns out to be a gentleman robber.

Carswell, Catherine. The camomile; an invention. 1922. F 11666

The camomile typifies the heroine's urge to write, which she strives to suppress by pursuing a musical career. The story is told through her own journal, and the charm of the book lies in the delightful style in which her meditations find expression.

Chekhov, Anton. The cook's wedding, and other stories. 1922. F 11932

Contents: The cook's wedding.—Sleepy.—Children.—The runaway.—Grisha.—Oysters.—Home.—A classical student.—Vanka.—An incident.—A day in the country.—Boys.—Shrove Tuesday.—The old house.—In passion week.—Whitebrow.—Kashanka.—A chameleon.—The dependents.—Who was to blame?—The bird market.—An adventure.—The fish.—Art.—The Swedish match.

He is faithful to life like no other writer; therefore his stories are not gay, they are full of frustrated hopes and wasted destinies.—New Republic.

Chown, Alice A. The stairway. 1921. F 11948

In a very readable journal, extending from 1906 to 1919, is set forth the gradual emancipation of a modern, educated woman from the shackles of convention and current prejudices.—Survey.

Cobb, Irvin S. Sundry accounts. 1922. F 21270

Contents: Darkness.—The cater-cornered sex.—A short natural history.—It could happen again tomorrow.—The ravelin' wolf.—"Worth 10,000."—Mr. Lobel's apoplexy.—Alas, the poor Whiffet!—Plentiful Valley.—A tale of wet days.

As a narrator of happenings in small Kentucky towns, as a delineator of character and characters in that setting, Mr. Cobb cannot be excelled. He writes with rare insight and with a warm human sympathy.—Literary Review.

Connell, Richard. The sin of Monsieur Pettipon, and other humorous tales. 1922. F 21340

Contents: The sin of Monsieur Pettipon.—Mr. Pottle and the South Sea cannibals.—Mr. Pottle and culture.—Mr. Pottle and the one man dog.—Mr. Pottle and pageantry.—The cage man.—Where is the Tropic of Capricorn?—Mr. Braddy's bottle.—Gretna Greenhorns.—Terrible Epps.—Honor among sportsmen.—The $25,000 jaw.

All sorts of people are written about and sympathetically drawn. Monsieur Pettipon, an artist in bed making, Mr. Pottle and his wife who seek culture, little Peter Mullaney who wanted to be a cop—all real living people and very enjoyable.

Connolly, James B. Tide rips. 1922. F 12123

Contents: His three fair wishes.—What price for fish?—Not down in the log.—The sugar ship.—Beejum's progress.—The munition ship.—A port in France.—The rakish brigantine.—Rolling on to Athens.

A collection of short sea stories, most of which are about the fishermen of Gloucester and possess an element of tragedy.

Davey, Norman. Guinea girl; a melodrama in three acts, together with the incidental music, here presented for the entertainment of the curious. 1922. F 12287

A sensational story of Monte Carlo and the demi monde, of love and fortune-seeking, told with the charm of style and delicate irony, used by the author in his more episodic Pilgrim of a smile (F 12286).

Dawson-Scott, C. A. The haunting. 1922. F 21500

An absorbing analysis of the mental conflict of a man who killed his brother, because he had demanded an unfair division of the family fortune. His life is spent in justifying the hallucinations with which he is beset.

Deland, Margaret. The vehement flame. 1922. F 21539

The title signifies the jealousy of a wife for her husband twenty years younger than herself. It is an unusual story for Mrs. Deland and not a pleasant one.

Dell, Ethel M. The odds, and other stories. 1922. F 21548

Contents: The odds.—Without prejudice.—Her own free will.—The consolation prize.—Her freedom.—Death's property.—The sacrifice.

A collection of stories of the traditional Dell type with an Australian setting.

Dodd, Lee Wilson. Lilia Chenoworth. 1922. F 21643

A powerful swift-moving story filled with delicate characterization. Lilia herself and Dunster Thorpe are every whit as good as Mark Sabre. This is a carefully written novel that is emotionally moving and technically satisfying.—Bookman.

Dodge, Louis. Nancy; her life and death. 1921. F 12544

To one who, like those to whom the tale is dedicated, has "loved and lost a dog" . . . this will have a peculiar and poignant appeal. It pictures the fascinating and ingratiating ways of Nancy, only to make one more truly feel the void her pitiful death created in the heart of the author.—Chicago Tribune.

Dunn, J. Allan. Rimrock trail. 1922. F 12618

The interest centers about an Arizona ranch and its three cowboy-owners. Molly Casey an orphan of fifteen is adopted by the three and sent East to be educated. Through the discovery of a mine she becomes rich, but returns to marry one of the Westerners.

Durand, Ralph. The mind healer. 1921. F 21816

A rollicking comedy full of ingenious situations and lively humor.

Escholier, Raymond. The illusion (Dansons la trompeuse). 1922. F 12773

A delicate sketch of a little old woman who fills her life with deceit and falsehood because she wants to play the comedy of happiness. The many subterfuges are invented to cover the lack of love, the loss of fortune, and the first onslaught of age.

Flaubert, Gustave. Sentimental education; the story of a young man. 1922. F 22122

The evolution in sentiment of a young man from the provinces, who squanders his fortune and is deceived and made sport of until he in turn becomes the deceiver and hypocrite. His faithful love for a married woman is the only "true" thing in his life.

Ford, Sewell. Inez and Trilby May. 1921. F 22207

Relates in Ford slang the adventuring of two girls. While searching for the rich uncle of Inez they earn a living in various ways. The uncle does not take to them until a plot to cheat him out of a large sum of money is discovered by Trilby May.

Frankau, Gilbert. The love-story of Aliette Brunton. 1922. F 22241

Mr. Frankau presents a brief for a revival of the narrow divorce laws of England. His characters are clean cut splendid English people of the upper class with a strong adherence to the English code of "playing the game."

Fyfe, Hamilton. The widow's cruse. 1922. F 22312

A clever study of a widow who develops a sudden love for her husband and deep appreciation for his post mortem fame after he has ceased to need either. Entertainingly written, full of humor, charm and originality.

Galsworthy, John. The Forsyte saga. 1922. F 22352

Combines as one continuous narrative "The man of property," "The Indian summer of a Forsyte," "In chancery," "Awakening" and "To let." William Lyon Phelps in the New York Times considers this work a positive, powerful and permanent contribution to the social history and literature of England.

Glasgow, Ellen. One man in his time. 1922. F 22460

Gideon Vetch has finally arisen from a circus tent to reside in the stately executive mansion of Virginia. The story deals with his life among the old conservative families and the way he overcame their prejudices. A romance is woven around his daughter Betty.

Graham, R. B. Cunninghame. The Ipané. 1899. F 22612

Contents: The Ipané.—Un pelado.—Un Angelito. The lazo.—The bolas.—SS. Atlas.—Bristol fashion.—Tan-er la Blanca.—A survival.—Heather Jock.—Salvagia.—Snaekoll's saga.—With the northwest wind.—Niggers.—At Torfaieh.

—Success. 1902. F 22613

Contents: Success.—The Gualichu tree.—Los Seruidores.—Un infeliz.—From the mouth of the Sahara.—At Utrera.—Might, majesty and dominion.—Sursun corda.—The pyramid.—Terror.—Postponed.—London.—Beattock for Moffat.—A fisherman.—The impenitent thief.—The evolution of a village.—Castles in the air.

Haggard, H. Rider. The virgin of the sun. 1922. F 13415

Hubert Hastings and Kari of the Incas, flee from England and after wild adventures, arrive in the land of the Incas where they each become king of a mighty nation. A fascinating tale of romance, adventure and mysticism.

Hallet, Richard Matthews. The Canyon of the Fools. 1922. F 22690

The usual ingredients of a story of its kind are not lacking, but so novel is Mr. Hallet's method of combining these elements that the result is surprising and amusing.—Boston Transcript.

Harris, Corra. The eyes of love. 1922. F 13615

It is the struggle of Martin Puckle, a dried up old lawyer, and of Wyndam Cutmore and Betty his wife, who live in a small southern town. The story is made up mostly of the clever things the women find to say about the stupid men.

Henshaw, Nevil. The inheritance of Jean Trouvé. 1922. F 13692

A quaint story full of charm. A young American, disinherited by his grandfather, was befriended by two hunters in the woods and marshes of Louisiana.

Hopkins, William John. She blows! and sparm at that! 1922. F 14079

A whaling cruise half a century ago contained many exciting experiences as described by Timmie Taycox in this fascinating tale of the sea.

Hough, Emerson. The covered wagon. 1922. F 14117

Story of the emigrants crossing from Missouri to Oregon in the summer of 1848. The hardships of the trail, fights with the Indians, and the jealousies between the leaders are all vividly told. The news of the finding of gold in California comes as the caravan nears the Oregon line.

The house on Charles street. 1921. F 14133

A young American war worker gets in touch with English politics, and although there is a slight love affair, the story is more of a character study of the English people during the distressing period.

Hudson, Jay William. Abbé Pierre. 1922. F 23243

Through the fond, reflective eyes of the gentle old Abbé we look upon the life of a quiet Gascon village. It is the village, or perhaps the fair Gascon land itself, which is the real protagonist, and he her tender lover, jealous too of encroaching modernity yet wistfully anxious to be open minded.

Jordan, Elizabeth. The blue circle. 1922.
F 14419

A mystery tale that develops its tension with considerable skill and preserves its suspense to the end. It produces its effects by suggested dangers rather than by accomplished deeds of violence and creates an atmosphere that has sufficient of the normal to emphasize the extraordinary.—Literary Review.

Kenyon, Camilla. Fortune at Bandy's Flat. 1921.
F 24209

Sally (delightfully eighteen) takes her little brother to a small mountain village to recuperate from scarlet fever. An attractive civil engineer and an attractive bad man help to make things happen. A train holdup, a stolen letter, and mysterious rumors keep things interesting to the last.

Kickham, Charles J. Knocknagow; or, The homes of Tipperary. 1921. F 24237

Kinross, Albert. The truth about Vignolles. 1922. F 24258

Contents: The truth about Vignolles.—Forbidden fruit.—An honest living.—Eve Damer.—Behind the lines.—The profiteer.

A group of adventure stories in a well contrived combination of romantic and realistic treatment. Vignolles is an eminently likable person, whom Kipling or Conrad might have presented, and his exploits, martial, amorous or commercial, are diverse and diverting.

Larminie, Margaret Rivers. Search. 1922.
F 24407

The novel is well written and full of little touches of significant observation. Furthermore the characters are psychologically—one might almost say pathologically—true to type, and the narrative has in it much of truth and of beauty.—Saturday Review.

Lawrence, D. H. Aaron's rod. 1922.
F 24417

A beautifully written story in Lawrence's usual poetic style. There is very little plot, but the characters are well drawn and the book is full of ideas and philosophical discussions about life, marriage, love and other problems of modern life.

—The white peacock. 1921. F 24421

An exceedingly vivid portrayal of character development, with its setting in the collier district of England. A wealth of colorful description of a territory he knows so well, and altogether Lawrence at his best.

Lynde, Francis. Pirates' hope. 1922.
F 24770

A cracking good story from beginning to end . . . A 20th century romance of a desert island with real buried treasure and real pirates. And, of course, there is a beautiful girl mixed up in the imbroglio.—New York Times.

Machen, Arthur. The house of souls. 1922.
F 24849

Contents: A fragment of life.—The white people.—The great god Pan.—The inmost light. Psychic mystery stories having to do with the principles of alchemy. Mr. Machen's other-world people are all inimical to humanity, and when invoked the result is disaster.

Mahan, Richard Aumerle. The works of Satan. 1921. F 24943

Satan is the harmless editor in a sleepy little village who starts a bit of gossip to make things happen. The town liar complicates matters and Yaleville is utterly upset. Everything is straightened out in the end by Satan's aid. A good screen comedy with small-town atmosphere.

Mansfield, Katherine. The garden party, and other stories. 1922. F 24953

Contents: At the bay.—The garden party.—The daughters of the late colonel.—Mr. and Mrs. Dove.—The young girl.—Life of Ma Parker.—Marriage à la mode.—The voyage.—Miss Brill.—Her first ball.—The singing lesson.—The stranger.—Bank holiday.—An ideal family.—The lady's-maid.

A collection of dramatic short stories with an English setting. They are strong and impressive, emphasizing various phases of life, and are mostly psychological studies of character.

Marquand, J. P. The unspeakable gentleman. 1922. F 15214

A highly entertaining story laid in the United States in the colonial period involving an important paper which deals with treason against Napoleon. The action takes place in three days crammed with thrilling moments—duels, night attacks, treachery and much open fighting.

Marsh, George. Toilers of the trails. 1921.
F 24969

Contents: For the Great Father.—Out of the mist.—A little tragedy at Cooococache.—When the prince came home.—With the winter mail.—The valley of the Windigo.—The quest of Narcisse Lablanche.—The land of his fathers.—The high brotherhood.

Nine adventure stories of the Canadian northwest with a background of hunters and trappers and a "wild cuntrye."

Masters, Edgar Lee. Children of the market place. 1922. F 24994

The autobiographical story of an English lad who comes to the United States in the 1830's and lives through the pioneer struggles and political experiences of the middle west up to the Civil War. Stephen A. Douglas is the leading figure.

Matthews, Brander. Vignettes of Manhattan; outlines in local color. 1921.
F 25004

Contents: Vignettes of Manhattan: In the little church down the street.—The twenty-ninth of February.—At a private view.—Spring in a side street.—A decoration day reverie.—In search of local color.—Before the break of day.—A midsummer midnight.—A vista in Central Park.—The speech of the evening.—A thanksgiving day dinner.—In the midst of life.

Outlines in local color: An interview with Miss Marlenspuyk.—A letter of farewell.—A glimpse of the under world.—A Wall Street wooing.—A spring flood in Broadway.—The vigil of McDowell Sutro.—An irrepressible conflict.—The solo orchestra.—The rehearsal of the new play.—A candle in the plate.—Men and women and horses.—In the watches of the night.

Merwin, Samuel. Goldie Green. 1922.
F 15300

A story of the new girl in this new world so realistically told that its unreality is overlooked.

Milne, A. A. The red house mystery. 1922. F 15386

The host at an English country house disappears, and his brother is found dead. The chance caller who appears on the scene at the critical moment assumes the role of an amateur Sherlock Holmes. The solution is found in the discovery of a secret passage after many hair-raising experiences.

Moorhouse, Hopkins, pseud. of Herbert Joseph Moorhouse. The gauntlet of Alceste. 1922. F 15492

A murder mystery story with a good plot and satisfactory solution not easily foreseen.

Nicholson, Meredith. Best laid schemes. 1922. F 15669

Contents: The Susiness of Susan.—The girl with the red feather.—The Campbells are coming.—Arabella's house party.—The third man.—Wrong number.

Mr. Nicholson's gay humor, light touch, and neat turn for the ingenious combine to make of these half dozen stories, which first saw the light in the pages of a magazine, a consistently entertaining collection.—Literary Review.

Oppenheim, E. Phillips. Nobody's man. 1921. F 25763

An account of Andrew Tallente's uncertain political views and perplexing career, interspersed with elements of ambition, love and speculation.

Pattee, Fred Lewis. The house of the black ring. 1905. F 16058

A mystery story not lacking in humor and with a readable plot centering around a mysterious cabin among the caves and mountains of Pennsylvania.

Paul, Elliot H. Indelible; a story of life, love, and music, in five movements. 1922. F 16077

A very promising first novel on the development of a musical genius written by a musician who shows himself to be a literary artist as well. New England prejudice comes in contact with the artistic temperament of Jewish immigrants from Russia.

Pendexter, Hugh. A Virginia scout. 1922. F 16115

An adventure story of frontier life telling of the Indian troubles just prior to the Revolutionary war. It has a historical background and historical personages figure in the narrative.

Pertwee, Roland. Men of affairs. 1922. F 16140

An absorbing story of both love and lucre with an English setting. A plot of financial intrigue hinges on a case of mistaken identity, but this familiar device is well handled and the style of the whole is vigorous and sparkling.

Popovic, Pavle, ed. and tr. Jugo-Slav stories. 1921. F 16533

(The interpreters' series.)

Contents: Introduction.—The first matins with my father, by L. Lazarovich.—Kanjosh Macedonovich, by S. M. Ljubisa.—Vidosava Brankovich, by Z. J. Jovanovich.—The first furrow, by M. Glishch.—By the well, by L. Lazarovich.—The kum's curse, by J. Veselinovich.—Povareta, by S. Matavulya.—Hodja Saleck, by S. Corovich.—Eternity, by J. Veselinovich.

Stories by modern authors of Jugo-Slavia presenting a variety of theme and style, and a great deal of local color.

Putnam, Nina Wilcox. West Broadway. 1921. F 16703

A movie star makes an auto trip from New York to California and records in slangy diction her observations of conditions as she finds them on "West Broadway," which extends all the way to the Golden Gate.

Raine, William MacLeod. Man-size. 1922. F 16811

Starts with a rush, continues with a roar, and ends with a bang. In other words it is a good Western yarn a trifle above the average in point of prose narrative and with characters that carry conviction.—New York Times.

Rees, Arthur J. The moon rock. 1922. F 17009

A mystery story with the scene laid along the rocky Cornish coast. The victim is murdered just as he succeeds in proving himself heir to a title after a genealogical break of four centuries.

Rhodes, Eugene Manlove. Copper Streak Trail. 1922. F 17118

It is a tale of men's wits and the best man wins. Arizona forms the background and several rough crooks pitted against Pete Johnson and his tender-foot partner from New York provide the plot.

Rideout, Henry Milner. The winter bell. 1922. F 17209

A well told story of a despondent man, falsely imprisoned, who regains interest in life through having his attention turned to reading.

Rolland, Romain. Pierre and Luce. 1922. F 17412

The story of a pair of youthful lovers in wartime Paris. Throughout the book the shadow of bitterness and impending death hovers over them, a dark background for their tragic, impassioned love.

Rousseau, Victor, pseud. of Victor Rousseau Emanuel. The Big Muskeg. 1921. F 12728

A Canadian romance of adventure of the sensational type.

Ruck, Berta, (Mrs. Oliver Onions). The wrong Mr. Right. 1922. F 15783

A story describing the adventures of a business girl in London combined in a lively puzzling plot. It deals with the consequences of a lie which pursues the heroine until she untells it.

Schnitzler, Arthur. The shepherd's pipe, and other stories. 1922. F 17767

Contents: The shepherd's pipe.—The murderer.—The blind Geronimo and his brother.

The first English translation of these very readable stories, which are all of a psychological character.

Sedgwick, Anne Douglas, (Mrs. Basil de Sélincourt). Adrienne Toner. 1922. F 17907

A story with an unusual character portrayal of a woman, sympathetic and generous, whose influence dominates everyone with whom she comes in contact. Nevertheless there is a disastrous marriage, and then the war.

Shands, Hubert Anthony. White and black. 1922. F 17952

A serious novel of the negro problem with the scene laid on a Texas cotton plantation.

Singmaster, Elsie. Bennett Malin. 1922. F 18169

A novel of characterization rather than plot. A theological student gives up the ministry to follow his secret ambition to become a writer. The girl he marries sacrifices everything to his struggling ambition—hopelessly. To their son, however, came the gift of authorship without effort.

Smith, Gordon Arthur. There goes the groom. 1922. F 18217

Four old bachelors try to find a wife for George, the nephew of one of them. The plot develops into part mystery, part idyll and part plain fun, and ends with a truly surprising conclusion.

Tarkington, Booth. Gentle Julia. 1922. F 27704

Simple is this story, but it manages to keep you amused and alert every moment, and it rouses you every now and again to loud laughter . . . The book is as careless and whimsical as a spring wind and as adorable.—New York Times.

Tilden, William T. It's all in the game, and other tennis tales. 1922. F 27785

Tennis advice and true sportsmanship are the theme of these tales written by a tennis expert.

A story of love and adventure among the pines of northern Michigan.

Turgenev, Ivan. Knock, knock, knock, and other stories. 1921. F 27914

Contents: Knock, knock, knock.—The inn.—Lieutenant Yergunov's story.—The dog.—The watch.

Turner, John Hastings. Where your treasure is —. 1922. F 27917

A comedy of a double triangle with a common apex. The Bookman gives it the motto, "Every man must fall in love with his wife twice."

Van Vechten, Carl. Peter Whiffle; his life and works. 1922. F 27980

An amusement so delicately the reflection of your own intelligence as to be wholly satisfying. A satire written with the most sophisticated brilliance, a rich survey of art, literature, music, and their protagonists of a decade or so ago.—Fanny Butcher in Sunday Tribune.

Van Vorst, Marie. The queen of Karmania. 1922. F 18808

The story of an up-to-date Graustark.

Watanna, Onoto, pseud. of Mrs. W. E. Babcock. Sunny-San. 1922. F 20090

A young Japanese girl comes to America, is rescued by four gallant American lads and the result is a delightful mixture of humor and romance.

Watts, Mary S. The house of Rimmon. 1922. F 19068

A sound intelligent piece of work, vivid, truthful, interesting, is this new, and excellent story . . . which by implication is also a most interesting criticism upon certain aspects of the theatre and the theatregoing public.—New York Times.

Wells, H. G. The secret places of the heart. 1922. F 19164

A series of talks between a physician and his patient while on a motor trip through rural England, on the subject of sex idealism, mingled with psychoanalysis, archeology and Wellsian philosophy. An American girl, no less wise than beautiful, also plays a part.

Wharton, Edith. The glimpses of the moon. 1922. F 19270

This novel throws a revealing light upon certain human characteristics of the men and women whose home is Fifth Avenue and who wander to Newport and the other holiday centers of America and Europe.

Wilson, Harry Leon. Merton of the movies. 1922. F 19593

The movie-mad country boy is ridiculous, burlesque, and highly painted, yet he is so skillfully drawn that he never loses his human and appealing quality. The moving picture atmosphere is well done . . . a fine picture of the inner mind of a large class of America.—Bookman.

Wodehouse, P. G. Three men and a maid. 1922. F 19704

A light-hearted, seemingly effortless, rollicking story which one chuckles over from beginning to end and closes with a desire to proclaim its merits aloud.—New York Times.

Wylie, Ida A. R. The dark house. 1922. F 19893

An English story quite introspective and psychological. Robert Stonehouse spends a lonely childhood with an improvident and eccentric father whom he fears and a stepmother whom he despises. The dark house typifies his fear of life and of failure, but he is finally released through grief and love.

—Rogues & Company. 1921. F 19894

A light vivacious tale dealing with a lost identity which leads to most amusing situations.

A sequel to "Rusty Miller." The story concerns itself chiefly with the affairs of two of Rusty's friends. For girls from eleven to fifteen.

Gregor, Elmer Russell. Spotted Deer. 1922.
H 8302

A thrilling story of the capture of Spotted Deer, a young Delaware chief, by the Shawnees, and of his rescue by his friend Running Fox. The same characters appear in Running Fox (H 4061) and The White Wolf (H 8300).—Booklist.

Harris, Joel Chandler. The witch wolf; an Uncle Remus story. 1921.
H 8340

A delightful story that is not to be found in any Uncle Remus collection.

Lindsay, Maud, and Poulsson, Emilie. The joyous guests. 1921.
H 4826

Quaint stories of Merrie England at Christmas time. Full of charm for the story-teller and delightful for the children to read. For boys and girls from eight to fifteen.

Rolt-Wheeler, Francis William. The wreck-hunters. 1922.
H 6140

The wreck-hunters rescue ships in danger of sinking, save the cargoes of wrecked vessels and dive for sunken treasures. The story will interest boys who like stories of pirates and adventure.

Singmaster, Elsie. John Baring's house. 1920.
H 6571

A story of two grandchildren of John Baring, who attempt to prove the innocence of their grandfather in the Civil War. Thrilling adventure makes the book one that boys will like.

Our Library

1897-1922

STALWART as some stern fortress, and alone—
How many thousands mount these steps each day,
Both young and old; and happier come away.
Inside this grim exterior of gray stone
Vast treasure in a marble palace lies.
Students learn more than ancient sages knew;
Come connoisseurs of entertainment, too,
And enterprising youth with shining eyes.

Those suffering in body and in mind—
People to whom the world has been unkind;
Dreamers and men called failures, come and find
Solace and comfort, friends who understand,
Service more great than they who built had planned—
A sanctuary in an alien land.

—Helen Forman.

Our Silver Jubilee

TWENTY-FIVE years ago, on Saturday, October 9, 1897, the Central Library building was dedicated "to the use and benefit, the education and elevation of the people," "to the spread of light and truth and knowledge through the generations that are to come." On the following Monday it was open for service. The enormous task of moving was accomplished in one week, and was performed for the most part by library employees.

The ground upon which the building stands was the old Dearborn Park, part of the original military reservation intended by the early City Fathers to be retained as "public ground, forever to remain vacant of buildings." However, changed conditions brought new ordinances, and after serving the public well for twenty-five years under the most adverse circumstances and without an abiding place the Library was finally to rejoice in a habitation of its own.

The building was erected at a cost of two million dollars and is a special monument to the probity, economy and efficiency of the Board of Directors in that it was constructed well within the time and appropriation called for by the contract. The daily and periodical press of that day was full of descriptions of its architecture and ornamentation. Its appearance has become a matter of our common experience, being part of the familiar background of the city life of the present generation, but it is gratifying to our local pride to bear in mind that with all its points of excellence "in at least one particular this edifice is of international interest, and is unique in the history of modern architecture," as Mr. Forrest Crissey wrote in a contemporary issue of The Outlook. "Its interior walls are embellished with a greater quantity of fine glass and marble mosaic work than has been put into any other building since the completion in the thirteenth century of the celebrated cruciform cathedral at Monreale, Sicily." These mosaics are not subject to destruction by gas and smoke as painting and other more usual modes of decoration would be, but possess the same elements of indestructibility which have kept the walls of St. Sophia in Constantinople standing for nearly fourteen hundred years. Those who visit the Library today find the brilliance of its Carrara walls and the luster of the green and gold mosaics undimmed.

Many of our citizens will still remember the dedicatory exercises, which were very interesting and impressive. The Hon. Azel F. Hatch, then president of the Board, formally tendered the building to the City, and in an address which sums up most admirably the history of the Chicago Public Library up to that time, rendered an account of the stewardship so faithfully performed.

Dr. Emil G. Hirsch had been a member of the Library Board throughout the entire period of the construction of the building and was its president just preceding Mr. Hatch. On giving the address of the evening he spoke most eloquently of the relation of the Library to the people of the city and of the responsibilities it assumed in serving them. A few scattered paragraphs from this address may help to show the inspiring idealism that characterized Dr. Hirsch's utterances as it characterizes all the interests of this public-spirited leader.

"There is scarce a home in this million-hearted city, whatever the dialect in which the ditty is sung over the cradle it rocks, whatever the tongue in which protection is invoked from the God it worships, be its furnishings humble or luxurious its draperies, but rejoices with us tonight that the Library's days of wandering in the desert are over, that it has at last crossed the Jordan and entered upon a new career in the land of a larger promise."

"If I apprehend the policy of the Board correctly, in all these years the guiding principle in the administration of the trust has been the remembrance that like every university, this the people's, too, has the appointment to foster the humanities and to inculcate patriotism. Neither of these elements can be spared in the national consciousness of a strong nation."

"Here then is the one opportunity of the Library. Its shelves offer to the thousands what the college holds for a score. The cultured man or woman is he or she who is at home first in this world. The heavens spell endless series of riddles and the rocks hide multiplied mysteries. It is man's privilege to feel the burden of this ignorance and in ever widening measure to lighten it."

"Our Library provides a feast of entertainment that leaves no bitter taste in the mouth of those who accept the invitation to partake of its hospitalities. A people that reads even for amusement is guarded against falling into traps but too easily sprung. Had our Library done even more for its novel-devouring readers than it has, it would have deserved well of the community. Austere disciplinarians and ascetic fanatics may repress for a time the natural ebullitions of the lighter moods of a people. Virtue and a smiling countenance are not dwellers of opposite poles. The despotism of straight-laced moral pessimism will engender by sheer recoil the irritated assertion of baser passions. It will fan into a devouring flame the sensual instincts, and individual and community alike will suffer. The novel has a place by the side of the Bible."

"Let us not forget that our America is no longer New England. It is indeed the New World. To the stream of its life all the rivers of Europe, and before Europe, of Asia, have contributed. Our history is the history of the world. . . No one can understand the peculiar destiny of the American nation who is not at home thoroughly in the history of the whole human race. . . . Out of the best that the different races and nations possess, here on this broad continent of freedom will be evolved a new type of humanity, and the public library which places within easy reach of the mind hungry for information the knowledge of the quality of the different constituent elements and their peculiar endowments, will be a mighty factor in awakening that broader Americanism which, rising above petty prejudices and ignorant superstitions of early impressions to the altitude of an inclusive and broader fellowship, will not ask where the cradle stood, but what loyalty there burns in the heart and what devotion to public duty and private virtue is the guidance to action and the support to sentiment. We have to learn of other nations as other nations may learn of us. No Chinese wall can shut out the vital influence of the world beyond. A public library which would pursue a provincial policy will stifle patriotism instead of stimulating it."

"We cannot repeat on our soil Pantheon or Parthenon. . . . But books as messengers of culture are independent of location, social condition or climatic circumstances. In the most portable form, the best that the world has thought and the best for which the world has striven may be brought to the threshold of every searching mind and hopeful soul.

"Our public Library has grasped this opportunity. It stands today the friend of thousands, the helper of millions. It is one of the sheet-anchors upon which the safety of our communal life is dependent. It supplements the grand work done by our schools. It is often an ally to our university and the growing technical schools round about us. It is indispensable to the newspaper, and confirms or corrects contentions of those that every day court and hold the attention of this city; it offers opportunities for self culture to thousands who are denied the privilege of systematic training; it is consecrated to the cause of humanity, and at the same time it holds aloft the blazing light of a true world including loyalty to our American institutions. In its new home, with its larger opportunities, it will do still grander service."

"Chicago, synonym for energy and industries, push and ambition,—Chicago, swarming hive of millions, of many tongues, and many hearts, but one purpose and one flag,—Chicago owns no title to distinction more legitimate and more lustrous than its possession of this grand Public Library,—its own. What its future will be none may foretell; but that it will in ever growing measure be a mighty factor for good in the community, none may doubt. We look hopefully forward to the coming day; for we realize that to even our institution apply Victor Hugo's words: "A library implies an act of faith which generations still in darkness hid sign in their night in witness of the dawn."

Poetry

- Benét, William Rose. Perpetual light; a memorial. 1919. E 10656

A collection of those of Mr. Benét's verses that were directly inspired by his wife now published in her memory, "though they are poor, freakish fragments as far as any real expression of her is concerned."

- Noyes, Alfred. Watchers of the sky. 1922.
E 14899, 1

Contents: Prologue.—Copernicus.—Tycho Brahe.
—Kepler.—Galileo.—Newton.—William Herschel conducts.—Sir John Herschel remembers.—Epilogue.

Narrative poetry showing the march of astronomy from the days of Copernicus, on through the ages to the present time. It is the first of a trilogy to be called The torchbearers.

Almost as good as it could be, granted the limitations of space. . . . Almost everything of more than lyric and less than epic length which one would have expected in an anthology like this is here.—London Mercury.

- Snow, Royall. Igdrasil. 1921. E 15027

Mr. Snow's first published volume is much more than a miscellany of youthful verse. It is a criticism of life through which a modern young man has walked, aware and chosen with discrimination from greatly varied relationships.—Chicago Daily News.

Drama

ics. v. 4. 1922. E 12090, 4

Contents: Shakuntala, by Kalidasa.—The wandering scholar from paradise, by Hans Sachs.—All for love; or, The world well lost, by John Dryden.
—The martyrdom of Ali; from the Persian miracle play of Hasan and Husain.

Mr. Eliot has sought to condense and adapt certain dramatic classics to fit them for the time and space demands of the modern small art theatres and to supply them with copious notes and directions, largely drawn from his own experiences as a producer.—Bookman.

- Ervin, St. John G. The ship; a play in three acts. 1922. E 12099

The drama is based on the antagonism between father and son. The climax comes when the ship builder is unable to go on the maiden voyage of his new ship and pleads with his son, who is unwilling to carry on the family tradition, to take his place.

Low, Lucy. The bitterly reviled. E 13175
(Poet Lore plays.)

O'Dea, Mark. Red Bud women; four dramatic episodes; with a foreword by Pierre Loving. 1922 E 14162

Contents: The song of Solomon.—Shivaree.—Miss Myrtle says "yes".—Not in the lessons.

Red Bud is a village in Iowa and the characters portrayed are all submerged farm and village types and excellently done. Three of these four dramatic episodes have been performed in Chicago.

Subert, Francis Adolf. The awakening; a five act drama, tr. from the Bohemian. E 13175

(Poet Lore plays.)

Tarkington, Booth, and Street, Julian. The country cousin; a comedy in four acts. 1921. E 14242

Walker, Stuart. Sir David wears a crown. 1922. E 12972

(Stewart Kidd modern plays.)

Sequel to Six who pass while the lentils boil, E 12976.

Wilde, Percival. Eight comedies for little theatres. 1922. E 13018

Contents: The sequel.—The previous engagement.—The dyspeptic ogre.—In the net.—A wonderful woman.—Catesby.—His return.—Embryo.

Very clever, amusing one-act plays, original in plot and easily produced. The author has chosen good situations and adds snappy dialogue to a masterful handling of the plot of each.

Essays

Henry, Stuart. French essays and profiles. 1921. J 5400

Essays: The poetic legacy of Leconte de Lisle.—The daughter of the French romantics: Madame Marie Mennessier-Nodier.—The great era of the French ballet.—The sociological rôle of the forest.—Hedda Gabler and the Parisians.—The production of noted persons in France.—The gray and gay race.

Profiles: Jules Claretie.—François Coppée.—Coquelin the elder.—Dumas the elder.—Dumas the younger.—Judith Gautier.—Henry Gréville.—Gyp.—Jeanne Hugo.—Jules Lemaitre.—Pierre Loti.—Rosita Mauri.—Frédéric Mistral.—Georges Pellissier.—Edouard Rod.—Rosny the elder.—Victorien Sardou.

A sympathetic volume of essays and personal sketches. He has picked up the torch that the war almost extinguished and bears it aloft with graceful if not magnificent gesture.—New York Times.

Leacock, Stephen. My discovery of England. 1922. E 4212

Contents: The balance of trade in impressions.—I am interviewed by the press.—Impressions of London.—A clear view of the government and politics of England.—Oxford as I see it.—The British and the American press.—Business in England.—Is prohibition coming to England?—"We have with us tonight."—Have the English any sense of humor?

The greater part of it is written in a satiric vein, but its satire is always general, smiling, merry, . . . And the fact that underneath all the fascinations of its humor there lies just and keen thinking, makes it all the more interesting.—New York Times.

The notion-counter; a farrago of foibles, being notes about nothing by Nobody, illustrated by Somebody, dedicated to Everybody. 1922. E 4849

Light, amusing comments on delightfully trivial and unimportant matters often made for the pure fun of making them. Sometimes the author masquerades as a man and sometimes as a woman.

Tomlinson, H. M. Waiting for daylight. 1922. E 6033

These deep and effective sketches of war memories are presented with simplicity and intelligence by a true artist, who is well known for what the Spectator calls "a pure and distinguished style."

TRAVEL AND DESCRIPTION

Alder, W. F. The isle of vanishing men; a narrative of adventure in cannibal-land. 1922. I 9181

Another South Sea Island book describing the manners and customs of a tribe of cannibals in New Guinea who are so hideous in appearance as to seem hardly human.

Foster, Harry L. The adventures of a tropical tramp. 1922. I 11191

An extremely entertaining narrative of the author's South American adventures. His varied experiences from miner to diplomatic attaché, his journey across the Andes and down the Amazon, and his travels in Bolivia, Peru and Brazil, make very diverting reading.

Powell, E. Alexander. Where the strange trails go down; Sulu, Borneo, Celebes, Bali, Java, Sumatra, Straits Settlements, Malay States, Siam, Cambodia, Annam, Cochinchina. 1922. I 9196

A thrilling travel book, skillfully bringing out the picturesqueness of those gorgeous lands of which so little has been written except of scientific lore.

Roget, S. R., ed. Travel in the two last centuries of three generations. 1921.

I 11382

Mr. Roget had a happy inspiration in issuing these bits of diary and old letters from among his family records to illustrate the vanished era; particularly as the travellers in question were observing folk and effectively articulate.—Literary Review.

Schaw, Janet. Journal of a lady of quality; being the narrative of a journey from Scotland to the West Indies, North Carolina, and Portugal, in the years 1774 to 1776. Ed. by Evangeline Walker Andrews, in collaboration with Charles McLean Andrews. 1921.

A 2218, 6

(Yale historical manuscripts.)

The Winston, (John C.) Co. Winston's new and complete atlas of the world, with new maps of Europe; of Canada and its provinces; of the United States, its forty-eight states, its territories and insular possessions and maps of the whole world with boundaries as established by the treaties of peace following the world war. 1921.

I 11410

Europe

Dukes, Sir Paul. Red dusk and the morrow; adventures and investigations in red Russia. 1922.

I 10525

An intensely dramatic account of the author's sojourn in Petrograd during 1918-1919 in the capacity of chief of the British intelligence service. As a bit of good detective story writing it will be read with interest.

The Franco-American Year-book. 1921.

*R 5179

(Shelved in Civics Dept.)

"Containing authentic, up-to-date residential, commercial and professional directories of Americans in France and other parts of Europe; American clubs, societies and organizations; Americans with foreign titles; French firms with branches in the United States; Franco-American trade and commerce; and a who's who section of Americans on the continent.

Muirhead, Findlay, and Monmarche, Marcel, ed. Paris and its environs. 1921.

I 2648

(The blue guides.)

The new Muirhead is much better in many respects than was Baedeker. It is more readable and better arranged, more portable and comprehensive and at least as accurate.—Times (London).

Steiner, Edward A. Old trails and new borders. 1921.

I 11268

An account of the author's reaction to the conditions of the people and lands of Europe after the war, written with charm and sparkle, and at the same time with deep sympathy and understanding.

Treves, Sir Frederick. The Riviera of the Corniche road. 1921.

I 11905

Equipped with an observant eye, a keen ear for the legends and folklore of the district, a good camera, and an easy, graceful pen, Sir Frederick Treves has produced a book on the famous Grande Corniche which is not likely to be displaced for a good many years to come.—Times (London).

Unstead, J. F. Europe of to-day. 1922.

I 11272

A geographical account which treats of man in his relation to environment.

Vince, Charles. The street of faces: glimpses of town. 1920.

I 6157

Mr. Vince simply roams around and gives us a character sketch of a commuter, an excellent picture of gulls that settle in the Hampstead gardens, a glimpse into the British museum, a personal essay on suburban names, and so on.—Chicago Daily News.

Asia, Africa

High, Stanley. China's place in the sun. 1922.

I 10667

A survey of China's human and material forces, of her civilization and the growth of her national consciousness, of her industrial and intellectual renaissance, of her religious condition, of the struggle the Chinese people are making to fit themselves for a position of leadership in international affairs.—Book Review Digest.

Hunt, Frazier. The rising temper of the East sounding the human note in the world-wide cry for land and liberty. 1922.

I 10616

Contents: Gandhi and his India.—The new religious nationalism of the East.—Young China.—Kagawa of Kobe, the story of the new Japan.—Struggling Korea.—Ivan the Jap killer.—White Australia.—Our own little India.—Whose country is Haiti?—Our restless brothers below the Rio Grande.—The lamp bearers.—The world's underdogs, a conclusion.

States the ideals of the colored peoples (black, brown and yellow), their hatred of the white man's domination and desire for self-government, giving credit to the white when it is due. Contains a chapter on the work of the missionaries.

Scott, A. MacCallum. Barbary; the romance of the nearest East. 1921.

I 8953

A description of the author's journey through Algeria and Tunis, with historical references entertainingly interspersed with facts and anecdotes, and profusely illustrated.

North America

United States, Canada

Drake, Durant. America faces the future. 1922.

I 4334

Contents: Liberty.—Equality.—Democracy.—Efficiency.—Patriotism.

A plea for our national standards. The author is idealistic and very confident that the principles upon which our government was founded, if loyally maintained, will suffice for all the ills of the present social unrest—labor strifes, racial hatreds, etc.

Graham, Stephen. Tramping with a poet in the Rockies. 1922.

I 11728

A record of a tramping tour through Glacier National Park and the Canadian Rockies by Vachel Lindsay and the author. It reveals the poet's personality in a delightful manner; and the descriptions of the surroundings is quite what would be expected from these two lovers of nature.

Hollister, Paul M. Famous colonial houses; with an introduction by Julian Street. 1921.

*P 4047

Mr. Hollister gives these interesting 'old homes individuality and charm. He relates incidents connected with them, historical and imaginary, in which the humorous element is not lacking.

Longstreth, T. Morris. The Laurentians, the hills of the habitant. 1922.

I 4215

It is more than a fine description of a lovely region; it is a real travel book, all through, of that wild and not very well known mountainous country of French Canada. The author's friendship with the Indians, fishermen and hunters of the wilderness and the "habitants" themselves, makes it read like a story.

Meredith, Hugh. An account of the Cape Fear country, 1731. 1922. B 5714, 36
(Heartman's historical series.)

Two letters, written by Meredith to Benjamin Franklin, his former partner in the printing business, and printed by Franklin in the Pennsylvania Gazette in 1731.

Rollins, Philip Ashton. The cowboy; his characteristics, his equipment, and his part in the development of the West. 1922. I 11739 Performs an especial task and one that has for a long while been waiting for accomplishment: sympathetically, humorously but with sufficient gravity it paints a true image of a type that for two decades has held the imagination of the world.—Bookman.

Polar Regions

Markham, Sir Clements R. The lands of silence; a history of Arctic and Antarctic exploration. 1921. I 11327

Ponting, Herbert G. The great white South; being an account of experiences with Captain Scott's South Pole expedition, and of the nature life of the Antarctic. 1922. I 11352

More interesting than most novels is this account of Scott's ill-fated expedition written by the official photographer of the party. Excellent illustrations give a clear idea of the immensity and beauty of the antarctic continent.

Rasmussen, Knud. Greenland by the Polar sea; the story of the Thule expedition from Melville Bay to Cape Morris Jesup; tr. from the Danish. 1922. I 11329

The leader of this expedition was born in Greenland, lived there as a boy and had mastered the language. He is a great admirer of the Eskimo and tells a lively interesting story. In contrast to previous expeditions this one traveled over the land instead of on sea-ice, thus involving greater risks.

HISTORY

The World War

Cummings, E. E. The enormous room. 1922. A 7197

A vivid account of the author's experiences in a French prison. The conditions of the prison, the petty graft, the stupidity of some in authority, are clearly and graphically presented, while the prisoners are drawn with vigorous characterization.

Germany. Foreign Office. The German army in Belgium, the white book of May 1915, tr. by E. N. Bennett, with a foreword on military reprisals in Belgium and Ireland. 1921. A 7196

Europe

Gleaves, Albert. A history of the transport service; adventures and experiences of United States transports and cruisers in the world war. 1921. A 7202

The stories are taken from the official reports of the men on the transports and given in their own words. The Boston Transcript considers the book "one of the most important contributions to our knowledge of the war."

Panarettoff, Stephen. Near Eastern affairs and conditions. 1922. A 5252

(Williams College institute of politics publications.)

A series of lectures by the ambassador who for years has represented Bulgaria in the United States. The author desires a Balkan confederation and shows the conditions that have hitherto interfered.

Rhys, Ernest, comp. and ed. The growth of political liberty; a source book of English history. 1922. Open Shelf

(Everyman's library.)

Robins, Lucy. War shadows; a documental story of the struggle for amnesty. 1922. A 7201

Asia, Africa

Chung, Henry. The case of Korea; a collection of evidence on the Japanese domination of Korea, and on the development of the Korean independence movement. 1921. A 4787

The case of Japan becomes the case of England, of France, of the United States. The lesson to be drawn from this complete manual of imperial conquest and behavior is that no nation is good enough or great enough to rule another.—New Republic.

Harris, Walter B. Morocco that was. 1921. A 4751

An entertainingly written account of Morocco's last years as an independent country. The author was correspondent for the London Times there and gleaned his information at first hand.

Powell, E. Alexander. Asia at the cross-roads: Japan, Korea, China, Philippine Islands. 1922. A 4824

A simple and informal discussion of problems, financial and political, which the Literary Review calls a "comprehensive and up-to-the-minute study of the welter of suspicions, intrigues, and cross-purposes which make up the baffling problem of the Pacific."

Reinsch, Paul S. An American diplomat in China. 1922. A 8116

Contents: Old China and the new republic.—The passing of Yuan Shih-Kai.—The war and China.—Last year of war and aftermath.

Dr. Reinsch was minister to China from 1913 to 1919, so that his experiences ought to be of vital importance to those interested in world politics.

United States

California. State Library. Study outline of California history, by Eudora Garoutte. 1920. B 2877

Hawes, Kirk. A condensed history of Dearborn Park, and the efforts that have been made during the past eight years to secure the right to erect a public library building and a soldiers' and sailors' memorial hall on the same. 1891. B 7761

"Adopted and published by the Chicago Public Library, and the Grand Army Hall and Memorial Association, of Illinois."

Hemenway, Abby Maria, ed. The local history of Andover, Vermont, by Hiland H. Gutterson, t. c., Rev. W. S. Balch and others. 1922. B 5714, 35

(Heartman's historical series.)

(University of Iowa studies in the social sciences.)

Lawrence, Robert Means. Old Park Street and its vicinity. 1922. B 7946

Old Park Street, Boston, began its fascinating career as a muddy lane on which stood an almshouse and a granary. It later became the home of many distinguished Bostonians. The reminiscences of a former resident add greatly to the interest of the picture.

Selections and writings on early American history. 1919. B 5990

(Great American historical classics series.)

Contents: Selections from Settlement and Indian wars in Virginia and Pennsylvania, by J. Doddridge.—Figures of the past, by J. Quincy.—Colonel Daniel Boone's Autobiography.—Selections from Mrs. Trollope's Domestic manners of the Americans.—Selections from Col. Jas. Smith's travels.—Way's Ohio-Michigan war.

FICTION

Bacheller, Irving. In the days of Poor Richard. 1922. F 20095

An historical romance American in spirit but international in scope, centering around the personality of Franklin, idealized. There are glimpses of Washington, Patrick Henry, Benedict Arnold, George III and Louis XVI. The love story of the Yankee boy and English girl typifies the greater love between man and liberty.

Batten, H. Mortimer. Many trails. 1921. F 20289

Stories of animal life.

Burnett, Frances Hodgson. Robin. 1922. F 20787

Sequel to The head of the House of Coombe, F 20786.

All lovers of romance will welcome and delight in this tale of young love, which is the story of Donal Muir and Robin.—New York Times.

Caven, Stewart. A pair of idols. 1922. F 11702

A charming comedy centering about Irish archeology, with good local background not overdrawn. It is a love story with plenty of Irish wit and ingenuity.

Corkery, Daniel. The hounds of Banba. 1922. F 21367

Contents: The ember.—On the heights.—Cowards.—Seumas.—The Aherns.—Colonel Mac Gillcuddy goes home.—An unfinished symphony.—A bye-product.—The price.

Short stories of the Sein Feiners and their great heroism while working for the freedom of Ireland, "impregnated with a subtle poetic atmosphere that lifts them from the merely clever" (New York Times).

Couperus, Louis. The books of the small souls: F 12211

Small souls. 1914. F 12211

The later life. 1915. F 12212

The twilight of the souls. 1917. F 12213

Dr. Adriaan. 1918. F 12214

By a printers' error this series was omitted from the main Fiction catalog under the author's name, and is included here to make the numbers available.

Fletcher, J. S. Ravensdene Court. 1922. F 22131

A combination mystery, detective and adventure tale, much above the average. Cold shivers chase themselves up and down one's spinal column, and one's attention never wavers.

Gorki, Maxim, pseud. of A. M. Pyeshkov. Through Russia; a book of stories. 1922. Open Shelf

(Everyman's library.)

Contents: The birth of a man.—The icebreaker.—Gubin.—Nilushka.—The cemetery.—On a river steamer.—A woman.—In a mountain defile.—Kalinin.—The dead man.

Gourmont, Rémy de. Mr. Antiphilos, satyr; tr. from the French by John Howard, with an introduction by Jack Lewis. 1922. F 22532

An ironical study of civilization as seen through the eyes of a satyr who leaves his happy carefree life and lured by a woman goes to live in a French town. His views of the modern world of morals and conventions are delightfully refreshing.

Howard, F. Morton. Happy rascals. 1922.
F 14136

Ten short sea stories.

Huxley, Aldous. Mortal coils. 1922.
F 23309

Contents: The Gioconda smile.—Permutations among the nightingales, one act play.—The Tillotson banquet.—Green tunnels.—Nuns at luncheon.

A collection of five ironical, satirical, startlingly brilliant pieces, at times very unpleasant and pessimistic, but humorous always. "The Gioconda smile" has been ranked with the best of Maupassant.

Malet, Lucas, pseud. of Mary St. Leger Harrison. Da Silva's widow, and other Stories. 1922.
F 22703

Contents: Da Silva's widow.—Boy's love.—The higher education of Mr. Besley Wright.—The privet hedge.—The birth of a masterpiece.—Julia's marriage.—On the boat deck.—How they met again.—The pill-box.

A hint of tragedy balanced by a vein of optimism characterizes each of the vital, intensely human sketches contained in this collection. A dramatic force underlies the telling of the stories and tinges each with an element of suspense.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S BOOKS

Children's Book Week

November 12-18

DURING four years of united effort of parents and teachers, librarians and the makers and sellers of books, a common basis of sympathy and understanding has been established which makes this, the fourth annual Children's Book Week, a celebration worthy of special mention. Great stress has been placed on the advancement of the theory that the selection of the best books for children's reading is an important factor in American education. For it is now an undisputed fact that there are really good books for and about lifelike boys and girls instead of merely books about impossibly good or unnaturally bad children, as was too long the case. A child's taste is naturally good, and it is only from perversion or neglect that he learns to prefer the lurid or exaggerated to simple and true presentations of life and beauty.

Various means of concentrating attention during this week on books which will give children the greatest pleasure "from nursery rhyme to grown-up time" have been devised by booksellers, teachers, and librarians. The Chicago Public Library will observe Children's Book Week in book displays in the Central Building and all branches, and in the distribution of special children's lists. The Central Library will have an attractive exhibit in the corridor adjoining the Thomas Hughes Room for children, located on the fourth floor, Washington Street side. In the Hughes Room as well as in all out-lying branches the suggestive lists on the following page may be had and the books recommended on them.

Lists for Free Distribution

- Boys' Books. A list of about thirty books for boys in the grade schools with brief descriptive notes. They are standard books of adventure and achievement which all boys like to read, distributed by the Chicago Public Library during Boys' Week.
- A Shelf of Books for a One-Room School. The twenty-five books selected as most desirable for this purpose by ballots taken at the annual national conferences of teachers and librarians. They are arranged in order of the number of votes they received and are annotated.
- Children's Books for Christmas Presents. The titles are arranged in three groups: Picture books and other books for little children; Books for young children; and Books for older boys and girls. Very brief notes have been added from various library book-lists.
- Chicago Public Library book-marks. Five brief graded lists with alluring notes and special references in each case to some other equally attractive title.
- Graded lists, 1-8. Typewritten lists selected for recreational reading in connection with class-room libraries.

Lists for Sale

- Christmas; published by the Chicago Public Library. Lists of books and articles on Christmas legends, traditions and customs classified by countries, and on community Christmas; lists also of Christmas music, Christmas carols, poems, plays, monologs, entertainments, essays, and stories. Price 5 cents.
- The Bookshelf for Boys and Girls. A new edition delightfully illustrated, revised to August 1922, carefully annotated, classified and indexed. It contains a special list for Boy Scout readers edited by F. K. Mathews, Boy Scout librarian. Price 5 cents.

Lists for Library Reference

- Books for Boys and Girls. A suggestive purchase list prepared by the Boston Bookshop for Boys and Girls.
- A List of Books for Girls and Boys. Suggested for purchase by the Children's Book Shop of New York.
- Books to grow on. A valuable list of suggestions for high-school recreational reading published by the Buffalo Public Library.
- Reading for Pleasure and Profit. A similar high-school list prepared by the Newark Free Public Library.
- Graded List of Books for Children. Prepared by the School-Library Committee of the N.E.A., and containing 120 pages of lists followed by title and subject indexes.
- Graded List of Stories to Read Aloud to Children. Published by the Rosenberg Library of Galveston, Texas.
- Stories to Tell to Children. A list of stories for young children, arranged progressively by ages and used with success in library story-hours.
- Fairy Stories to Tell and Suggestions for the Story-Teller, by Nina Brotherton.
- Plays for Children. An annotated index arranged alphabetically, prepared by Alice Hazeltine of the St. Louis Public Library. There are also lists of plays suitable for all holidays, for other occasions, and of operettas, pantomimes and other special forms.
- Lists of Stories and Programs for Story Hours. Compiled by Effie L. Power for the St. Louis Public Library.
- Reading Lists for Special Days. Prepared by the Cleveland Public Library.
- Heroism. A reading list for boys and girls, published by the New York Public Library.
- Eighty Tales of Valor and Romance. Published by the Cleveland Public Library.

Other suggestive lists for children's reading, including many of a more specific character, may be consulted at the Library and its branches.

New Books for the Blind

This list includes books for the blind which the Library has received since May, 1921. Except when the words "full spelling" are added, the type includes contractions of grade 1 1/2 or 2.

Six actable one-act plays which have been presented by the Vagabond Players.

Essays

Broun, Heywood. Pieces of hate and other enthusiasms. 1922. E 2049

This book of humorous essays is inspired fooling almost from beginning to end. The author has the novel idea of prefacing the essays with an unfavorable review of them written by himself, in which he remarks gravely: "We wish we could speak with unreserved enthusiasm about this book."

Eaton, Walter Prichard. Penguin persons and peppermints. 1922. E 2578

These are short, informal papers in different moods, and most of them are the sort of thing that one cannot resist calling whimsical; yet the book is not one to pick up if you have only a few minutes to read, because it is too hard to put down.—Bookman.

TRAVEL AND DESCRIPTION

Europe and Asia

Fraprie, Frank Roy. The spell of the Rhine. 1922. I 7520

(The spell series.)

The war is forgotten and one remembers only the old romantic Rhine in reading this book, which would be an ideal companion for a trip on that famous old river.

Maxwell, Donald. Unknown Kent; being a series of unmethodical explorations of the county, illustrated in line and colour by the author. 1922. I 10369

Compact with charm. It is written in a delightfully discursive style and its chapters dealing with the idle wanderings of the author through the many pleasant by-ways of Kent are most engrossing.—New York Times.

Snowden, Mrs. Philip. A political pilgrim in Europe. 1921. I 11271

The author has for a number of years lectured in the U. S. on woman suffrage. As a member of the British labor movement she gives an account of how she found the political, economic and social conditions during her two years in Europe. Her meetings with well known people are gossipy and vividly told.

Stein, Aurel. Serindia; detailed report of explorations in Central Asia and western-most China carried out and described under the orders of H. M. Indian government. 1921. 5v. *P 4006

A scholarly and scientific account of the author's second expedition into China. The fourth volume consists of 175 plates, many of which are in color.

North and South America

Argentine Republic. Ministry of Public Works. Northern Patagonia; character and resources. 1914. I 11186

"A study of the elements of development in the region tributary to the National Railway from Port San Antonio to Lago Nahuel Huapi and the extension to Valdivia, Chile; including the Andean lake district."

Faris, John T. Seeing the eastern states. 1922. I 11569

Panamoric sketches of scenic and historical interest, starting with Maine and working south.

Graham, R. B. Cunningham. The conquest of New Granada; being the life of Gonzalo Jimenez de Quesada. 1922. C 24972

Not only valuable for important information about Colombia and its explorer but equally interesting as a dramatic narrative. The stark realism of death and pestilence and the heroic accomplishment of stupendous tasks form a story of pure romance.

James, George Wharton. Utah, the land of blossoming valleys. 1922. I 11777

"The story of its desert wastes, of its huge and fantastic rock formations, and of its fertile gardens in the sheltered valleys; a survey of its rapidly developing industries; an account of the origin, development, and beliefs of the Mormon church; and chapters on the flora and fauna, and on the scenic wonders that are a heritage of all Americans."

Rosenberger, Jesse Leonard. Through three centuries; Colver and Rosenberger lives and times, 1620-1922. 1922. C 20408

Contents: Colvers and New England in early days.—Rev. Nathaniel Colver, D. D., and his day.—The life of Rev. Charles Kendrick Colver.—The life-story of Susan Esther Colver.—Jesse Leonard Rosenberger and his times.

Eight members of the Colver family have contributed to this genealogy. Courage, determination and adventure were leading characteristics of these pioneers, while the growth of the Baptist faith in this country owes much to their services and devotion.

Sellers, Edwin Jaquett. Supplement to genealogies. 1922. C 20425

Supplement to Genealogy of the Jaquett family, C 16752; Genealogy of the De Carpenter family of Holland; Allied ancestry of the Van Culemborg family of Culemborg, Holland; Allied families of Delaware, C 16712; Genealogy of Dr. Francis Joseph Pfeiffer, of Philadelphia, and his descendants, 1734-1899, C 16780; Fenwick allied ancestry; Genealogy of the Kollock family of Sussex county, Delaware, 1657-1897, C 16668; Captain John Avery, president judge at the Whorekill in Delaware Bay, and his descendants, C 16699.

Individual Biography

Baring, Maurice. The puppet show of memory. 1922. C 20751

The author has written his reminiscences in a most engaging manner. He covers a variety of subjects but reaches the heights in his chapter on the fascination of Russia.

Chimay, Princess de. A daughter of Napoleon; memoirs of Emilie de Pellapra, Comtesse de Brigode, Princess de Chimay, with an introduction by Princess Bibesco. 1922. C 21225

Memoirs of an illegitimate daughter of Napoleon. Her impressions of an unhappy childhood, her many suitors, her marriage at the age of sixteen to M. de Brigode who was old enough to be her father, his death and her second marriage, are simply and naturally told.

Duncan, Joseph. PUTNAM, ELIZABETH DUNCAN. The life and services of Joseph Duncan, governor of Illinois, 1834-1838. 1922. C 21657

Farquhar, A. B. The first million the hardest; an autobiography, in collaboration with Samuel Crowther. 1922. C 21869

The author is a wealthy manufacturer of farm machinery who began life as a poor boy, and his book is of special interest as a record of the development of the present complex social and industrial conditions from pioneer beginnings.

Grant, Ulysses S. JONES, FRANK H. An address delivered before the Chicago historical society at the celebration of the 100th anniversary of the birth of General Grant, Thursday, April 27, 1922. C 22159

Lloyd George, David. PUNCH. Lloyd George by Mr. Punch. 1922. C 23023

This collection of cartoons which traces the career of the "little Welshman" from his first entrance into political life to the present . . . is an unfailingly good humored, even if sometimes critical, portrayal of his evolution as a statesman.—Literary Review.

Mainwaring, Sir Henry. MANWARING, GEORGE ERNEST. The life and works of Sir Henry Mainwaring. 1920-1922. 2v. A 3389, 54, 56

(Publications of the Navy Records Society.)

Moore, George. FREEMAN, JOHN. A portrait of George Moore in a study of his work. 1922. C 23461

An introspective analysis of George Moore through his novels, his confessions and his life. It will appeal to his admirers and serve as an introduction to those who do not know him.

Palmer, Nathaniel Brown. SPEARS, JOHN R. Captain Nathaniel Brown Palmer, an old-time sailor of the sea. 1922. C 23669

The interesting biography of a New England trader in Antarctic regions, a sea-faring designer of clipper ships.

Pringle, Elizabeth W. Allston. Chronicles of Chicora Wood. 1922. C 23849

The autobiography of a southern woman whose father was a wealthy rice planter of South Carolina. An interesting account of family and social life in the south before and during the Civil War.

Saint-Saëns, Camille. HERVEY, ARTHUR. Saint-Saëns. 1922. C 24063

Reveals how from his earliest youth Saint-Saëns showed his marvelous musical talent and tells of his friendships for Berlioz, Wagner, Gounod, and Liszt. The book further contains an analysis of his compositions and of his literary works, especially those of musical criticism.

St. Vincent, John Jervis, Earl of. Letters of admiral of the fleet, the Earl of St. Vincent, whilst first lord of the admiralty, 1801-1804; ed. by David Bonner Smith. 1922. A 3389, 55

(Publications of the Navy Records Society.)

Salisbury, Robert, Marquis of. CECIL, Lady GWENDOLEN. Life of Robert, marquis of Salisbury. 1921. 2v. C 24064

v. 1. 1830-1868.
2. 1868-1880.

The life here presented is not merely adequate; in its obvious honesty, its sustained vigor and interest, its courage and conviction, it is worthy of its subject—and that is high praise.—Literary Review.

Wells, H. G. DARK, SIDNEY. An outline of Wells, the superman in the street; with an introduction by Heywood Brown. 1922. C 24782

The life and character of this many-sided man as made known through a wide familiarity with his works is presented in a journalistic style noteworthy for clearness and vigor.

York, Alvin C. COWAN, SAMUEL K. Sergeant York and his people. 1922. C 24993

A book of appreciation of the "Tennessee mountaineer who performed what Marshal Foch acclaimed as the greatest feat accomplished by any private soldier of all the armies of Europe during the war . . . simply told evidently by one who knows Sergt. York and his country" (Chicago Post).

FICTION

Armstrong, Harold Hunter. For richer, for poorer. 1922. F 10666

Story of a young and ineffectual lawyer who marries a capable and not unbeautiful girl, and of their struggles, both marital and financial. Through his wife's illness the husband finally shows himself a man. By the author of Zell (F 10403), now using his real name.

Balmer, Edwin. The breath of scandal. 1922. F 20183

The scene is laid in Evanston and Chicago. Marjorie Hale, a sheltered girl, discovers that her father whom she thought above reproach was living a double life. The book shows how she readjusted herself to others after learning about her father.

Banning, Margaret Culkin. Spellbinders. 1922. F 20210

Helen Flandon who is a member of a feminist organization, is confronted by her husband's jealousy of her outside interests. This is typical of the problem many couples are facing today.

Benét, Stephen Vincent. Young people's pride; a novel. 1922. F 20381

A swiftly moving story of young people, their problems, ambitions and their loves, against a background of literature and art.

Bindloss, Harold. Northwest! 1922. F 11132

The hero of this story sows pecks of wild oats before he finally settles down, marries a pretty Canadian girl, and goes back to England where an inheritance awaits him.

Bower, B. M., pseud. of Mrs. Bertha M. Sinclair. The trail of the white mule. 1922. F 18168

Sequel to Casey Ryan, F 18167.

In this story, Casey attempts city life, but the traffic cops are such a restraining influence that he heads back to the desert to get a breath of air. There he is accused of moonshining, vindicates himself, and becomes a prohibition agent.

Bruun, Laurids. The promised isle, translated from the Danish. 1922. F 20755

Sequel to Van Zanten's happy days, F 20754.

A satirical tale of three young Dutch artists—a poet, painter and musician—who go to an uninhabited island in the South Seas to avoid society. After a year of adventure, they become homesick and finally return to home and fame.

Buchholtz, Johannes. The miracles of Clara Van Haag; translated from the Danish. 1922. F 20773

This sequel to Egholm and his God (F 20772) continues the life of the Egholm family in the little village of Knarreby, to which comes Fru Clara, a girl sweetheart of the inventor, who endeavors to help the impoverished family. Although the characters seem unreal, they are simple and pathetic and curiously appealing.

Cabell, James Branch. Gallantry; dizain des fêtes galantes. 1922. F 11525

This is a revised edition of an earlier work. The English and French setting in the Jacobite period gives plenty of opportunity for Cabell's colorful and sparkling romance.

Cather, Willa. One of ours. 1922. F 11650

A war story, written to show that the boys who died in the height of their idealistic sacrifice are much better off than those who returned from overseas to the disillusionment of post-war conditions. The first half showing the hero's background previous to the war is Miss Cather at her best.

Comstock, Harriet T. At the crossroads. 1922. F 21329

To recover his lost health a young writer leaves home and settles in a village at the cross roads where he finally regains interest in life through Mary Clare, a beautiful character surrounded by mystery. After his return from the war a solution is reached which permits a culmination of the romance.

Crane, Stephen. Men, women and boats. 1921. F 21401

(The modern library of the world's best literature.)

Contents: Stephen Crane: an estimate.—The open boat.—The reluctant voyagers.—The end of the battle.—The upturned face.—An episode of war.—An experiment in misery.—The duel that was not fought.—A desertion.—A dark-brown dog.—The pace of youth.—Sullivan County sketches: A tent in agony. Four men in a cave. The mesmeric mountain.—The snake.—London impressions.—The Scotch express.

Crane stands alone as a realist who was able to bring both bitterness and humor to the one end of hard, unrelenting, and at the same time poetic and not wholly unkind irony.—Chicago Evening Post.

Curwood, James Oliver. The country beyond; a romance of the wilderness. 1922. F 21421

A stirring romance of the Canadian wilds, in which the hero, in escaping from the Northwest Mounted Police, meets with the most hair-raising experiences.

Dell, Ethel M. Charles Rex. 1922. F 21549

Sequel to The hundredth chance, F 12464.

A noble, ugly, wicked, sinister hero comes to the rescue of an ill-treated bell-boy in a Monte Carlo hotel. On the way home they are shipwrecked, and the boy of 14 turns out to be a girl of 19. The usual complications follow and all ends happily.

D'Ennery, Adolphe, pseud. of Eugene Philippe. The two orphans. F 16247

Dennis, Geoffrey. Mary Lee. 1922. F 21561
The story of a middle nineteenth-century child whose environment is one of extreme religious fanaticism. Through her agony of body and soul, her inner life expands and grows richer. Unusually powerful for a first novel.

Derieux, Samuel A. Frank of Freedom Hill. 1922. F 21566
Stories of a brown setter, his master, and Tommy, his playmate. It is better than the average animal book as the dog is not given exaggerated human qualities.

Farjeon, Eleanor. Martin Pippin in the apple orchard. 1922. F 12826

A fairy tale for grown-ups. The story is founded on an old Sussex folk song, "The spring-green lady," and contains six episodes. The style is unusually beautiful and will be appreciated by admirers of De la Mare, for its delicate whimsicality resembles him.

Fox, John, jr. A Cumberland vendetta. F 8714

—A knight of the Cumberland (Hell for sartain). F 13033

These titles are here repeated as a correction to bring the entries in the main Fiction catalog up to date.

Gabriel, Gilbert W. Jiminy. 1922. F 22327

A delightful, whimsical little story of a young poetess and her artist husband who seek for the lost sonnets of Raphael as a symbol of love and happiness.

Grey, Zane. The day of the beast. 1922. F 22616

Zane Grey departs from his usual western tale in the powerful story dedicated to "the American men who gave themselves to the service in the great war." It is a study of after-war conditions, devoting particularly harsh attention to the flapper.

Hutchinson, A. S. M. This freedom. 1922. F 23301

The story of a woman who continued her business career after her marriage, with disastrous results to her home and family. It opens most charmingly with her childhood in rural England.

Hutchinson, Vere. Sea wrack. 1922. F 23305

The lives of two foundlings furnish the story which is laid in northern England with the atmosphere of a sea coast village. As a first novel it has both power and originality and is an altogether creditable achievement from the sister of A. S. M. Hutchinson.

Jackson, Charles Tenney. Captain Sazarac. 1922. F 14302

Relates the strange plot to rescue Napoleon from St. Helena formed in New Orleans about a century ago. However, the ship changes its mission and goes on an expedition of adventure. Conspiracy, mutiny, Spanish encounters, and the rescue of a beautiful girl from a British ship supply the action.

Jepson, Selwyn. The qualified adventurer. 1922. F 24070

The adventures of a man who himself was an expert in adventure-story writing. Fate places him on board a ship bound for China in search of lost treasure, where he experiences a variety of adventure and romance. Humor, wit and thrills combine to give the reader good entertainment.

Keable, Robert. The mother of all living; a novel of Africa. 1922. F 24167

Better artistically and technically than Simon called Peter. The characters are English, the setting South Africa, which gives Mr. Keable ample opportunity for beautiful descriptions, of which he is a master.

Kyne, Peter B. Cappy Ricks retires. 1922. F 14607

Sequel to Cappy Ricks, F 14590.

Incidents in the life of this old sea-dog who decides many times to quit the sea. The New York Times likens this quaint old man's retirements to a prima donna's farewell tours—they don't happen.

Laing, Janet. Wintergreen; a tale of the reconstruction. 1922. F 24379

The book shows what idle gossip can do, and how a strong character can solve many difficulties. Wintergreen, a middle-aged woman posing as a servant, brings about a general reconciliation.

Lewis, Sinclair. Babbitt. 1922. F 24519

A cruel and heartless but distinctly humorous characterization of a typical middle-class American business man written by the author of Main Street, who has been called "the greatest photographer in America."

McCutcheon, George Barr. Viola Gwyn. 1922. F 24826

Romance of early Indiana, containing a little mystery, a villain of course, and a most beautiful hero and heroine.

Machen, Arthur. The secret glory. 1922. F 24851

Selections from the notebook of Ambrose Merrick, a dreamer, form the high light of the book. It is a peculiar combination of satire on English public schools and mysticism from the author of The angels of Mons.

McKenna, Stephen. The confessions of a well-meaning woman. 1922. F 24860

A clever story told mostly in letters, in which Lady Ann in reduced circumstances tries to marry off her good-for-nothing son to a large amount of money.

Maran, René. Batouala. 1922. F 24956

An impression of negro life in the French Congo, as seen through negro eyes. "It does not accuse," "it records." According to the Nation it is fiercely though naively animal. The book was awarded the Goncourt prize of 1921 for its originality.

Marshall, Edison. The sky line of spruce. 1922. F 24980

Another wild and woolly western story set in British Colombia. A shell-shocked ex-soldier who had lost his memory is discovered in a prison gang by an old friend who works the governor for a pardon. There is a wolf-dog who is not the least interesting character.

Maxwell, W. B. Spinster of this parish. 1922. F 25026

A woman brought up in a Victorian atmosphere falls in love with an explorer tied to an insane wife. Throwing off the bonds of convention she follows him across the Andes. The book portrays the conflict between the new and the old order of things, also presenting a phase of the English divorce problem.

Norris, Kathleen. Certain people of importance. 1922. F 25613

A story of the fortunes of the Crabtree family in their migrations from New England to California. A remarkable story with much careful character drawing and a detailed picture of life in San Francisco in the last part of the nineteenth century.

Phillipotts, Eden. Pan and the twins. 1922. F 16301

A pleasant result of his exercising his imagination, his philosophy, and his sense of humor. There is a strong philosophical slant to the book, but one never loses sight of the twinkle in the author's eye.—Bookman.

Punshon, E. R. The Bittermeads mystery. 1922. F 16691

The usual type of sensational mystery story only a trifle more bloodthirsty, where the villain is made to suffer, the rightful heir gains his own, and the hero marries the much abused stepdaughter.

Reed, Charles Bert. Duke. 1922. E 5377
(Chicago Literary Club papers.)
Story of a dog.

Sabatini, Rafael. Captain Blood, his Odyssey. 1922. F 17563

A splendid pirate yarn of the days of James II. Peter Blood, physician, becomes Peter Blood, pirate, and a wonderful one he is. His merits as a seaman finally win him a commission from the king, a governorship, and—the girl.

Saltus, Edgar. The ghost girl. 1922. F 17603

A mystery tale of exceptional brilliance as to style and unusual interest as to plot.

Schweikert, Harry C., ed. French short stories, edited for school use. 1920. J 7757

(The Lake English classics.)
Contents: Balzac: An episode of the Reign of Terror.—The atheist's mass.—Colonel Chabert.—Mérimee: Mateo Falcone.—Musset: Croisilles.—Maupassant: The necklace.—The wreck.—Fright.—Two friends.—The hand.—Daudet: The last lesson.—The pope's mule.—The Reverend Father Gaucher's elixir.—Coppée: A piece of bread.—France: The juggler of Notre Dame.—Bazin: The birds in the letter-box.—Claretie: Boum-Boum.—Lemaitre.—The siren.

—Russian short stories, edited for school use. 1919. J 7766

(The Lake English classics.)
Contents: Pushkin: The shot.—Gogol: The cloak.—Dostoevski: The thief.—Turgenev: Biryuk; A Lear of the steppes.—Tolstoi: God sees the truth but waits; Master and man; Three archbishops of land.—Garshin: The signal.—Chekhov: In exile.—Korolenko: The old bell-ringer.—Andreyev: Valia.—Gorki: Comrades; Chelkash.—Kuprin: Cain.

Seltzer, Charles Alden. West! 1922. F 17917

A western story well loaded with gunpowder and plentifully sprinkled with corpses. The main idea of the book seems to be the conflict between the standards and ideas of East and West.

Stocking, Charles Francis. Thou Israel. 1921. F 18405

A dramatically written Christian Science story of the mental and spiritual struggle of a wealthy young Englishman during the war. His intellectual freedom is gained through the help of a girl of rare spiritual powers.

Tarbell, Ida M. He knew Lincoln, and other Billy Brown stories. 1922. F 27695

Contents: He knew Lincoln.—Back in '58.—Father Abraham.—In Lincoln's chair.

The simplicity, straightforwardness, kindness and honesty of Mr. Lincoln shine out in these sketches with a brilliance well deserved.—Springfield Republic.

Terhune, Albert Payson. Further adventures of Lad. 1922. F 27746

Sequel to Lad: a dog, F 18536.

The author's love and understanding of dogs is evident in this continuation of the adventures of that delightful thoroughbred, Lad.

Tyson, J. Aubrey. The Scarlet Tanager. 1922. F 27918

A vivid and thrilling detective story with a war background. The New York Times thinks its plot quite superior to the usual ones of its type, and comments on the "refreshing lack of coincidence" and the same and logical action of the characters.

White, Stewart Edward. On tiptoe; a romance of the redwoods. 1922. F 19316

"This is a swashbuckling story of pirate days . . . Follow and you shall see brave adventuring, and dastardly plots."

Willis, Honoré. Judith of the godless valley. 1922. F 19592

Judith lived among the mountains of the Southwest in Lost Chief Valley among pioneer conditions. She craved better surroundings, where there might be room for beauty and ideals. Her seven years of struggle were endurable only because she had Douglas, who is the more important character.

Young, Francis Brett. The red knight; a romance. 1922. F 19941

The author uses a Graustark method in this romance but the theme is modern and treats of struggles and revolutions in the imaginary land of Trinacria.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S BOOKS

Miscellaneous

Belloc, Hilaire. More beasts for worse children. 1922. H 7342

PHILOSOPHY

Sinclair, May. The new idealism. 1922.

L 13833

Miss Sinclair published a "Defence of idealism" in 1917 against the "new realism" of the followers of James, Royce and Bergson who were protesting against the tyrannies of formal absolutism. She bases her "new idealism" on the distinction between primary and secondary consciousness.

Mental Hygiene, Psychoanalysis

Paton, Stewart. Signs of sanity and the principles of mental hygiene. 1922.

L 13233

The author discusses mental and bodily fitness and how they are to be secured. He brings forward the idea that civilization can be controlled only through soundness of mind.

Stekel, William. The depths of the soul; psycho-analytical studies. 1922 L 13982

Palmistry

Rem, Henri. What your hand reveals. 1922

L 13465

A popularly written and comprehensive study of the hand for the purpose, says the author, of teaching us to know ourselves and others, "to determine the natural talents of our children; to raise a corner of the veil which hides destiny and the future."

Ethics

Courage, Leadership

Barrie, J. M. Courage. 1922. L 14162

A rectorial address delivered at St. Andrews University last May. The Literary Review calls it one of the fine essays of our decade. "It is an appeal to the new generation to go into partnership with the old that helped bring on the war and had to endure it."

Slattery, Margaret. The highway to leadership. 1920. L 14144

A series of inspirational essays on the necessity of leadership and the qualifications of a true leader.

RELIGION

Hastings, James, and others, ed. Encyclopædia of religion and ethics. 1908-1922. 12v. *R 3428

This valuable work of reference is now complete with the exception of the index volume which is in preparation.

McConnell, Francis John. Church finance and social ethics. 1920. M 9539

With candor and consistency all too rare, the author insists that church funds are to be "socially justified" no less exactly than those of other vested interests, and "without willfully or unconsciously squaring to donors' points of view".—Survey.

Meditations on the life and passion of Christ, from British Museum addit ms. 11307, by Charlotte D'Evelyn. 1921.

*J 1175, 158

(Early English Text Society. Original series.) "The poem which is printed for the first time in the following pages, might be described briefly as a compendium of the lyric themes of Middle English religious poetry."

Recreation, Fishing

Meyer, Harold D. The rural playground. 1921. K 30493
(University of North Carolina extension bulletin.)

Smith, O. W. The book of the pike. 1922. K 30849

A well planned and excellently illustrated book for pursuers of the pike, pickerel and muskellunge.... We are told how to fish for them—an especial chapter being given to ice fishing and another to "the fine art of pike cooking."—Chicago Evening Post.

LITERATURE

Hibbard, C. A. Studies in Southern literature; a program for women's clubs. 1922. J 7049
(University of North Carolina extension bulletin.)

Manly, John Matthews, and Rickert, Edith. Contemporary American literature, bibliographies and study outlines. 1922. J 7051

An excellent reference book covering more important writers since 1914. It contains a short biography of each author, suggestions for reading, a chronological bibliography, annotations, and many valuable lists.

Pattee, Fred Lewis. Side lights on American literature. 1922. J 7050

Contents: The age of O. Henry.—A critic in C major (H. L. Mencken).—The prophet of the last frontier (Jack London).—The epic of New England.—On the terminal moraine of New England Puritanism (Mary E. Wilkins Freeman).—The shadow of Longfellow.—The modernness of Philip Freneau.—The centenary of Bryant's poetry.—Poe's "Ullume".

While the book is chiefly a literary criticism of various American writers, we are also given intimate pictures of their personal lives, especially as their circumstances affected their literary output. Mr. Pattee has an easy, vivid, narrative style which makes interesting reading.

Saintsbury, George, ed. A letter book; with an introduction on the history and art of letter-writing. 1922. E 5564

Has used... the best letter-writers but not their most famous letters. His book is not to be improved upon. Another would have done it differently; no one else alive could have done it so well, with such abundance of knowledge, with so fine a judgment.—Saturday Review.

Schelling, Felix E. Appraisements and asperities as to some contemporary writers. 1922. J 7991

Serious and whimsical essays on outstanding contemporary writers in drama, poetry and criticism. They go more thoroughly into the personalities and inherent merit of the authors than is customary in average reviews.

The Scriptores historiae Augustae; with an English translation. 1922. L 12273
(The Loeb classical library.)
Latin and English text.

Contents: Hadrian.—Aelius.—Antoninus Pius.—Marcus Aurelius Antoninus.—Lucius Verus.—Avidius Cassius.—Commodus.—Pertinax.—Didius Julianus.—Septimius Severus.—Pescennius Niger.—Clodius Albinus.

Authorship

Clark, Glenn. A manual of the short story art. 1922. J 7768

An informing book full of constructive criticism and helpful suggestions. Mr. Clark is obviously in sympathy with struggling young authors.

White, Henry Adelbert. English study and English writing. 1922. J 8110

Poetry

Anthony, Edward. Merry-go-roundelays. 1921. E 10628

Many of his verses have such a singable quality that the reader feels like playing Sullivan to the author's Gilbert by humming to the words an accompaniment of his own origination.—Literary Review.

Conkling, Hilda. Shoes of the wind. 1922. E 14548

These verses by one who is still a little girl shows how she continues to develop and grow since writing her first book of poems. The technique is naturally perfect and the imagery exquisite.

Dargan, Olive Tilford. Lute and furrow. 1922. E 14580

A book of striking contrasts as its name implies. Here are lyrics of careful technique, and many of them with true singing rhythms, and here are also rugged genre pictures of life and character in the southern mountains where the writer spends much of her life.—Chicago Daily News.

Hardy, Thomas. Late lyrics and earlier, with many other verses. 1922. E 14739

The poetry would in itself be sufficient in quality and quantity to give Mr. Hardy high rank amongst our immortals had he never written a line of prose.—London Mercury.

Lawrence, D. H. Tortoises. 1921. E 11180

A satire in free verse on the human race as symbolized by the tortoise. It is a philosophical and thought-provoking piece of work.

Le Buffe, Francis P. The hound of heaven; an interpretation. 1921. E 8732

Father Le Buffe has spent many years of thought on the poem and his notes show it. They are clarifying and suggestive... and one cannot follow them without acquiring a deeper love and understanding of Thompson's masterpiece.—Springfield Republican.

More, Brookes. The beggar's vision. 1921. E 14881

These poems are surrounded by an atmosphere of mysticism, many of them are very beautiful, while their workmanship leaves nothing to be desired.

Morley, Christopher. Translations from the Chinese. 1922. E 14880

This free verse is written in humorous vein and represents thoughts and philosophies which Mr. Morley imagines a Chinese mandarin would have upon visiting our country and leading a typical American life.

Punch. Poems from Punch, 1909-1920; with an introductory essay by W. B. Drayton Henderson. 1922. E 14372

A delightful collection of light verse not all comic but varied here and there by a gently pensive or romantic touch. There are also a few poems which strike a deeper note, as "In Flanders fields" which few remember appeared first in Punch.

West, Henry Litchfield, comp. Lyrics of the links. 1921. E 14373

A collection of short poems and parodies for golf fans, touching various phases of their interests. Among the authors represented are John Kendrick Bangs, Edgar A. Guest, Andrew Lang, and Ring Lardner.

Drama

Alden, Raymond Macdonald. Shakespeare. 1922. E 10041

(Master spirits of literature.)

A compendium of the known facts regarding Shakespeare, and of the prevailing critical judgments of modern scholarship, sufficiently untechnical for the purposes of the general reader, and at the same time uncolored by any desire to prove a case.—Preface.

The best plays of 1921-1922, and the year-book of the drama in America. 1922.

E 13492, 1921-1922

Contents: Anna Christie, by O'Neill.—A bill of divorce, by Dane.—Dulcy, by Kaufman and Connelly.—He who gets slapped, by Andreyev.—Six cylinder love, by McGuire.—The hero, by Emery.—The Dover road, by Milne.—Ambush, by Richman.—The circle, by Maugham.—The nest, by Gerald.

Brooke, Rupert. Lithuania; a drama in one act. 1915. E 13514

(Stewart Kidd modern plays.)

A tragedy possessing much dramatic power. A long lost son returns unrecognized to his desperate poverty-stricken family. The action then moves swiftly to a tense and disastrous climax.

Brooks, Charles S. Frightful plays! 1922. E 13515

Contents: By way of explanation.—On choosing a title.—Wappin' wharf.—At the sign of The Greedy Pig.

We are given here a delightfully quaint combination of essay and drama. It is a book to read aloud and not to act, as in production the author's humorous comments on his characters would be lost.

Chapman, John Jay. A glance toward Shakespeare. 1922. E 10062

Mr. Chapman has a keen eye and a most effective style. His thirteen essays average eight pages apiece. In this little room he has his say on the plays as poetry, and the plays on the stage, on the comedies, Shakespeare's types, the sonnets, and seven or eight separate dramas.—Literary Review.

Chekhov, Anton. Uncle Vania; scenes from country life in four acts. 1922. E 13176
(Poet Lore plays.)

Cohen, Helen Louise, ed. Longer plays by modern authors (American). 1922. E 11942

Contents: Drama in America, an introduction.—Fitch: Beau Brummell.—Thomas: The copperhead.—Kaufman and Connelly: Dulcy.—Tarkington: The intimate strangers.—Selected bibliography for the study of drama in America.

The historical introduction concludes with a warm appreciation of Eugene O'Neill's commanding position among the younger American generation.

Emig, Evelyn. The china pig; a play in one act. 1922. E 13176
(Poet Lore plays.)

Greene, Paul. The Lord's will; a play in one act. 1922. E 13176
(Poet Lore plays.)

Milne, A. A. Second plays. 1922. E 14078

Contents: Make-believe.—Mr. Pim passes by.—The Chamberley triangle.—The romantic age.—The stepmother.

Really delightful one-act plays all of which have been performed. They are charmingly imaginative and savor somewhat of Barrie.

—Three plays: The Dover road, The truth about Blayds, The great Broxopp. 1922. E 14097

These clever whimsical plays, two of which have been acted with great success, are as amusing to read as to watch on the stage.

Musset, Alfred de. A caprice; a comedy in one act. 1922. E 13176
(Poet Lore plays.)

O'Neill, Eugene. The hairy ape, Anna Christie, The first man. 1922. E 14171

Three typical O'Neill plays, dark and sombre but vivid and powerful. The first two have recently been performed on a Chicago stage with much success.

Pascal, Floy. Facing reality; a farce in one act. 1922. E 13176
(Poet Lore plays.)

Whiting, Eleanor Custis. Ashes; a play in one act. 1922. E 13176
(Poet Lore plays.)

Wilde, Oscar. The Duchess of Padua. 1920. E 13021

Essays and Miscellanies

Agate, James. Alarums and excursions. 1922. E 1763

A collection of bright entertaining essays dealing mostly with people and subjects relating to the stage. The style is clever, and the author's individuality evident throughout.

Broun, Heywood, and others. Nonsenseorship; sundry observations concerning prohibition, inhibitions and illegalities. 1922. E 4765

Contents: We have with us today, by G. P. P.—Evolution, another of those outlines, by G. S. Chapell.—Nonsenseorship, by H. Broun.—Literature and the bastinado, by B. Hecht.—The woman's place, by Ruth Hale.—Owed to Volstead, by W. Irwin.—The censorship of thought, by R. Keable.—The uninhibited flapper, by Helen B. Lowry.—The wower in the South Seas, by F. O'Brien.—Reformers: a hymn of hate, by Dorothy Parker.—Prohibition, by F. Swinnerton.—A guess at unwritten history, by H. M. Tomlinson.—In vino demi-tasse, by C. H. Towne.—Bootleg, by John V. A. Weaver.—And the playwright, by A. Woolcott.—The oracle that always says "no", by the author of the "Mirrors of Washington".

A collection of protestations vs. prohibitions of various sorts by some of the cleverest of contemporary writers.

Burroughs, John. The last harvest. 1922. E 2131

Contents: Emerson and his journals.—Flies in amber.—Another word on Thoreau.—A critical glance into Darwin.—What makes a poem?—Short studies in contrasts.—Day by day.—Gleanings.—Sundown papers.

Posthumous essays including, besides papers on Emerson, Thoreau, Darwin and Bergson, philosophical and literary reflections which possess a notable significance as the latest conclusions of a long life.

Egan, Maurice Francis. Confessions of a book-lover. 1922. J 7648

Contents: My boyhood reading.—Poets and poetry.—Certain novelties.—Letters, biographies, and memoirs.—Books at random.

Here is a pleasant volume, indeed. In it a fine scholar with a gentle fancy sets down his memories of books in boyhood and age.—Chicago Evening Post.

Masson, Thomas L., comp. Listen to these. 1922. E 4457

Mr. Masson was managing editor of Life for twenty-five years so his experience justifies and equips him in publishing collections of funny stories like this.

Mencken, H. L. Prejudices; third series. 1922. J 6439, 3

Mr. Mencken delights in irritating his readers and this book, which will be devoured as eagerly as the others, is no exception.

Traprock, Walter E., pseud of George Shepard Chappell. My northern exposure; the Kawa at the Pole. 1922. E 2140

A clever parody of recent North Pole literature, very bright and funny in spots, which will be appreciated by people who read the Polar books.

Wilde, Oscar. Vera; or, The nihilists. The soul of man under socialism.—Miscellanies: Wilde v. Whistler; Impressions of America; Sebastian Melmoth. 1920. E 6295

TRAVEL AND DESCRIPTION

Champlain, Samuel de. The works of Samuel de Champlain, reprinted, tr. and annotated by six Canadian scholars, under the general editorship of H. P. Biggar. v. 1. 1922. *B 8641

French and English text.

(The publications of the Champlain Society.)

Contents: Brief narrative, 1599–1601.—Of savages 1603.—The voyages, 1613.

Chesterton, G. K. What I saw in America. 1922. I 4336

Wise and witty observations of America and American institutions as seen by a sympathetic Englishman. Although Mr. Chesterton criticizes us he does so in a kindly and comprehending manner.

Cleveland Foundation. The Cleveland year book. 1922. I 11690

Shelved in Civics Dept.

Crockett, Albert S., comp. Ocean records; a pocket handbook for travelers. 1922. I 2673

Holmes, Burton. Burton Holmes travel-ogues, v. 14: England.—Scotland.—Ireland. 1922. I 9814, 14

Hutton, Edward. England of my heart: spring. 1914. I 10370

The present volume is the first of four, one for each season, to describe the southern counties of England. It takes us on a pleasant leisurely journey over the roads of Kent, Sussex and Hampshire.—Viewpoints in travel.

Kroeber, A. L. Peoples of the Philippines. 1919. I 9405

(American museum of natural history.)

Newton, Joseph Fort. Preaching in London; a diary of Anglo-American friendship. 1922. I 10377

After more than two years of war-time preaching in London, Dr. Fort Newton has written this account of his experiences which are crammed with interesting incidents and anecdotes.

O'Brien, Frederick. Atolls of the sun. 1922. I 12086

Another travel book with the same elusive charm possessed by White shadows and Mystic isles.

Peck, Annie S. Industrial and commercial South America. 1922. I 11162

Miss Peck's design in preparing the book was to produce a volume of distinct value to the specialist...The seeker for a market in South America for the products of his manufactories will find this an extremely useful volume.—Survey.

Public Ledger Co., Philadelphia. Historic Philadelphia; historic, central, metropolitan, industrial. 1922. I 11584

Geography, Maps

Frye, Alexis Everett. New geography. Bk. 1, pt. 1–2. 1921. 2v. I 11377

(Frye-Atwood geographical series.)

Geography in story form makes the study fascinating rather than irksome. The pictures also play an important part in this work.

McMurry, Frank M., and Parkins, A. E. Elementary geography. 1921. I 11376

G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. Putnam's handy map book; containing new maps of all countries of the world, accompanied by a new and comprehensive index of cities and towns, with 1920 population figures and a ready reference gazetteer-index. 1922. I 11375

BIOGRAPHY

Collective

American Academy of Arts and Letters, New York. In memoriam; a book of record concerning former members. 1922. C 19205

Beard, Annie E. S. Our foreign-born citizens, what they have done for America. 1922. C 19273

Admirably written biographical sketches. The book is worthy of wide distribution for the information it carries in brief form and for its incentive to our many foreign citizens.—Springfield Republican.

Wade, Mary H. Real Americans. 1922. C 20124

Contents: Theodore Roosevelt.—Herbert Clark Hoover.—Leonard Wood.—John Burroughs.—Mark Twain.—Edward Everett Hale.

Individual Biography

Burroughs, John, JOHNSON, CLIFTON. John Burroughs talks; his reminiscences and comments. 1922. C 21071

Much of the book is reminiscent, but there are also comments that run far afield into the realms of politics, religion, philosophy, science and literature.

De Morgan, William and Evelyn. STIRLING, A. M. W. William De Morgan and his wife. 1922. C 21565

A biography of unusual interest on several counts. It is written by the sister of Mrs. DeMorgan, a pre-Raphaelite artist, and besides giving a most satisfying report of DeMorgan's literary period, does full justice to his life work as inventor and England's greatest ceramic artist.

Longfellow, Ernest Wadsworth. Random memories. 1922. C 23032

An anecdotal record by the artist son of Henry W. Longfellow. In it he describes his impressions on art and literature, which verge unmistakably on the Victorian.

Mitchell, Donald G. DUNN, WALDO H. The life of Donald G. Mitchell, Ik Marvel. 1922. C 23407

Attaining distinction as an actor, practical farmer, landscape-gardener, art critic and author, Ik Marvel passed the greater part of his life in the retirement of Edgewood Farm near New Haven.

Morgenthau, Henry. All in a life-time. 1922. C 23476

The autobiography of the man who admirably filled the difficult post of American representative in Constantinople, 1914-1917.

Page, Walter H. HENDRICK, BURTON J. The life and letters of Walter H. Page. 1922. 2v. C 23665

This journalist, ambassador, and eminent student of government and of men, has given us in his letters at once a valuable and scholarly contribution to American letters, and an authoritative book on the great war.

Virgil. FRANK, TENNEY. Vergil, a biography. 1922. C 24700

Sensible research—first staff of criticism—has made it possible for Tenney Frank, in his compact, spare, fascinating Vergil to make the saint and wizard out a human being and a comprehensible artist.—Nation.

HISTORY

Europe

Carpenter, A. F. B. The blocking of Zeebrugge. 1922. A 7205

A complete and accurate account of a thrilling sea adventure, stirringly told by the leader of the expedition.

Cresson, W. P. The holy alliance; the European background of the Monroe doctrine. 1922. A 5975

(Publications of the Carnegie endowment for international peace.)

Elliot, Sir Henry G. Some revolutions and other diplomatic experiences. 1922. A 5978

The reminiscences have been compiled from a diary and private letters and give an account of various diplomatic experiences, beginning as attaché to the embassy at St. Petersburg in 1841 and continuing as minister to Naples, Athens, Turin and Constantinople, up to 1876.—Book Review Digest.

Gilliard, Pierre. Thirteen years at the Russian court; a personal record of the last years and death of the Czar Nicholas II. and his family. 1922. A 7875

It is a vivid record which has been written by a former tutor in the Czar's court. He knew Nicholas intimately and admired him, but mentions his lack of force. An interesting and authoritative account.

Gibbons, Herbert Adams. An introduction to world politics. 1922. A 5976

(The Century political science series.) Dr. Gibbons' book is notable for the thoroughness of its presentation and a scientifically objective attitude that makes intelligible the actions of Germany and others during the World War.—Bookman.

Mowrer, Edgar Ansel. Immortal Italy. 1922. A 5113

"A history of modern Italy from the formation of the United Kingdom in 1870, through the war, to a summary of present problems."—Booklist.

Zimmern, Alfred E. Europe in convalescence. 1922. A 5977

A discussion of political conditions in England from prewar times. The author feels the seriousness of the situation and believes that Europe's hope lies in the young men who have lived through the war and see things as they are.

United States

Burnham, Smith. The making of our country; a topical history of the American people. 1921. B 5565

Esarey, Logan. History of Indiana. 1922. B 8428

Hebard, Grace Raymond, and Brininstool, E. A. The Bozeman trail; historical accounts of the blazing of the overland routes into the northwest and the fights with Red Cloud's warriors. 1922. 2v. B 4582

Lathrop, Stanley Edwards. A historical sketch of the "Old Mission," and its missionaries to the Ojibway Indians, on Madeline Island, Lake Superior, Wisconsin. 1905. B 4689

Mace, William H., and Bogardus, Frank S. Mace-Bogardus history of the United States. 1921. B 5851

Van Tyne, Claude H. The causes of the war of independence; being the first volume of a history of the founding of the American republic. 1922. B 6016, 1

An impartial study in which the historian works from a psychological basis; and instead of writing from the viewpoint of the lovers or detractors of England today, he has succeeded in preserving a distinctly 18th century attitude.

FICTION

Andrews, Nelson. Finding youth; a human experience. 1922. F 10581

Having lost interest in life a man of sixty finds himself old and laid on the shelf. He suddenly braces up, takes a job and finds his life richer and fuller than it had ever been before.

Angellotti, Marion Polk. Three black bags. 1922. F 10578

A mystery story based on a plot to reinstate the German Emperor after the Armistice. "Written by an author with a real knack for the contriving and the working out of a tale of complications, adventures, perils," says the New York Times.

Austen, Jane. Love and freindship, and other early works now first published from the original ms. 1922. F 20066

Contents: Love and freindship.—Lesley Castle.—The history of England.—Collection of letters.—Scraps.

These precocious burlesques show us a youthful Jane Austen, differing in many ways from our old conception of her.

Belloc, Hilaire. The mercy of Allah. 1922. F 20364

An aged, profusely religious Mohammedan relates to his penniless nephews the daring exploits and shrewd graft by which he amassed his huge fortune. An unusual story told in a clever satirical vein.

Benson, E. F. Peter. 1922. F 20390

A story in which the author draws a striking contrast between the young people of England and their elders, much to the latter's disadvantage. The characterizations are well drawn in a delicate and finished style.

Bottoms, Phyllis. The kingfisher. 1922. F 20645

An ex-convict, befriended by a clergyman and sent to Cambridge, becomes a champion of labor, and falls in love with his employer's daughter. An entertaining story although rather drab in tone.

Boyle, C. Nina. What became of Mr. Desmond. 1922. F 20660

The unexpected disappearance of an eminently respectable father of a family and his equally unexpected appearance fifteen years later is the baffling mystery to be solved in this absorbing book.

Byrne, Donn. The wind bloweth. 1922. F 20830

Seven closely related episodes recounting the adventurous life of Shane Campbell in terms of the women who influenced him. They are told in "a style which paints wonderfully the atmospheres of far off colorful cities, and the moods of men's souls" (New York Tribune).

Christie, Agatha. The secret adversary. 1922. F 11952

A story of political intrigue and mystery that is unusually interesting. An ex-soldier and a clergyman's daughter advertise themselves as adventurers for hire. Their surprising experiences hold one breathless to the end.

Cobb, Irvin S. J. Poindexter, colored. 1922. F 21271

The amusing story told in dialect of his experiences in extricating his new young master from the difficulties into which he is continually getting while in New York.

Cohen, Octavus Roy. Assorted chocolates. 1922. F 21307

Contents: Noblesse obliged.—The evil lie.—Bird of prey.—The night-blooming serious.—Gravey.—Oft in the silly night.—H₂O boy.—Chocolate grudge.

Amusing stories of negro life in Birmingham, Alabama. Some of the same characters run through the book but the stories are independent.

Cournos, John. The wall. 1921. F 21376

The walls erected by social and economic conditions seem to keep happiness and success from the grasp of Gombarov, a young Russian whose life parallels the author's in many respects.

Cullum, Ridgwell. The man in the twilight. 1922. F 21411

A love story of the forest regions of northeastern Canada, centering around the rivalry between two wood-pulp mills of that region. "There's plenty of mystery, more action than a six-reel movie, and a lot of good entertaining talk, flavored with native humor" (New York Tribune).

Dart, Edith. Sareel. 1922. F 12284

Sareel is a workhouse girl whose love for the wild English moor is the one compensating touch of beauty in her miserable existence on a lonely moorland farm. "On the whole, a touching and winning story," says the New Republic.

Dickens, Charles. Barnaby Rudge. F 12486

"A reprint of the first ed., with the illustrations, and an introduction, biographical and bibliographical, by Charles Dickens the younger."

—Christmas books. F 12487

Contents: A Christmas carol.—The chimneys.—The cricket on the hearth.—The battle of life.—The haunted man and the ghost's bargain.

—Great expectations, and Hard times. F 12488

Deeping, Warwick. The house of adventure. 1922. F 21524

A deserter from the army finds himself in a devastated French town where he begins to reconstruct the shattered homes and slowly reorganize the life of the village. He overcomes many difficulties and victory is his.

Dos Passos, John. One man's initiation—1917. 1922. F 21684

One man's reaction to the war in a series of vivid, powerful descriptions. His impressions are saturated with the grimness and horror of it all, but portrayed with power and beauty.

Fairbank, Janet A. The Cortlandts of Washington square. 1922. F 12817

New York before and during the Civil War is the background for this good old-fashioned story of Anne Byrne and the three men who loved her.

Fitzgerald, F. Scott. Tales of the jazz age. 1922. F 22106

Contents: The jelly-bean.—The camel's back.—May day.—Porcelain and pink.—The diamond as big as the Ritz.—The curious case of Benjamin Button.—Targuin of Cheapside.—O russet witch!—The lees of happiness.—Mr. Icky.—Jemina.

Short stories and playlets of unequal merit. The New York Tribune calls the author "a prose artist of abundant, exuberant, irresponsible, and incorrigible talents."

Fletcher, J. S. The middle of things. 1922. F 22132

An English detective story of the present time in which the complications are ingeniously devised and furnish some tense dramatic moments.

Forman, Henry James. The man who lived in a shoe. 1922. F 22220

A bachelor, beloved by all, seems to have a mania for self-sacrifice. He gives up his freedom and comfort to care for his dead sister's children and just escapes giving up the girl he loves to his nephew.

Frazer, Elizabeth. The secret partner. 1922. F 22244

A mystery story in which the distinctly original plot is handled consistently and cleverly.

Goncourt, Edmond and Jules de. Germinie Lacerteux. 1922. F 22511

Hergesheimer, Joseph. The bright shawl. 1922. F 13703

The story of an American idealist who helped Cuba in her revolt from Spanish tyranny in the seventies. The life and romance of Havanna symbolized by the bright shawl of the Spanish dancer, La Clavel, are portrayed in Hergesheimer's best exotic vein.

Holland, Bryan T. A vagrant tune. 1922. F 14045

A sincerity, a genuineness of English village atmosphere and a delicate touch of humor here and there...No book could be more cheerful in tone, more different from the majority of modern novels.—Chicago Daily News.

Lincoln, Joseph C. Fair Harbor. 1922. F 24532

Cap'n Sears, a gruff, kindly ex-sailor, accepts the trying position as manager of a home for "Mariners' Women." The humorous complications of such a situation, the breezy salt water dialogue, and the living quality of the people make a story all Lincoln readers will enjoy.

Locke, William J. The tale of Triona. 1922. F 24574

Alexis Triona becomes enmeshed in a great tangle of lies which result in his down-fall. However he works himself up from the bottom and at last finds his true level.

Mansfield, Katherine. Bliss, and other stories. 1921. F 24954

Contents: Je ne parle pas français.—Bliss.—The wind blows.—Psychology.—Pictures.—The man without a temperament.—Mr. Reginald Peacock's day.—Sun and Moon.—Feuille d'album.—A dill pickle.—The little governess.—Revelations.—The escape.—Short, clever, rather cynical stories, hardly more than sketches. They cover but a short period in the lives of the characters, sometimes only one or two hours.

Maugham, W. Somerset. The making of a saint; a romance of mediæval Italy. 1922. F 25010

The story of a wandering fighter who has been exiled from his native province. There are feuds, adventure, and enough gore to satisfy the most bloodthirsty.

Oppenheim, E. Phillips. The evil shepherd. 1922. F 25764

A melodramatic mystery story with a London background. The hero is a criminal lawyer and the supposed villain proves to be otherwise.

Porter, Rebecca N. The Rest Hollow mystery. 1922. F 16508

A well told exciting mystery story based on a plot to withhold an estate from a young man who has lost his memory through shell-shock. He regains it and becomes involved in a series of adventures leading to a solution of the mystery.

Putnam, Nina Wilcox. Laughter limited. 1922. F 16704

Bonnie Delane, motion picture star, tells the story of her career in a humorous, slangy style.

Seymour, Beatrice Kean. Intrusion. 1922. F 17930

An English after-the-war novel in which Allan Suffield marries a beautiful girl without brains or morals. The interest is centered more in the character analysis than in plot.

Snaith, J. C. The Van Roon. 1922. F 18272

A mystery tale which centers about a valuable painting by the artist Van Roon. It has been missing for years, is discovered, and after much adventure finally restored.

Terhune, Albert Payson. Black Caesar's clan; a Florida mystery story. 1922. F 27747

The author of the dog stories has written a thrilling tale of old pirate land invaded by modern treasure hunters, in which a Collie and a Persian cat play important parts.

Tormay, Cécile. The old house; tr. from the Hungarian. 1922. F 27834

A sombre, tragic tale in which the past glory and present decay of the old house on the Danube symbolize the life of the family which it sheltered for so many years, and from which its associations were inseparable.

Towne, Charles Hanson. The chain. 1922. F 27841

Literary New York in the late '90s is charmingly depicted in this story which is a first novel by a well known editor and poet. The character sketching recalls Tarkington's method.

West, Rebecca. The judge. 1922. F 19198

As exquisitely written a piece of prose as one can imagine. The settings are Scotch and English, and the story sets forth the conflict between filial and marital love. The characterizations are excellent, especially of the women.

De Huff, Elizabeth Willis. Taytay's tales, collected and retold. 1922.

American Indian tales told in the words of the Indian grandfather and illustrated with unusual drawings by an Indian artist. The stories bear striking similarities to the folk lore of other countries, containing such beloved tales as Red Riding Hood and the Tar Baby in Indian settings.

Dunlop, Agnes, and Jones, Robinson G. Playtime stories. 1921.

Evarts, Hal G. Fur sign. 1922.

Two boys from the slums of the city undertake a trapping expedition which proves thoroughly successful. The book is primarily instructive and the explanation of the trapping of various animals will be of interest to boys.

Gregor, Elmer Russell. Three Sioux scouts. 1922.

The adventurous life of the three Sioux scouts including White Otter, the hero of one of the author's earlier books. The defeat of the Pawnees was accomplished under the leadership of these warriors.

Griffis, William Elliot. Korean fairy tales. 1922.

Myths and folk-lore of Korea.

Heyliger, William. Dan's to-morrow. 1922.

The seventeen-year-old owner of a factory and the son of the strike leader in the factory, spend a summer together in camp. Their various experiences teach them the necessity of union in action, a lesson which proves profitable to both boys.

Hyer, Frank S. The Laurel readers. 1917. 3v.

- v. 1. The Laurel primer.
2. The Laurel first reader.
3. The Laurel second reader.

Kempton, Kenneth Payson. Phantom gold. 1922.

An English cabin boy is stranded on this side of the Atlantic, and after many escapades, he ships on a boat whose captain is really a pirate. A very probable story. For boys from twelve to fourteen.

Lamb, Charles and Mary. Tales from Shakespeare, with numerous illustrations, by Louis Rhead. 1918.

Latham, Harold S. Jimmy Quigg, office boy. 1920.

Jimmy converts a band of strikers into a group of true citizens. The theme of Americanization inspires the book and is well worked out by the author.

Moore, Clement C. A visit from St. Nicholas. 1921.

The text of the poem is that of the original edition (1837). There are three woodcuts by Florence Wyman Ivins.

Orton, Helen Fuller. Bobby of Cloverfield Farm. 1922.

Bobby's adventures on the farm, and how Rover rescued Bobby from drowning. Useful for supplementary reading for primary grades.
